Anatomy of a CETA project gone wrong

By ELIZABETH McKINNON
of the Graphic staff

""Some, probably most, of the CETA projects undertaken by this and other cities are fairly successful. Here is Part 1 of a CETA project that failed.

Early last November, 11 men started working in a CETA (Comprehensive Employment and Training Act) public service job in Newton.

They were supposed to be working on "Brooks and Streams" Project No. 7285, which was designed to clean out some of Newton brooks and cut down overgrowth on their banks.

The project was to have been one of 16 funded by CETA, that in all would have employed 255 people and paid them about $1 million. Only four of these ever got off the ground because of objections from Local 800, the public works department union.

From the beginning — November, because of union problems — the project was a disaster.

The men never got boots or a clothing allowance, according to one of the participants in the program, although they were expected to work in and around water, and the weather by then was cold.

Although the CETA contract said the men would have to get to the job site on their own, it was never made clear to them that they would have to get to the middle of remote woods on their own. Most did not have a car.

From the beginning, the project was a disaster

Finally a city truck was used to take them from a designated point to the woods and pick them up later.

The foremen who were supposed to be supervising this crew were picked by then Public Works Commissioner Gene Larson from men completely unequipped to be foremen for the project.

One city official said Larson replied when asked why he had chosen the "foremen" he did. "I just wanted to show them they couldn't do it."

The "foremen" were paid extra to supervise the brooks-and-streams crew.

When work on the streams and brooks became impossible, the so-called foremen told the crew to hide out for the rest of the winter.

They were told to make footprints in the snow where they should have been working.

One of the participants in the program who had a car spent, he said, $40 a week on gasoline to keep the car running and the heater going while they were hiding behind Newton South High School.

Shortly after the program began, some of the men started not showing up for work, but they did not have time cards until near the end of their 22-week term, so their supervisors recorded their time as full time in most cases.

The state CETA office or the Newton Area CETA office apparently got wind of the hiding out some time before Christmas and paid a visit to the Newton South parking lot.

Thereafter, the men were transformed to a painting crew at the Auburndale Yard and then at the Elliot Street Yard.

Slipshod time recording continued until some time in February, when time cards were instituted.

Weekly wages before taxes for a full-time week were $177.60.

There is no evidence that the foremen received kickbacks in exchange for their kindnesses in marking the men in and out; but the opportunity existed with no check at all.

When time cards began, deductions for not working followed. CETA employees did not understand the procedure for docking some of their wages, which involved docking sometimes a week later because the foremen had filled out time cards before hours on the last work day of the previous week were completed. Errors in bookkeeping sometimes resulted in unjustified docking which would be paid back the next week.

Several men were often sent home early with, according to them, no explanation. The men sent home early happened to be almost always three black men. They felt that there was discrimination against them because they were black. The Personnel Department found that there was no discrimination.

The CETA brooks-and-streams crew was difficult from the beginning, whether because of a lack of proper supervision, a lack of real training, or just the men themselves.

For the most part they were untrained for any jobs; some had drug problems; some had alcohol problems.

Stories were told about threats they

Care to comment on what students need to know?

About 330 years after the state legislature required all towns to provide grammar school education, the State Board of Education decided to have all students in the state tested to determine if they have the skills needed for survival in society.

The Board of Education gave preliminary approval to the "Policy on Basic Skills Improvement" more than a month ago, and is soliciting public opinion on whether final approval should be given at the end of this month. .

By September 1980, all communities must test children in early elementary, late elementary, and secondary grades.

In the spring of this year all eighth graders in Newton were given the Basic Skills Assessment Test, which may be used to meet the state policy.

Director of Research and Planning Vincent Silluzio said this week, "Most kids seemed to enjoy taking them, as much as kids can enjoy taking tests."

The Department of Education is inviting citizens to comment on the policy before it is finally approved at its Aug. 29 meeting.

The policy makes it clear that there should not be any special programs set up within schools to satisfy the requirements. If the regular curriculum in a school does not teach basic skills, then it should be changed.

Furthermore, each school committee has some prerogative to set the standards for minimum competency. .

At the early and late elementary levels (no specific definitions of these levels are given), the school committe can set its own standards completely, but must be able to somehow test to see what percentage of students meet the standards.

At the secondary level, and no later than the beginning of grade nine, students must be tested to determine how many can meet the standards for mathematics and communications (speaking, writing, reading, and listening).

Minimum standards for these skills are expected to be issued in the fall after they are refined by the advisory committee which has been working on

Leash law change bites dust

The Legislation & Rules Committee Monday night denied a proposal to permit dogs off their leashes at night and in the early morning when accompanied by their owners.

The proposed ammendment to the present dog leash law was made by Gerald Small of West Newton. Small is not a dog owner.

Dogs need a chance to run, Small said. If they are allowed off their leashes from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. every evening and from 6 a.m. to 8 a.m. on Saturdays and Sundays, they will not hurt children, he said. . . ...

At those times, Small said, children are indoors. Those that are not, are probably old enough not to be frightened by dogs, he added.

While children may be off the streets at the suggested hours, joggers are not Howard Passman said. "I have been chased down Brookline Street by a German shepherd while jogging," Passman said.

In this city, many people put their trash out the night before their neighborhood's pick-up. Ald Paul Daley said. Hungry or curious dogs can easily throw open barrels, he said, and strew garbage all over the streets.

Even now, without a leash law amendment, this problem is occuring, Daley said. Some residents are so irrate, they even call Daley at 2 a.m. to register their complaints.

"A dog can get run over just as easily at 10 p.m. as during the day," Ald Wendell Bauckman said. To allow dogs to run loose at any time is dangerous, and therefore cruel , he added.

As a compromise, it was suggested dogs be allowed to run loose when accompanied by their owners. Small agreed. A playground might be a suitable running area, Passman said.

One Newton citizen has already pointed out that playgrounds are not the best places for dogs to run loose, Ald. Ethel Sheehan said. The dog feces present a health hazard to children, she said.

Police inspection rights limited by second hand dealers law

By LINDA FRITZ
Graphic Correspondent

In its draft of the revised ordinance for junk and secondhand dealers, the Legislation & Rules Committee Monday night limited the police's right to inspection.

The original draft allowed the police to examine all articles kept as the dealer's place of business as well as his financial books and records pertaining to his purchases, sales, and inventories. As revised, the ordinance would only allow the police to inspect articles displayed in plain view unless a search warrant is presented. This means a policeman cannot inspect a back room or storage area without permission unless he has a search warrant.

With all other types of business licenses, Sergeant Arthur Fryar said, the police have the right to inspect anywhere on the property. If he had information on a highjacked liquor truck, Fryar said, the liquor license ordinance would allow him to gain access to an establishment's storage area to inspect case numbers.

Without a search warrant, the police are limited to inspecting only what in in plain view, Ald Mark White said. "How difficult is it to get a search warrant ?" White said. asked.

"Getting a warrant is not easy," Fryar said. Almost ' as much evidence is necessary as is needed to convict a person, he said. If there is street information that a specific business is handling stolen merchandise, Fryar said, he wants to be able to look in the back room.

The right to investigate the entire premises is necessary to enforce the secondhand license requirement of filing weekly purchase reports with the police, Ald Donald Budge said. Only by allowing the investigation right can the police find out if a business is reporting what it should.

The Board of Aldermen can allow for police inspection of any item in plain view throughout a store, Assistant City Solicitor Susan Kurland said. The state's laws allow the police to take as they evidence anything inadvertently find in the investigation' Ms. Kurland said. Later, however, the

Tot lot at Albemarle first on Newtonville's upgrading plan

The Newtonville Advisory Committee has pinpointed sitting areas, parking lot greenery, a tot lot and shade trees at Albemarle Park, and hanging planters as its priorities for its community development program.

The city has allotted Newtonville in the 1979 fiscal year $10,000 in the federally funded community development budget. The money is to be used in developing plans. In the following two years, the village will have another $150,000 available to implement its program.

After several meetings, the advisory committee decided a tot lot at Albemarle Park must head its list of priorities. The playground has facilities for older children, but not for the younger ones, committee Chairman Margaret Hannigan said.

Money for a tot lot has been "knocked out" of the Recreation Department's budget a couple of times already, Mrs. Hannigan said. If it is to be built, it will have to be financed

Gifted students discuss their problems at special seminar

By RICHARD WILLIAMS
of the Graphic staff

Six Newton North High School students discussed the problems of being typecast as an elite minority with their teachers last month in an unusual conclusion to a week-long seminar on gifted children.

No new programs or federal grants are expected to result from the seminar sponsored by Boston University, but teachers will be more aware of the social and academic problems facing gifted children.

Complaints about poor teachingcame up throughout the two-hour discussion, but the major desire of the academically talented students seemed to be more chances to mix with other students.

Coping with the "stigma" of being bright was something all had experienced. One boy said the "put downs" by peers were most frequent in junior high school.

Student Jill Allen said, "There's nothing worse than a smart, musical, athlete."

Warren Junior High School guidance counselor Norman Hyett was very aware of the subgroups in the high school, eliciting smiles from the students when he referred to the "fags" and "greasers."

The gifted students are seen as fags, not meaning in school lingo homosexual, but people who exclude themselves from what others see as lively social and-or sexual activities.

Hyett said, "The greasers represent sex. . . If you want to know where the action is, and make out in the halls, then you don't go out with fags."

Social Studies teacher Justine Kent-Uritam added however that "fags catch up" socially later in their lives.

One girl student said, "As much as fags say they don't want to be greasers, they do. It's just not a part of what they want to do."

The gifted students feel they see enough of each other in their advanced classes, but would like to mix more with other types of studments.

Some do in homerooms, which are set up to be heterogeneous. One student found the Force 12 program, similar to Outward Bound, very helpful, but another said she hasn't been able to get into the program for the past three years.

Ms. Kent-Uritam took her classes on a trip to Newport, R.I., last year which most paid for out of their own pockets "were so happy" and "interacted so much" when they came back, the trip was worth it just in the social sense, aside from the historical value of it.

Before the meeting with students Friday, she was unaware of the social isolation of gifted students.

""Critique of classes

The only strong complaint about classes offered for advanced students was in the social studies . department, where tenth graders currently have a choice of only two classes.

One possible way of solving that problem may be by offering U.S. history to tenth graders.

One way of mixing with other students is by taking some technical-vocational classes, but a gifted student who takes one is hurting his class rank' because the class is not "worth" as much as a more challenging academic class.

One possible .solution to this problem may be offering the classes pass-fail, the teachers suggested.

Grading with different degrees of severity was another gripe of students, one who knew of a student who got two As for one semester's work, and two Cs the next semester from a different teacher for the same course.

English teacher Florine Borden said that every department head gets a print-out of all grades given out, and it should be his or her responsibility to supervise grading.

Poor teachers

Students told several stories of teachers who had unusual habits, or could not control the class, or could not teach the subject.

One student had the misfortune of two poor English teachers in a row. The first was described as a long-term substitute who assigned homework that could be done in two minutes, and the next teacher tried to force his writing style on the students. The closest the second teacher came to assigning classics to the tenth grade class was "Romeo and Juliet" and

St. Germain in Walpole for 'life'

""By EDWARD O'DONOGHUE

CAMBRIDGE—A 45-year-old Randolph man will spend the rest of his life in prison under a Superior Court sentence imposed upon him Tuesday for the murder of an elderly Newton couple 19 months ago.

An 11-man, one-woman jury at Middlesex Superior Court Monday evening found Carroll K. St. Germain guilty of two charges of murder in the first degree, two counts of assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon and one charge of armed assault in a dwelling.

The charges stemmed from the Dec. 28, 1976, killings of Attorney William Herbits, 82, and his wife, Julia, 72, in their home at 249 Commonwealth Ave., Chestnut Hill.

They had been beaten, stabbed and shot. Mrs. Herbits also suffered a fractured skull.

The jury returned its verdict after deliberating only four hours. The trial, presided over by Judge Thomas R. Morse Jr., had lasted three weeks.

Before the jury began its deliberations, Prosecutor J. William Codinha, in his closing argument, told the panel to consider the Herbitses' demise, "not a murder, but an execution."

Codinha's case against St. Germain was constructed around the testimony of Kevin LaMier, 17, a Dorchester youth who worked part-time for the defendant at the time of the murders.

St. Germain owned the Ashmont Lumber and Supply Co., on Dorchester Avenue in Dorchester.

LaMier told the jury that he accompanied St. Germain to the Herbits' home on the day in question to collect an overdue bill, as the defendant forced his way at gunpoint into the single-family house.

The witness testified he remained in the house until St. Germain began to tie up the elderly couple. He said the defendant then told him to wait outside.

LaMier testified he noticed blood on St. Germain's gloves and jacket when the latter joined him 15 minutes later.

Prosecutor Codinha also presented evidence that St. Germain had told an associate he was planning to kill "an old couple in Newton" at least two weeks before the Herbits murders.

While the prosecutor presented testimony and tangible evidence that St. Germain sought to collect $200 from Herbits, Codinha implied that the defendant was in some way involved in a $50,000 fire damage fraud allegedly perpetrated against the Newton couple in late 1976.

At the time of the Herbitses' deaths, civil and criminal court actions were pending against Boston Attorney Milton Goodman in connection with his alleged forgery of Mrs. Herbits' signature on two fire insurance checks.

The criminal case against Goodman was called for hearing in South Boston District Court on Dec. 22, 1976—six days before the murders.

St. Germain spent the day in the district court waiting to be called as a witness for Goodman.

The proceeding was recessed until after the first of the year, but was never reconvened because of the Herbitses' deaths.

While little information concerning the Goodman cases was permitted as evidence during St. Germain's trial, Codinha, in his closing argument, said, "There was a motive as to why (the Herbitses) were executed. It was because of their involvement in the fire insurance fraud case."

Defense Attorney Alfred P. Farese attempted, through the testimony of a half-dozen of the defendant's relatives, to prove St. Germain was elsewhere the day of the Herbits' killings.

The jury began its deliberations at 4 p.m. Monday, and returned its verdict at 8 p.m.

Judge Morse put off sentencing until Tuesday morning.

He imposed a term of "life" on St. Germain for the murder of Atty. Herbits and added a second "life" term for the murder of Mrs. Herbits.

He imposed a concurrent "life" term for the armed assault conviction and two concurrent nine-to-10-year terms for the assault and battery convictions.

St. Germain was taken immediately to Walpole Prison to begin his sentence. Because of the back-to-back life sentences, he will not be eligible for parole.

His convictions are automatically appealed to the state Supreme Judicial Court.

CETA outreach to elderly reaches 400 in six months

More than 400 elderly people have been brought into contact with city and state agencies by a CETA-funded8program of the the Newton Human Services Department during the first six and one-half months of the program.

The program, Resource Mobilization for Senior Citizens, is funded through October. After that time, Mayor Theodore Mann believes the Department of Human Services can carry the caseload by itself.

To find senior citizens in need of services, eight outreach workers were assigned to the various villages of Newton. The outreach workers spoke before community groups to introduce and promote the project, and visited elderly people in their homes.

In some instances only one or two meetings were necessary to solve a particular problem, but in many cases the clients have needed the outreach services on a continuing basis.

Of the 408 clients served, 163 were taken care of by referral to one or more city, state, or private agencies.

Not all the clients were found by the Human Services Department. Some 155 were referred to the department by other agencies or city departments.

The outreach workers have found that problems of the elderly often compound, with several interrelated difficulties.

For example, a composite case example given by the Department of Human Services is of a man who had had to retire because of medical disability. During the six-month wait after filing a disability claim, he had no income, and ran out of money, and food and owed several months' back rent.

The outreach worker was able to get Mr. X food stamps immediately and general relief funds from the state until Social Security disability benefits started.

In addition, the city's Cousens Fund was tapped for the back rent and Mr. X was put on the Housing Services Commission list for rent subsidy, which he now receives.

His emotional status improved as his financial situation improved, and he has begun going to the senior drop-in center.

Transportation is the most frequent pressing problem, followed by financial need and a feeling of loneliness and isolation.

The outreach workers called on 52 agencies to help solve the entire spectrum of problems of the elderly people reached.

Their needs included finacial assistance, legal advice, treatment or counseling for alcoholism, homemaker service, Social Security, nursing home placement, housing, transportation, and recreation.

The total cost of the program for the first six and one-half months was $51,000, but the outreach workers have been able to generate almost twice that amount in additional income or services for their clients, money to which the senior citizens are entitled.

Besides a monetary return, the outreach workers signed their clients up for services such as free snow shoveling and homemaker assistance for which no dollar amount could be determined.

Auxiliary fire department will help during disasters

An auxiliary fire department is in the works for the City of Newton with volunteer men and women being trained to operate specialized equipment during disasters.

Fire Chief Harvey Preble welcomes the efforts of Civil Defense Director Jay Moskow to organize volunteers to drive a spare fire engine, to operate the Civil Defense8Rescue truck, and to (CD) convert an Army surplus truck into a lighting plant.

CD Director Moskow said the city recently acquired two vehicles from the Army. One has a Geiger counter on it in case of a nuclear emergency, and that truck is being used by the Water Department unless needed for civil defense.

The other vehicle is a ¾ ton 1953 canvas top truck that has been sanded by the seven or so current members of the auxiliary force, and is awaiting a paint job by the city.

That truck will be equipped with electrical generators and lights to be used at large fires, hurricanes, , storms, and floods.

Chief Preble hopes there will be between 12 and 16 members of the auxiliary fire department.

Persons interested in joining the auxiliary department can call the Civil Defense office at City Hall, 552-7119.

Sample ballot

The Legislation & Rules Committee discussed Monday night sending voters a sample ballot prior to city elections.

If such a ballot is ever sent, it will not be small. It will include the names of all candiates for aldermen, names of those running for school committee, and several ballot questions. It might be so imposing that it might discourage some potential voters, Ald. Ethel Sheehan said. Mrs. Sheehan has in the past presented proposals to reduce the size of the Board of Aldermen.

There are 27,500 households in the city and 50,000 registered voters, said Election Commission Executive Secretary Alan Licarie. A mailing could cost between several hundred dollars and several thousand, he said.

About 50 per cent of the electorate turn out for city elections, Licarie said. That percentage is very good, especially for a bedroom community such as Newton.

If sending out a sample ballot would raise voter turnout by even one per cent, Ald Susan Schur said she would support it. Presently the elections are only advertised through the newspapers, she said.

There are now five weeks between preliminary and final elections, Licarie said. To send out a sample ballot six weeks would be needed, he said.

Licarie was asked to break down the time and cost for sending out sample ballots. The committee also needs other suggestions for informing the electorate of impending elections, Mrs. Schur said.

Six charged with trespassing

Six Newton men were charged with trespassing at the Waban MBTA station shortly after midnight Monday.

According to police, Officers Gregory Wright and James Rogers had previously told the men not to loiter at the trolley station. The officers saw trolleys go by in both directions and arrested the men.

Charged with trespassing were Daniel E. Shir, 20, of 40 Nehoiden Rd., James L. Hart, 20, of 463 Waban Ave., and James J. Galvin, 22, of 917 Chestnut St., all of Waban.

Also charged were Robert W. Simmonds, 24, of 1241 Walnut St., Newton Highlands; James G. Walsh, 24, of 7 Bonwood St., Newtonville; and Michael G. Sementelli, 25, of 2142 Commonwealth Ave., Auburndale.

Plan to limit taxes aired in committee

By LINDA FRITZ
Graphic Correspondent

Sobered by California's passage of Proposition 13, the Legislation & Rules Committee heard Monday night a plan to limit taxes to a fixed percentage of the assessed value.

Ald Robert Stiller proposed limiting property taxes to 17.5 per cent of real and personal property value. If revaluation is ever ordered, Stiller suggested a rate cap of 5.4 percent.

By placing such limits, the city would have to work backwards in planning its budget, Stiller said. First it would have to look at what it could raise, he said. Then it would have to tailor its budget accordingly. Under the present system, Stiller said, a budget is devised and then the tax rate is set to pay for the approved items.

Stiller claims his tax plan is not a Proposition 13, which required drastic cuts in services. It will just place a limitation on spending, he said. If initiated, Stiller claims his tax plan will save $1.5 million by fiscal year 1980.

The budget is already quite tight, Ald Ethel Sheehan said. She said she has recently seen at least two instances in which the Board of Aldermen lopped off too much money

The board is always subjected to pressure groups, Stiller said. "It'salways easier to say 'yes' than 'no'." If the public were asked if it would like to hold down city spending, it would support the idea, Stiller said.

A recent survey showed people want to cut spending, but are unwilling to give up services, Ald. Susan Schur noted. All it is willing to cut are recreation items, she said. Recreation certainly will not trim $1.5 million from the budget, Mrs. Schur said.

Rather than using fixed percentages to cut taxes, Ald subject Terry Morris said the should be approached by limiting services. Discontinuing curbside trash pick up, he said, would clearly reduce taxes. It is a route many cities and towns are already taking, Morris said.

With Stiller's plan, Morris said, the Board would have less control over the budget. The plan calls for the mayor alone devising the budget given a specified amount of money. The plan would also not cover the school system because the School Committee has complete autonomy over its budget.

It would be worthwhile to know what the public thinks of the tax plan, Stiller said. He suggested holding a public meeting on the matter.

A referendum might be a better way to measure the public's opinion, Morris said.

The tax plan was tabled for future discussion. It was also referred to Finance Committee.

New school aid formula helps city—this year

By RICHARD WILLIAMS
of the Graphic staff

Newton will recieve $321,025 more in state aid for education this year, but just one of Newton's delegates to Beacon Hill favors the formula which will give Newton the additional money.

The new formula is based on the number of students in various school programs instead of the total assessed value of property in cities and towns.

Sen. Jack Backman, who voted for the formula, said it is important to eliminate the dependence on local property tax assessments from the formula, due to court findings in four states that such ties were unconstitutional. There are two suits pending in this state challenging the state formula.

Opponents of the new plan argue that Newton only receives more money this year because of a "hold harmless" clause which guarantees that each community will receive 107 percent of what it received last year.

Without this protective clause, the mayor's financial assistant estimates that Newton's school aid would drop from about $4.9 million to $107'000.

As Sen. Backman said, "The formula is more fair to the core and poor cities in the Commonwealth" than the old formula.

But even Backman is surprised at the final formula worked out by the conference committee after the House and Senate passed different state aid packages.

Originally the Senate version of the formula included a hold harmless clause that assured each town of 115 percent of what it received last year, but this was cut in conference committee to 107 percent.

Backman, when reached Wednesday morning, did not know where the extra money will go.

The total state aid package for education is $633 million, which was sufficient for the 115 percent hold harmless clause. But when clause was changed was reduced to 107 percent by the conference committee, where did the extra money go?

School Committee member Alvin Mandell thinks there is a slush fund. He has been critical of the formula since it was first proposed.

The final figure on what the total state aid to Newton will be has not yet been determined. City officials thought the tell-all "cherry sheet" would be in last week.

Harvard energy plant gets Newton hearing

Opponents of the energy plant being built in Roxbury by Harvard University have so far gotten little help from Newton.

A resolution against construction of the Medical Area Total Energy Plant (MATEP), which opponents say will spew out poisonous nitrogen oxides over the Newton and Brookline area, has not been voted on by the aldermanic Public Health & Safety Committee.

Another meeting may be necessary, according to Chairman Mark White.

Proponents and opponents have appeared before the committee at separate times because of a clerical error in notification.

MATEP is under construction now, despite a ruling from the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) against the plant's six large diesel engines. Harvard has appealed that ruling to the state Superior Court8. and is proceeding with construction.

The $110 million plant is designed to serve 11 hospitals and medical centers in Boston.

Nitrogen oxide emissions from the plant are expected to be within levels allowable by the federal Environmental Protection Agency and the World Health Organization, according to proponents of MATEP.

Opponents say that emissions will be dangerous to children, old people, and those with lung diseases.

The DEQE decision against allowing the plant to proceed said standards for nitrogen oxides are inadequate, and that short-term standards must be developed.

A Harvard School of Public Health professor, Stanley Dawson, opposed construction of the plant, as did State Sen. Jack Backman of Brookline-Newton.

Giving birth to a problem

The birth in Britain of a "test tube baby" is raising new ethical, moral and scientific questions. The controversy may make the continuing conflict over abortion look mild.

The Lesley Browns were unable to conceive a child naturally for medical reasons. An ovum from Mrs. Brown was fertilized by sperm from Mr. Brown and the fertilized ovum was then replanted in Mrs. Brown's uterus. From all monitoring the baby is normal. The experiment certainly offers new hopes to some couples who are unable to have children. It also opens the door to all sorts of exploiters, shennanigans and heartbreaks.

Such a case is going on in Florida. A couple at Fort Lauderdale had attempted the same procedure which apparently has been successful for the Browns. The ovum was fertilized. But an obstetrician destroyed the embryo, without the parents' permission, arguing that the process of embryo transplant has not yet reached a state so that the health of the infant could be reasonably assured. A suit by the donators of the eggs and sperm charges that jealousy between doctors caused one to destroy the work of the other. One defense lawyer says, "it was a quest for glory." Another warned that, "we're really talking about genetic manipulation." The prospective mother simply says, "I just wanted my baby," and is asking $1.5 million in damages.

Meanwhile the British Parliment is getting ready to debate the issue. There has been a call for strict controls on such experimentation. It has been pointed out that scientifically not only may sperm banks be available for women with sterile husbands but that frozen embryos, ready for implanting, could go on the market.

Power can intoxicate

Rank has its privileges, according to the old saw. But it also has its responsibilities and that appeared to be missing in the case of Dr. Peter Bourne and a prescription he wrote for an aide.

Dr. Bourne is head of President Carter's agency fighting drug abuse. As a psychiatrist he was within the law in writing a prescription for the restricted tranquilizing drug, quaalude, for a White House employee. He has written other prescriptions for other employees. This may not be exactly why he was hired but it is legal enough.

But in the case in question he used a fictitious name instead of the aide's real one. When a friend of the woman tried to fill the prescription, she was arrested. Bourne explains that the false name was used to protect the identity of the employee and that "what I have done is neither legally nor morally wrong."

But why should a White H ouse employee, in need of a strong tranquilizing drug, rate anonymity any more than any other American?

Kevin Harrington's last maneuver

Analysis by James R. Dorsey, UPI state house correspondent

BOSTON (UPI) — If he could write the editorials, Kevin B. Harrington of Salem says he'd describe his eight years as president of the Massachusetts Senate as "brilliance without blemish; open government openly arrived at."

With that bit of whimsy aside, Harrington admitted Monday that's not likely to happen but hoped he would be remembered as "someone who tried to impose a degree of civility on the Senate that sometime's been interpreted as rigid discipline."

Quoting President Eisenhower as he was about to leave office in 1961, Harrington said he wished he had his political career to live over again.

His career as president, begun in January 1971, came to an end with the same kind of behind-the-scene maneuvering which highlighted many of the deliberations of the Senate during his stewardship.

Harrington said he suggested to Senate Majority Leader William M. Bulger, D-Boston, last week that the presidency change hands Monday during the special session. Thus it would give Bulger five months to get used to the job and, by inference, give him another leg up over his competition in January, Sen. Stanley J. Zarod, D-Springfield.

Bulger, at first reluctant, agreed and by the time the Senate Democrats caucused in Harrington office the decision was etched in stone. Although he was in the Statehouse, Zarod didn't attend the meeting, claiming he didn't know the presidency was going to be discussed. He didn't attend the Senate session either or participate in the vote.

It was Harrington's first wide ranging news conference since last year, before his name was linked to an illegal $2,000 corporate campaign contribution from McKee-Berger-Mansueto that killed his nascent hopes of running for governor. He attacked advocacy groups and Gov. Michael S. Dukakis' energy program, and said the matter of removing suspended Superior Court Chief Justice Robert M. Bonin should not be before the Legislature.

Of Dukakis, about whom Harrington said in 1974 would "either be the best governor in Massachusetts history or a disaster," Harrington had very little to say.

As for his plans, Harrington said "I know what I'm going to do but I'm not prepared to say publicly." He said would leave the Senate "as the leaves begin to fall" for a job in private business, "giving advice and getting paid." He said he would not be a lobbyist.

Often described as sympathetic to the desires of big business, especially the state's utilities, and a close personal friend of its chief lobbyist, Thomas M. Joyce, Harrington offered a stirring defense of development of so-called "hard energy" — nuclear, electric or goal-generated power.

"They've got an advocacy group for anything and against anything," Harrington said. "The establishment is always wrong; banks are always wrong; utilities are always wrong; organized religion is always wrong; education is always wrong."

Energy, which he said was "the absolute number one problem for an industrial state like Massachusetts," was not be being addressed by the Dukakis administration.

All of the energy programs proposed by Dukakis — solar, wind, hydroelectric — "combined could not light the chandelier in this office," he said.

Without an energy policy that considered additional nuclear power plants or allowed electricity to be generated by coal, he predicted "brown-outs" by 1981 and "then you'll see industry move out."

Regarding Bonin, Harrington said he wished the Supreme Judicial Court, which censured and suspended him for improprieties, "had decided it on a black and white basis."

"Now, unfortunately, it's before a political tribunal, not a legal tribunal. It should not be before us," he added.

Harrington departing for the last time as Senate president

Trying to find out who's in charge

By RICHARD BULLWINKLE

One of the oddities of contemporary American lifestyle is having more of everything but liking it a lot less.

We hesitate to crack the front page of any newspaper or to watch the dreary sameness of our favorite television news shows because of the negative quality of what is happening in the world today.

The materialistic attitude of "what's in it for me" even permeates the basic human concept of having a child.

Putting aside the great technical strides made in medical technology culminating in the birth of test tube baby Louise and the great joy of being able to have their own child in a new, pioneering fashion, we learn that the prospective parents had the London daily newspapers in a bidding war for the exclusive rights to their "story."

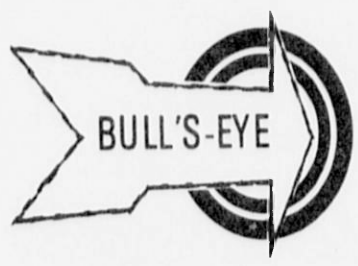

There seems to be a constant erosion of values, once held in esteem by many, slowly melting away, not to be replaced by anything.

No doubt, part of the answer is the instant, communications link to the public with all forms the media and their voracious appetites requiring constant replenishment or variety to feed an expectant public.

A sampling of most daily newspapers will find the chief justice of the Superior Courts, under censure by his colleagues and given a "no" vote of confidence, fighting to maintain his position in the face of overwhelming public opinion in opposition.

Legal and political niceties to the background, would public confidence in the judiciary system have been restored by his continuance in office?

This judge may have forgotten that like "Caesar's wife" appearances as well as the fact of being above reproach are critical.

The slow motion ballet between the insurance industry and Insurance Commissioner Stone will commence shortly.

Commissioner Stone has done more for consumer advocacy by facing insurance rates head on and by using his "insurance smarts" and the power of his office to keep the lid on the cost of insurance to the Massachusetts motoring public. That doesn't prevent the insurance industry from seeking an additional $162 million.

Locally, Mayor Mann says the pumper problem is entirely in Chief Prebles hands.

He happens to be wrong on at least two counts. One is that the mayor created the problem by underfunding the requirements of the Fire Department in terms of manpower and the timely acquisition of personnel and the deliberate reduction of overtime funds.

Two, he is the executive leader of the City of Newton and what is required here is leadership, not hiding behind the issue of a letter from the chief but rather serving the needs of one-third of the population in the northwest quadrant of the city.

I do not remember his mentioning this drastic reduction in service while running last year.

The real point is confidence and stability of our government and institutions.

Whether it is the government's apparent inability to deal with inflation (the yen versus the dollar - who won the war?), the real question is who is in charge and how are they dealing with the problems?

Is it so big and has it become so cumbersome that nobody really has a handle on it?

Who's in charge?

Tax break for rich gaining on Carter

Commentary by Gus Tyler national columnist

NEW YORK – S. 3065 is the title of a Senate bill that addresses itself to all those little guys who realize a small capital gain on the sale of a house, a piece of real estate or a few stocks. The backers of the legislation give the impression that such income will get a real tax break.

Coming at a time when there is a widespread revolt against taxes — all taxes — the proposal has caught on and is picking up votes in Congress. The Administration is distressed by the turn of events.

When Carter campaigned, he said that our federal tax system was a disgrace — the rich were escaping their share of the burden and were unloading the cost of government onto the backs of the middle class. Hence, the president-to-be proposed drastic tax reform.

One of his targets was the capital gains tax. Under present law, income drawn from capital gains gets a real break. If you make $10,000 by sweating away at your job, your full income is taxed; if you make the same sum through capital gains, only half your income is taxed.

For a variety of reasons, however, Carter withdrew his plan to undisgrace our tax system. He decided to leave well enough alone — as bad as it was.

But now he finds that he must fight a tough battle just to hold onto what is, because there are several bills before Congress — most prominently S 3065 — proposing to give capital gains income an extra-special break for some people.

As presented, the bill's backers give the impression that any capital gain — the sale of a house, livestock, real estate, or a stock — will benefit from the new law. To get the record straight, Carter had his Secretary of the Treasury Michael Blumenthal appear before a Senate Finance Commlttee. "The bill is not a general measure to reduce capital gains for everyone," Blumenthal testified. "Rather it aims to reduce the capital gain rate for the highest-income individuals."

Here's the way the bill would affect different income groups in the United States:

People making less than $15,000 a year will enjoy an average tax reduction of 12 cents a year; those making between $15,000 and $20,000 will get a break of 25 cents a year; those making between $20,000 and $30,000 will save one dollar a year; those making between $30,000 and $50,000 will come out $11 ahead. But those making between a half million and a million will save an average of $21,500 per taxpayer and those making more than a million will reap a rich harvest of $145,302 per taxpayer.

"This is, in truth, a millionaire's relief bill," concluded Blumenthal, "and I mean income millionaires, whose assets are usually many times greater than that."

An "income" millionaire is somebody who has an income of a million dollars or more in any year. There are about 3,000 of these individuals in the country. Although they make up less than one-hundredth of the taxpayers in the land, they will pick up about half the total benefits of this tax cut.

The great irony about this bill is that it is supported by middle-income people so eager to back any cut that they are even ready to go along with one that will cut their own throats.

Imagination

To the Editor:

Not being able to use parking lots, parks and other areas as a meeting place is a frustrating experience for our teenagers.

It is also an added problem for our police officers who act on calls from irate citizens complaining of noise, drinking and vandalism.

Solutions are not easy as to come by, as many of them involve monies which are not readily available. In view of the short finances, our only alternative is in service by volunteers.

Next in line is the need for ideas for programs which will channel youthful energies into constructive as well as entertaining activities.

Our youth should be part of any volunteer movement. They also should be willing to use their imaginations and come up with concrete suggestions which will be compatible with known necessities.

Richard F. Hay,
West Newton

Affirmative Action

To the Editor:

I am slightly disturbed by the behavior of School Committee member Mrs. Kathy Jones after reading your front page article, "Jones Decries Lack of Affirmative Action in Hiring," in the July 13 issue.

As a 1977 graduate of Newton North High School and a member of Riley House, I witnessed Mr. Fraktman's actions. He was certainly respected by the faculty and students, and I found him to be an honest and fair man and a dependable and competent administrator.

I was more than pleased when he was selected as the new principal of Day Junior High School. Since Mr. Harrington and Mr. Colb were also selected by the School Committee for the offices of principal of Zervas School and assistant superintendent of program, I am confident they are also qualified for their new positions.

According to the article, Mrs. Jones voted against all three men claiming she could not both support affirmative action and vote for any of the three men.

I find this attitude very irrational.

It occurs to me that Mrs. Jones is saying that any candidate who is not a minority is not worth considering and that she was not concerned with the superior credentials of the three men because they are white.

My question for Mrs. Jones is if she thinks any white males are entitled to any positions, Mrs. Jones should regard the qualifications, not the color of the people.

Before Mrs. Jones continues to vote for people as the University of California Medical School used to select students (Bakke Case), I suggest she approach the situation in a more reasonable and professional manner.

Remember, quality is more important than quantity!

Eric Carlson,
West Newton

Underwood renovation

To the Editor:

The Underwood renovation proposal must be judged on its own merits, rather than in response to the strong emotions created by recent events.

We believe that critical examination of the facts underlying the proposal supports renvovation for the following reasons:

—Demographic studies show a continuting need for an elementary school in the area.

—Consolidation is not feasible because nearby schools will not be able to absorb the Underwood population.

—Busing the children to distant schools will be more costly to taxpayers in the long run.

—The Underwood plan incorporates normal school maintenance deferred the past seven years in anticipation of renovation.

—Certain minimum standards must be met in all schools. This proposal will merely bring Underwood into compliance with those requirements.

For these reasons we feel that this proposal is consistent with the city's educational goals and fiscal restraints. As such, it deserves continued support.

Jane and Arthur Siegel,
Newton

Reuse of Weeks

To the Editor:

We suggest that Weeks Junior High School be considered for a Human Service Center which would include offices for a variety of human service agencies such as welfare, mental health, Office for Children, Newton's Department of Human Services, outreach offices for the Newton Guidance Clinic etc.

Most of these agencies are currently paying rent and would surely continue to do so. Additionally, a site as large as Weeks could house a day care-after school c8enter and a drop-in center for the elderly.

The location makes this site most appropriate for such use, and we feel strongly that in closing schools, the city must not lose sight of the human needs of its citizens.

A central location for such services would do much to enhance the service delivery system in the city.

Sandy Tannenbaum,
Council for Children

Thanks for help

To the Editor:

During the week of July 16 the Newton Recreation Department held its annual carnival week to benefit various charities.

Each playground in the city ran its own carnival under the supervision of the recreation leaders.

The Upper Falls and Emerson playgrounds would like to thank the following stores for donating gifts and prizes for the carnival. Without their help, our carnival would not have been the success it was.

Thank you to: Quality Market, Panellas Market, Rhodes Pharmacy, Waban Hardware, U-Frame-It, Waban News, Star Kosher Meat Market, Pat Wuzzi of Mobil Four Corners, A&P, The Tree House, Woolworth's, Bill's House of Pizza, Newton Centre Music Shop.

We really apprieciate your help!

CETA project

had made against their foremen, such as holding a piece of broken glass up to the throat of one.

Michael Kuklinski of the Public Works Department, who is an industrial engineer but was assigned the task of keeping the CETA public works payroll, blamed both the absence of planning for the CETA projects and the city's union problems, difficult transportation, and the foremen for the failure of the brooks-and-streams project.

"If all the projects had gotten started," Kuklinski said, "there would have had to be a separate CETA department."

A major flaw in the CETA programs, Kuklinski and Acting Public Works Director Charles Thomas both said, is the failure of CETA to provide for hiring CETA foremen to supervise CETA projects.

Kuklinski himself had been a CETA administrator-coordinator at a CETA project in Saugus. There the city made up the difference between the $10,000 maximum allowed as salary by CETA and a realistic administrator's salary.

Students

the policy for two years.

Director Silluzio said that the tests given to Newton students this year have not been evaluated, since there are no standards for "passing" or "failing."

The proposed policy calls for public participation in establishing the minimum standards, and students must be included in deciding on standards for the secondary level.

Silluzio said the new assistant superintendent for program, Norman Colb, will probably be meeting with him and faculty in the fall to set standards for . the tests Newton gave to the previous eighth grade and will give to the next eighth grade class.

The minimum standards are not designed to establish new conditions for promotion or graduation, which are policies of school committees.

Students who receive special education instruction under Chapter 766 and those involved in bilingual education will not be included in determining the percentage of students in a school system who need remedial help to meet the minimum standards.

Those wishing to comment on the policy can write to Les May, staff coordinator, Policy on Basic Skills Improvement, Department of Education, 31 St. James Ave., Boston, 02116.

Inspection

police must prove the inadvertency, she added.

The committee voted to delete the right to investigate the entire premises.

Perhaps the committee members can find a middle ground, Mrs. Schur said. She suggested they work out a way to allow investigations limited by function and purpose without hurting the dealers' civil rights.

Despite the vote , many secondhand dealers attending the meeting were unhappy. Allowing police to search without a warrant treats the dealers as guilty and forces to them to prove their innocence , said Emanuel R. Goldman of At Fare Exchange.

Goldman wrote an alternative ordinance, which he and other dealers would prefer . It would require dealers to keep purchase records. Police would only have access to them if they presented the dealer with "just cause" or a warrant. People who sell in their homes or who have regular garage sales are not required to be licensed, said Greta Sones, a secondhand dealer from Chestnut Street. They are also dealers, she said, and should be required to obtain a license and follow the ordinance. .

These people are covered by the ordinance, said Mrs. Schur. Enforcement is a police matter, she added. .

The police are trying to find these underground dealers, Fryar said. By checking local papers for sales against a list of licensees, Fryar said he is trying to discover who these dealers are.

Some dealers in the city are decorators who sell antique accessories, said Bea Greenhood, whose shop is on Chestnut Street. They should also be included in the ordinance

. as should Bloomingdales.

Naomi Storm, owner of Around the Corner Antiques, called for requiring permits for those who have garage sales more than three times a year. "Through them (those who run frequent yard sales) a lot of stolen goods are coming and going," she said.

Placing restrictions on garage sales should be dealt with separately, Mrs. Schur said. An attempt was made last year to regulate them, but it was defeated, she said.

The ordinance was passed by the committee with a few changes including the limited search.

The secondhand and antique dealers would like to do away with all licensing, two aldermen said after the meeting. They would like to avoid keeping any records, which the internal revenue might later use to trace unreported sales, one of the aldermen said.

Seminar

"The Loneliness of a Long Distance Runner."

One girl had a ninth grade English teacher who said he was "finding himself" and for one day each week he would not talk to students. Everything had to be written on the board or on paper notes.

"It was a selfish thing" the student said.

When one girl complained about a math class with 30 students in which the teacher never collected homework, Ms. Borden turned the complaint back to the student and asked what she did to make the class better.

The girl said the class was undisciplined, and whenever she tried to talk, other students would talk and the teacher would not hear her.

Another student had an English teacher who apparently felt guilty about not taking students on field trips, so the class was allowed to go to every film shown in the activity hall.

""Evaluation

The Newton North teachers and the other 15 teachers from Newton schools in the seminar will go back to their schools in the fall and meet with other faculty members to discuss what they learned.

David Ackerman, the administrative assistant to the assistant superintendent for program, said after the program, "We are looking at these kids as having real needs' realizing that not everything takes care of itself because they are bright."

Ackerman said the School Department has no clearcut definition of a gifted student, and no minimum I.Q. rating for such a grouping.

However a recent informal survey of students with an I.Q. of 130 or better found that the students were very involved in the top courses of the school, and also in extra-curricular activities.

Permissive sex habits spread genital herpes

SEATTLE (UPI) — Like thousands of others, Norman is trying to forget his disease while he waits for someone to develop a cure.

"It looks like I'm a guinea pig until they come up with one," said Norman, a 31-yearold aerospace worker. "But you can't just sit around and worry about it. That doesn't do anyone any good."

Norman has genital herpes, a sexually transmitted virus that until a few years ago was a little-known venereal disease unfamiliar to many doctors.

Now it is spreading fast through the young population. Scientists believe herpes may be linked to cervical cancer, and as interest in the disease has increased, so has government funding for research.

Genital herpes is viewed as an epidemic from the University of Washington, where researchers painstakingly sift through the medical evidence for clues that may lead to a cure.

Norman and many other victims of the disease have found their way to the university's 4-year-old herpes clinic at Harborview Medical Center. It is one of the few clinics in the country devoted solely to the research and treatment of genital herpes.

There, hundreds of persons every month eagerly submit to experimental treatment techniques and drugs in the hope they can contribute to the efforts of the researchers.

Dr. Lawrence Corey, head of the clinic and of the university's virology department, said herpes has spread rapidly in recent years due to increased sexual activity among the young.

"It's a young person's disease," Corey said. "And it can only keep increasing in incidence. There's no question that people have more sexual partners today. Herpes is the one disease that will keep venereologists monogamous."

Herpes was named from the Greek word for "creep" or "crawl." When it first infects its victims, the herpes simplex virus causes a series of painful sores in the genital area, often accompanied by symptoms akin to a bad flu. The sores generally are more painful for women than for men.

After about three weeks, the infection clears up. But the virus only retreats and lies dormant near nerve endings. It usually strikes again at varying intervals year after year, although the recurrances generally are much milder and of shorter duration than the first bout.

Nothing known to medical science will kill the virus in the victim's body and there is no known effective treatment for the disease. In some cases, certain drugs and techniques such as exposure to ultraviolet light under care of a physician have been said to speed healing and reduce pain, but these measures still are experimental.

Currently, there is no way to predict why, when or how often the infection will return and the victim remains extremely contagious during each recurrance.

Corey said he believes genital herpes is far more widespread than government figures indicate. He said the estimate of one case of herpes to every 10 of gonorrhea is "malarky" and believes there are many more than the estimated 300,000 new cases of the disease a year.

"There's really no way to get a handle on it," he said. "But at the UW I see five cases of herpes to every one of gonorrhea. It all depends on the type of patient population you're monitoring."

The search for a cure has been a long one. Genital herpes was described by French doctors in the 1700s, but it was not until the early 1960s that scientists were able to distinguish it from its oral cousin, the virus that causes the relatively minor lesions commonly known as cold sores.

Doctors named the herpes simplex virus that occurs above the waist Type 1 and the belowthe-belt strain was labeled Type 2.

Herpes was considered mostly harmless and often was called a "virus of love" until the disclosure in recent years that the incidence of the virus in women may be linked with the incidence of cervical cancer.

Doctors also believe that women who give birth during a recurrance run the risk of passing the disease on to their children, who face the possible consequences of brain damage or even death. In such cases, Caesarean sections usually are recommended.

More people now know about genital herpes than ever before, thanks in part to the fact that more people have it than ever before. But many who contract the disease still are surprised when told what they've got.

"I was stunned," said Ann, a 19-year-old university student. "I heard the name but I didn't know what it was. When the doctor explained it I realized it wasn't such a horrible thing. There's a lot more people that have it than you think."

"I guess my reaction was: what's herpes?" said Jennifer, 26, an artist.

Corey said there are many myths floating around about the disease, not the least of which is that herpes ends a person's sex life.

"That's absolutely not true," he said. "There's only a need to abstain during a recurrance. Herpes doesn't doom one to celibacy or having retarded children or even Caesarean section."

Yet the disease does bring other problems. Jennifer said the initial infection hit her especially hard.

"Most of my body ached. I couldn't stand up that long. I couldn't walk that far because I ached. It goes without saying that sitting down was painful," she said.

Hannah, 29, then a graduate student at the university, said "extreme emotional distress" accompanied her physical discomfort.

"It was one of the low points of my life," she said. "I was laid up for five days. I was really sick with it."

For many, the worst part of having herpes is the fact that it looms in front of every potential relationship with another person.

"There was a time period there when I didn't want anything to do with men. It made me not want to have sex at all," Jennifer said. "When I started wanting to be involved again, that's when it seemed totally unfair and I thought, why should it happen to me?"

"It really does affect my life," Hannah said. "I feel responsible for my partners. I feel that it has to be something they're aware of. Some of them have rejected me and that has been tough. Sometimes, the response is they just don't want anything to do with me at all.

"But at this point, because it's something that's affecting a lot of people, I think the pressure is going to come to bear on finding a cure," she said. "They've got to get a handle on it. Pretty soon it affects all kinds of people."

Air safety crusader, stopped by suit

BURLINGTON, Vt. (UPI) — Fred Blackstone says the only thing he's gotten out of his 15-year crusade for airplane safety is a $3-million libel suit and proof that "you can't sell safety."

The Grumman American Aviation Corp. of Atlanta, Ga., this spring filed the libel suit againt Blackstone for describing the company's Gulfstream II as "deadly in the slightest mishap."

In fact, that is one of the mildest things Blackstone, 59, has to say about the safety of the Gulfstream and other light aircraft.

"What happens to people in air crashes shouldn't happen to rattlesnakes," he says. Most light plane pilots are "flying Molotov cocktails with their wicks lit," he contends.

The Burlington man, with whom the issue of aircraft safety has become an obsession, says he has developed a new way of anchoring aircraft seat belts so they will absorb the shock of impact, rather than snapping.

In most crashes, Blackstone maintains, the structure of the aircraft survives, and often the plane flies again.

But, in many of those cases, he contends, the passengers inside are catapulted from their seats. They either die instantly or are knocked unconsious and die in the flames that often follow the crash.

By holding the passenger in his seat, and holding the seat to the floor, Blackstone says his "Dynastat" system keeps passengers alive and conscious, so that in many cases they can escape quickly and safely after impact.

Blackstone has installed his anchoring device in a number of planes, including two owned by International Business Machines.

When he couldn't interest airplane manufacturers in his device, Blackstone wrote letters to the presidents of 200 large American companies which own Grumman planes for corporate travel.

The letters described what Blackstone believes are the dangers of light aircraft, and then warned the companies they could be held liable in the case of fatal crashes.

Grumman lawyer John Ennis describes the letters as "alarmist" in tone and said they have "no relation to the facts."

Blackstone says the claims are not only provable, but the basis of his crusade for aircraft safety — a crusade that is now over.

The Grumman suit means the end of his business, because he can't fight the big corporation, Blackstone says.

He still says flatly, "Ninety percent of the fatalities or severe injuries would not happen with Dynastat," and he carries with him a briefcase full of FAA accident reports he says prove his claim.

But he added, "You just can't sell safety. As long as an aircraft meets Federal Aviation Administration standards, people think it is safe."

Aviation Consumer magazine last year concluded Blackstone's Dynastat system "appears to be a remarkably effective seat belt anchoring system that will allow a pilot to survive the vast majority of light plane crashes."

The magazine also described the poor crashworthiness of light aircraft as "one real skeleton in aviation's closet."

Thomson pushes for Seabrook

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gov. Meldrim Thomson of New Hampshire headed for Washington today to promote a bill demanding construction of Seabrook nuclear power plant.

Thomson planned to see several members of Congress to urge passage of a bill to permit construction of the $2.3 billion power plant being built by the Public Service Co. of New Hampshire.

The issue has sparked a series of protests and demonstrations, including one last year in which 1,414 persons were arrested.

David B. Cohen candidate for state representative

Attorney David B. Cohen, vice president of the Board of Alderman, has announced his candidacy for the House of Representatives in the 11th Middlesex District. The seat is being vacated by Lois Pines.

Cohen, a Democrat, was elected to the Board of Aldermen from Ward 7 in 1971 and is now serving his fourth term. Cohen serves on the Land Use, Public Facilities, and Legislation and Rules committees and the special committee on the recodification of the city's ordinances. During the past seven years, he has served as chairman of the Public Works and Street Traffic committees and the special subcomittee on environmental impact of road salt.

David B. Cohen

In announcing his candidacy Cohen said, "The times demand new and creative answerS to the many problems which confront our state. The ever-rising cost of state government must be controlled by careful examination of the budget and by the elimination of excess and unproductive positions."

Cohen discovered and eliminated from the budget of the city's Public Works Department approximately $500,000 in doublebudgeted funds, an annual saving of approximately $1.50 on the tax rate. He is also responsible for cost-saving innovations in the workmen's compensation account and the snow and ice account.

He drafted the ordinance creating the city's recycling program, a program which Cohen feels is ecologically necessary and financially feasible.

He has favored tighter middle-management controls on the city's work force and the establishment of an "incentive work day" in the Public Works Department to reduce labor costs and increase labor productivity.

A long-time advocate of preservation and conservation of Newton's few remaining parcels of open space, Cohen sponsored legislation for the orderly, planned acquisition of land by the city to be maintained in its natural state.

A supporter of regional solid waste disposal, Cohen endorses the concept of resource recovery as a means of saving money, preserving open land and conserving our natural resources.

Cohen worked vigorously and ssfully to pass a resolution which would ensure that the city would plant trees of various species which will stand up against the use of road salt. Diversification of planting also ensures that a blight or disease will not wipe out the city's entire shade tree population.

"I view the role of the legislator as an advocate of the needs of the constituents he represents," Cohen said. In this vein, he is critical of the new formula for state reimbursement of local education costs, because "it penalizes communities, such as Newton, which adequately fund their school systems, while financially rewarding those communities which underfund their schools. The formula also freezes the amount Newton will likely receive . in future years, thereby subjecting the funds to erosion, through inflation. I will work to alter the formula to distribute state education reimbursement funds more equitably."

"A legislator must also be sensitive to those who are in need of help from the state. The present system does not provide the necessary protection of innocent victims of domestic violence. I will work to sponsor legislation for the protection and aid of these victims."

Cohen also pointed to the need for rules reform in the House of Representatives as well as the need for a strong code of ethics.

Cohen, 31, grew up in Newton, attending the John Ward School, Bigelow Junior High School and Newton High School, class of 1965. He received his bachelor of arts degree in behavioral psychology from Harvard College, graduating cum laude. . He was graduated from Boston University School of Law in 1973.

"If the people here kept their property the way the city does, Newton wouldn't be called 'the Garden City,'" a caller to the Newton Graphic said last week. She was referring to the unused Auburndale city yard, which she described as a "fire hazard" and a "hazard for children who hang out there." She has reported the condition to City Hall, she said. This photo was taken through a fence, which presents no obstacle to children, and the garage in the center is accessible from the other side by simply climbing over a single chain. The main brick building (left) is completely boarded up. (Graphic photo by Rich Williams)

Smoke detectors and plan for escape can save lives

Properly installed smoke detectors have the potential for reducing the loss of life from fire by 40 per cent according to Chief Harvey D. Preble and the National Fire Protection and Control Administration.

As part of the entire fire service efforts to reduce the fire death toll, we are encouraging householders to install and maintain smoke detectors for their own protection.

Remember, a smoke detector is only one part of your home . fire safety plan. The detector must be installed and maintained properly, but most important is to plan and practice a home escape plan.

If you are awakened at night by the alarm from your smoke detector you may find yourself groggy and confused, but if you have planned and practiced your home escape plan you will ' be able to leave your home more quickly and safely.

Fire Escape Plan

Know how to escape by practicing and having home fire drills with all members of your family taking part and being instructed in exactly what to do under fire or smoke coneditions.

Plan two exits from every room -- second or third story sleeping areas may need a chair or rope ladder to escape safely.

Choose a meeting place outside the home so you will know everyone has safely evacuated the home.

Practice makes perfect. Have fire drills frequently and make sure children and older residents know what to do.

If all citizens cooperate in this "Safety From Fire" program, Chief Preble is sure that the loss of life by fire can be greatly reduced.

Two charged with attempted theft

Two 18-year-old West Newton youths were charged with attempted larceny of a motor vehicle early Sunday morning in Auburndale, police said.

Sgt. James O'Donnell and Officer Francis Fall reportedly saw two youths in a business van parked in front of 264 Grove St., Auburndale.

Police report they ordered the two out of the van, conducted an investigation, and arrested the pair.

Arrested were John T. McIntyre, 18, of 3 Kilburn Rd., West Newton, and Robert T. Ryan, 18, of 10 Cherry Pl., West Newton.

Neither man entered a plea at their arraignment in Newton District Court Monday. The cases were continued to Aug. 14.

Flim-flam man nets about $30

The Milk Stop at 1284 Washington St., West Newton, was short $30 from the register following a flim-flam by a man in his thirties Monday night.

Police reported that a man about 6-foot-2, weighing about 200 pounds, entered the store at about 7:30 p.m. 8to buy a can of soda.

The man gave the girl at the counter $20 for the 25-cent soda, and the girl returned the correct change.

Then the man said he did not want the change, and that he would pay with a quarter. The $20 bill and the $19.75 in change went back and forth between the two, and finally the clerk gave the man all the $10 bills that were in the register, police said.

A count of the money in the register determined how much was taken.

Newton now has its own consumer complaint mediator

Consumer complaints about Newton businesses may now be directed to the city's Department of Human Services.

This increase in consumer complaint services has been made possible by a $5000 grant from the state attorney general's local consumer aid fund.

According to Howard Lipton, director of the Human Services Department, "The intent of the fund is to make consumer mediation services more readily available to individuals experiencing problems with products or services in their local business community."

With this in mind, the Department of Human ServiceS has hired Ms. Pamela Kuczo to work as a consumer complaint mediator. Ms. Kuczo will work from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday. She previously handled consumer complaints in the attorney general's office.

All citizens in Newton with complaints about a Newton business are encouraged to call Ms. Kuczo at 552-7170.

Albemarle

through community development funds, she added.

Another project for Albemarle is the planting of shade trees by the recently installed park benches. Although trees were mentioned for Cabot Park at the village's needs assessment meeting, the committee decided to focus its attention on Albemarle.

While trees will enhance the park, the committee does not want to use them to line the streets of Newtonville's business district. There is already a lot of congestion on those streets especially after the snow plows go through, Mrs. Hannigan said.

The committee would like some beautification of the business district, however. A possible alternative being considered is hanging baskets.

Sitting areas in front of the Newtonville library and at the corner of Austin and Walnut Streets are another priority. The committee would like these areas to include trash receptacles, bicycle racks, benches, trees, a water fountain, and a bulletin board.

Concentrating on the Austin and Walnut Street area, the committee would also like to see some greenery planted at the Star Market and Austin Street parking lots.

Pines saying 'no' to lobbyist contributions

State Rep. Lois G. Pines (D-Newton), a candidate for the Democratic nonination for secretary of state, has announced that she has directed her campaign committee to refuse any campaign contributions from individuals who are registered lobbyists. In addition, the campaign will not accept any contributions from current employees of the secretary of state's office or their spouses.

Lobbyists are currently required to file semi-annually with the secretary of state's office. That office is charged with the responsibility of regulating and monitoring lobbying activity and, where appropriate, referring violations to the attorney general's office for possible prosecution.

Rep. Pines, an attorney who is completing her third term in the Legislature, has strongly supported legislation establishing a state ethics Commission and disclosure and reporting requirements for lobbyists. She has expressed particular concern over the power of special interest groups in the legislative process and has consistently sought strict enforcement of the existing lobbying laws.

Among the measures she has vowed to push as secretary of state are limits on corporate spending in referendum campaigns and expanded voter registration efforts. She also intends to make the office a more active participant in resolving consumer disputes with state government, and, using her easy to read insurance law as a model, to simplify the language of state laws and regulations so that the laymen will be capable of understanding them.

Permissive sex habits spread genital herpes

SEATTLE (UPI) — Like thousands of others, Norman is trying to forget his disease while he waits for someone to develop a cure.

"It looks like I'm a guinea pig until they come up with one," said Norman, a 31-yearold aerospace worker. "But you can't just sit around and worry about it. That doesn't do anyone any good."

Norman has genital herpes, a sexually transmitted virus that until a few years ago was a little-known venereal disease unfamiliar to many doctors.

Now it is spreading fast through the young population. Scientists believe herpes may be linked to cervical cancer, and as interest in the disease has increased, so has government funding for research.

Genital herpes is viewed as an epidemic from the University of Washington, where researchers painstakingly sift through the medical evidence for clues that may lead to a cure.

Norman and many other victims of the disease have found their way to the university's 4-year-old herpes clinic at Harborview Medical Center. It is one of the few clinics in the country devoted solely to the research and treatment of genital herpes.

There hundreds of persons every month eagerly submit to experimental treatment techniques and drugs in the hope they can contribute to the efforts of the researchers.

Dr. Lawrence Corey, head of the clinic and of the university's virology department, said herpes has spread rapidly in recent years due to increased sexual activity among the young.

"It's a young person's disease," Corey said. "And it can only keep increasing in incidence. There's no question that people have more sexual partners today. Herpes is the one disease that will keep venereologists monogamous."

Herpes was named from the Greek word for "creep" or "crawl." When it first infects its victims, the herpes simplex virus causes a series of painful sores in the genital area, often accompanied by symptoms akin to a bad flu. The sores generally are more painful for women than for men.

After about three weeks, the infection clears up. But the virus only retreats and lies dormant near nerve endings. It usually strikes again at varying intervals year after year, although the recurrances generally are much milder and of shorter duration than the first bout.

Nothing known to medical science will kill the virus in the victim's body and there is no known effective treatment for the disease. In some cases, certain drugs and techniques such as exposure to ultraviolet light under care of a physician have been said to speed healing and reduce pain, but these measures still are experimental.

Currently, there is no way to predict why, when or how often the infection will return and the victim remains extremely contagious during each recurrance.

Corey said he believes genital herpes is far more widespread than government figures indicate. He said the estimate of one case of herpes to every 10 of gonorrhea is "malarky" and believes there are many more than the estimated 300,000 new cases of the disease a year.

Brandeis physician gives students chance to fly in 'Little Airplanes'

Mankind's attraction to flight remains undiminished.

At least that was the case at Brandeis University recently when a mini-course entitled Little Airplanes was offered.

A bare 30 minutes after registration opened, the program — which offered a first flight in a single-engine plane — was sealed tighter than a cockpit windshield.

And 1978 marked the second consecutive year that the urge to fly caused Brandeis to limit even the waiting lists.

The opportunity to make a first flight — and the added attraction of taking the controls — was made possible by Dr. Harris C. Faigel, director of Brandeis Health Services, who has been flying for nearly a decade.

Faigel recently spent an entire day introducing 14 undergraduates to the joys of flight and flying in a four-seater Piper Cherokee.

During the one-day course, the Brandeis students were ferried, and had an opportunity to fly, from Norwood Airport to Hanscom Field in Bedford and back. The flight plan included a pass directly over the Brandeis campus.

The logistics were simple enough, providing the pilot is accustomed to long periods of concentration.

Faigel left Norwood Airport with two students, one of whom sat in the co-pilot's seat. Upon landing at Hanscom, the "co-pilot" changed seats with the passenger in the rear of the plane. Then back to Norwood where two other students waited. The entire program took seven hours.

The course, established by Faigel, was limited to people who have never flown in a small airplane before.

"Once an aircraft is in the air," Faigel said, "it's trimmed and balanced and will fly pretty much by itself with only fingertip control.

"People taking the controls for the first time have a tendency to over-control — that is, they treat the plane like they would a car. So it takes them a while to settle down, but once they do, they really enjoy the feeling."

During the sojourns, Faigel remained in charge of the aircraft under FAA rules. Each of the students was over 18 years of age and all had signed the standard release form which is mandatory for these kinds of flights.

Once the physician had set the course and the craft was trimmed, the students were able to "take over."

Sabrina Brown, a senior from Kansas City, Kan., told of her flight.

"When we flew, it was exciting and a little frightening, especially during take-off when I was in the cockpit.

"I liked watching the propeller and seeing the nose lift up. It was really a lot different from flying in a big jet. You have the sense of a lot of freedom up there. It was fascinating and like nothing I had experienced before," Ms. Brown said.

Faigel said the university's flight program really was a "fun thing" designed to do little more than introduce students to flight.

That introduction included a classroom session during which the physician outlined the broader aspects of flying. This was followed by a detailed "pre-flight" inspection of the aircraft and its equipment at the airfield.

"All of this cost $10 per student. The fee covered about 85 per cent of the plane rental, with the balance paid by Faigel.

"While most of the students took part for the fun of it, I think there was a small number who might be interested in becoming pilots," said Faigel. "I think it possible that some who really were 'turned on' would become pilots some day."

"Some of the people who flew last year have discussed the possibility of a flying club here on campus," Dr. Faigel said. "I think what they hope to do is to join in with campus flying clubs already established, such as Harvard and M.I.T., which have facilities at Hanscom."

Dr. Faigel plans to repeat his one-day course next year for the early birds who sign up on registration day.

Professor emeritus Archon to continue teaching at Suffolk

Dion J. Archon of West Newton, recently designated professor emeritus at Suffolk University, Boston, has been reappointed as a part-time lecturer at the university for the 1978-79 academic year.

Archon, who served as a full-time faculty member at Suffolk for more than 25 years and as chairman of the Government and Economics Department for many years, retired from full-time teaching in June.

Archon was a long-time chairman of the Suffolk Lecture Series and advisor to the Suffolk Political Science Association. His retirement triggered a host of tributes from political luminaries and individual honors for the veteran professor.

These included resolutions by the Massachusetts Senate and the Massachusetts House commending him on his dedicated service to the university, congratulatory letters from the state's top elected officials.

He was also tendered a reception by the faculty of the Government and Economics Department as well as a surprise party by the Political Science Association which a number of trustees, including chairman Vincent A. Fulmer and former Boston Mayor John F. Collins attended.

Other tributes came from the Massachusetts Gamma Chapter of the National Social Sciences Honor Society, Pi Gamma Mu, which he founded at Suffolk, and from his classes.

Archon was also guest of honor at the Rose Dance presented by the National Business Fraternity, of which he was a founder and was initiated into the Suffolk University prestigious Gold Key Honor Society in recognition of his high achievement in the areas of scholarship, leadership, and service while at Suffolk University.

Dion J. Archon

Next fall, Archon will be teaching courses in American government and public opinion and propaganda.

Aluminum recycling this month makes money for MDA

Local recyclers can help "Jerry's Kids" during the month of August by turning in their used aluminum to the Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Company.

Reynolds will donate 1 cent to the Muscular Dystrophy Association-Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon for every pound of aluminum turned in by recyclers from Aug. 1 through Labor Day.

Recyclers can keep the 17 cents per pound Reynolds normally pays for used aluminum or they can donate it, through the Reynolds program, to MDA. Either way, Muscular Dystrophy receives one penny for every pound of aluminum Reynolds collects between now and Labor Day.

In the past three years, Reynolds, its employees and the public have raised more than $460,000 for MDA by recycling the equivalent of more than 67 million all-aluminum beverage cans.

Recyclable aluminum items include all-aluminum beverage cans as well as clean household aluminum such as foil, frozen food trays and snack containers. Scrap aluminum — siding, gutters, storm door and window frames and lawn furniture tubing — is worth 17 cents per pound if all non-aluminum parts are removed, the aluminum is cut into lengths not exceeding three feet, and it is not mixed with cans.

The most reliable way to identify aluminum cans is with a magnet. A magnet will not stick to any part of an all-aluminum can. Reynolds recycles only aluminum.

The Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Center, located at 50 Tower Road, Upper Falls, is open Tuesdays through Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. during "Cans for Kids" month.

Yosef Tekoah, former Israeli ambassador to the United Nations and now president of Ben-Gurion University of the Negev, concluded a round of speaking engagements recently in the United States at a reception and buffet supper in the Newton Centre home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanton Kurzman. Guests included (from left) Dr. Yale J. Berry, president of Israel's Red Cross, Elaine Berry, program chairwoman of the Red Cross; Tekoah, Andrea Kurzman and Stanton Kurzman.

Library announces business bibliography and new books

The Main Library at 414 Centre St., Newton Corner, has a display of newly processed nonfiction books.

Located on the first floor, the display is updated daily and includes such diverse titles as: "Battered Child Syndrome" by Smith, "Mark Spitz Complete Book of Swimming" by Spitz, "Fishing Rigs for Fresh and Salt Water" by Evanoff; "How to Use Video Tape Recorders" by Kybet, and "Woody Allen, A Biography" by Guthrie.

The library also publishes a biweekly annotated list of new nonfiction featuring current titles that may not have been reviewed by the New York Times or the local papers.

An annotated Business Bibliography of recent titles, another first for the Newton Free Library, is available in all library buildings. This quarterly publication should be of special interest to the business community.

The library also prepares and distributes "New Purchases," a monthly publication listing recently acquired new fiction and nonfiction, records, cassettes, pamphlets, and children's materials.

A different experience aboard the Donai Express for Bucharest

By F R A N K H. BARTHOLOMEW

VIENNA, Austria (UPI) — If you have never ridden second class in an overnight sleeper between two Marxist-Leninist countries that do not seem to like each other, it is a different experience.

A contingent of 18 Americans and Canadians arrived here recently with a report of adventures aboard the Donai Express, from the U.S.S.R. to Romania.

They had boarded at Kishinev, Moldavia, southbound for Romania. Moldavia, at the southern edge of the Ukraine, was formerly Romanian, now Russian.

The tickets said first class, but the solitary sleeping car awaiting them was not. It had no curtains; four berths to a compartment, the uppers very high and reached by stepping on the berth below and, hopefully, not on the face of the occupant if the train lurched.

The foreigners boarded at 6 p.m., although the train wasn't scheduled to leave until 8, and discovered they should have been earlier. Every compartment held one to three Russians and baggage.

The visitors sorted themselves out, one, two or three to a compartment, according to the number of unoccupied bunks. Baggage was stacked on the rear platform, since there was no room in the compartments.

At 8 o'clock, the Donai Express came through and picked up the Kishinev car. The train had left Moscow the day before. All first-class compartments were occupied and the chair car filled — or so they were told — with diplomats.

Two hours saw the train at the Romanian border, with a young woman, speaking a little English, leading a platoon of uniformed inspectors.

First inspection was for exit visas, since Russia dislikes to see travelers leave, particularly Russians. A young woman in the first compartment examined was promptly put off the train into the black night. Her husband, hands shielding his eyes, peered into the darkness from the train window, waving a regretful goodbye.

Next it was the turn of the inspectors of outgoing customs. An official entered each compartment, seated himself on a lower berth and indicated that the passengers were to produce one bag at a time and hold it in their laps for inspection.

A very old Russian lady, her hair tied with a bandana, possessed a mysterious cylinder some two feet high, surmounted by a large control wheel. She could not hold it in her lap nor, it developed, satisfactorily explain it to the inspector. He solved the problem by ordering the cylinder off the train, leaving the owner weeping lustily and beseeching three American fellow travelers for help.

Elsewhere, customs inspectors were removing all papers and documents from the luggage, together with cameras and film. These were handed to waiting messengers in the corridor, and disappeared into the night.

Down the corridor a man's voice emphatically registered a complaint. Dr. Jean Bissonette, head of a Montreal clinic, objected to seeing his private medical records, his passports, tickets, paper money and travelers checks taken from him. He was assured by gesture that everything not confiscated would be returned before the train left.

An American newspaperman, emboldened by Dr. Bissonette's vigorous complaint, so surprised his inspector with his demands that his money was actually returned on the spot. Confiscated, however, was a set of clippings from a San Francisco paper dealing with a group trip to Red China. Similarly, books disappeared, not to be returned "if the authorities thought they did not constitute proper reading.

The newspaperman's victory over bureaucracy was not completely decisive since, after handing back his money and travelers checks, the inspector propped the remaining contents of his dispatch case on the corridor floor where, before they could be recovered to be sent off the train, they suffered several unavoidable footprints.

In the midst of not inconsiderable commotion and confusion, William Dovey of Peoria, Ill., noticed that the train seemed to be rising in the air. "What next?" he asked his fellow travelers.

Lights and voices outside solved the mystery by indicating that the train actually was being lifted by jacks, one car at a time. New trucks were being pushed underneath with different axle gauges for the Romanian railway.

Next came a crew of railroad workers aboard, ousting both the inspectors and the passengers from the compartment of Dr. William Snyder of Hayward, Calif. Carpet and floorboards were removed and the new wheels fastened into place, from the inside.

The baggage search finally completed, the messenger corps appeared with passengers' papers, documents and film which had been taken and sent elsewhere for examination. The inspectors filed off the train. The passengers looked at each other, speechless.

But the inspecting corps returned. By gesture, everyone — Russians and foreigners alike — was ordered out of the compartments into the corridors.

This time the bunks were pulled apart, mattresses lifted and examined. So were the bedsprings and the area underneath.

Nothing else was discovered. Apparently satisfied that the lady removed by emigration and the mysterious cylinder removed by customs constituted all the illegal activities, the train was permitted to try its new wheels and move ahead.

Frank Bond — Millionaire by 30

TOWSON, Md. (UPI) — Frank Bond became a millionaire before he was 30 by selling muscles, glamour and good health.

Now, at age 43 and owner of 36 Holiday Health Spas mostly on the Northeast Coast, Bond believes he will double his fortune by selling psychological fitness clinics — centers where individuals can go to discuss personal problems without the lengthy requirements of psychoanalysis or psychotherapy.

Bond said the centers will be staffed by certified psychologists and will be aimed at helping people "think rationally in an irrational world."

"People want to live more productive and satisfied lives," he said. "If there is one thing that the health spas have proved, it's that."

A native of Baltimore, Bond dropped out of high school for a year to roam the country but returned and won athletic scholarships to seven colleges.

He took courses at several colleges and universities but dropped out "because they were too slow — I could handle a textbook in a week and they wanted to spend months."

Despite his lack of formal schooling, Bond can easily be called an educated man. He routinely stays at his plush office in suburban Baltimore until 2 a.m., frequently reading books on political theory and advanced economics.

"The problems of government are so overwhelming that businessmen must get involved if we want any kind of future for our children," he said. "Unfortunately, business itself becomes a part of the problem in many instances.

"Instead of arguing for freedom across the board, many companies ask for subsidies and special consideration, compromising their principles for the sake of a shortterm gain," he said.

"They don't realize how dangerous a large government can become. It's a threat to everyone, and if your rights aren't guaranteed, then they are only privileges, and privileges are something that can be taken away."

Bond has been involved in a personal battle with the government as well his abstract one.

As chairman of the Association of Physical Fitness Clubs, an organization representing the major health spas across the country, he is fighting a proposal by the Federal Trade Commission to allow people to back out of contracts they sign with health clubs.

Critics say the clubs use highpressure sales tactics to force people to sign longterm membership contracts, and then use strongarm tactics to collect monthly payments.

"There's no question that there have been abuses in the past," Bond said. "But it's a new industry and in any new industry you're bound to have problems like this. But the more established health clubs can't resort to those tactics or they wouldn't be able to survive."

Bond also said he is hiring sales trainers to teach his instructor-salesmen, usually athletic men and women in their 20s who wear sports outfits, to be more diplomatic.

Bond, who is married and has two sons, one by a former marriage, lives in a traditional white stone house in the lush Maryland countryside of Baltimore County.

An attractive man in good physical shape, Bond is 5-feet-11 and weighs 185 pounds, mostly muscle. He jogs and works out with weights and other exercise equipment for one hour three or four days a week in a private gym outside his office.

Bond attributes his success to his commitment to follow through on his objectives.

"It's that simple," he said. "Everybody wants to start everything, but nobody wants to stick with anything. That's the source of this complaint by the government about people getting stuck with long-term contracts. Some people think they want something and then they change their minds.

"My philosophy is that if you make a commitment, you have to stick it out until you've done what you originally promised yourself. It wasn't always easy in this business. When I owned my first few gyms, and that was back in the fifties, I wasn't sure how long things would last. It takes a lot of determination."

Bond attracted national attention several years ago when he was named in a magazine article as an investor in a CIA plot to help Abacan nationalists break away from the Commonwealth of the Bahamas to found an independent nation.

"There was a lot of bad publicity — and a lot of misinformed publicity — about that whole affair," he said. "I don't want to go into detail other than to say I still think it would be a good idea if there were one government in the world that was totally committed to protecting individual rights — life, liberty, property and the pursuit of happiness."

Paris fashions put women back in the 1940's

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — The world is trying to make it into the 1980s but Paris fashion put women back in the 1940s today.

The broad shoulder, the tiny waist and the narrow skirt staged a big comeback — flavored with postwar movie star glamor — in the highfashion fall-winter fashion collections for buyers and press.

The sloppy, full look of the past few years has sunk without a trace.

Up-and-coming designer Jean-Louis Scherrer, who has doubled the size of his salon, billed his new narrow look "the rediscovery of the woman's body — fullness abandoned for a long, thin line."

Scherrer showed squareshouldered, tight-waisted dresses that outlined every curve of the body.

Draped silk crepe dresses had football shoulders curving into a snug waist and molded hips.

Then Scherrer added high, high heels, turban-like hats, stockings with seams, dangling earrings beneath swept-up 1940s hair-dos and lots of egret feathers.

Pierre Cardin's new shoulders were so wide and flat that you could set a glass on them. Instead of a glass, he put one little button on top of each shoulder.

The crowd of press and buyers applauded skirts as narrow as a cigarette teamed with long jackets edged with fox fur.

Cardin used lots of taffeta: taffeta blouses with huge bows and billowing long taffeta evening gowns with huge, balloon sleeves and tiny mannish tuxedo collars.

Cardin now is Paris's biggest fashion businessman, spending less time on clothes and more on designing everything from bath towels to baby bugggies.

His new boutique in New York will sell furniture and other household goods as well as clothes.

Designer Philippe Venet got into the big-shoulder craze with understated leg-of-mutton sleeves on tailored suits as well as satin blouses.

The full look is out . . .

The look is skinny skirts, snug waist, and broad shoulders circa 1946. Pierre Cardin's suit illustrates the new look.

. . . the narrow look is back

A gray and white pebble tweed cape-jacket tops a narrow skirt. The turban hat is worn over an upswept hairdo. Outfit by Jean-Louis Sherrer.

A short Cardin jacket with the new broad shoulders teamed with trousers that look like riding britches.

Shoulders are wide and waists cinched

Hospital hopes to train 1000 in CPR techniques this year

A cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) course will be offered four times in September by Newton-Wellesley Hospital as the first step in a year-long plan to teach 1000 persons the lifesaving technique.

The American Heart Association's Heartsaver course will be taught by certified instructors on Thursdays, Sept. 7, 14, and 28 from 7-10:30 p.m., as well as Saturday, Sept. 23, from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., in Allen Riddle Hall, the School of Nursing's dormitory.

Because enrollment for each class is limited to 30 adults, early reservations are encouraged, says Tom Ozahowski, hospital CPR coordinator.

Reservations can be made now for the September classes. After reservations are made via telephone the $2 fee per person should be mailed to the hospital along with a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

To enroll in the class, call the hospital's community relations department, 964-2800, ext. 395.

The response to the hospital's Heartsaver course last year was so great that many people had to be turned away. During the summer, Ozahowski and Susan Murray, R.N., both certified CPR instructors, coordinated training of an additional corps of some 50 instructors, which will permit expansion of the program this year.

The course will be offered from September through May, with reservations accepted after the first of each preceding month.

Taught by volunteer instructors, the Heartsaver course includes one hour lecture and three hours of actual practice in doing mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and cardiac compression on a life-size mannikin.

This year, an opportunity for those who already have taken the course to refresh their skills will be built into the program. Instructors and mannikins will be available for refresher practice.

Last year's program trained 400 Heartsavers. This year's goal is to train 1000.

Public facilities, conservation projects solicited by CETA

Newton Area CETA is accepting proposals from government and community agencies interested in sponsoring work programs for local youth, Mayor Theodore D. Mann, chairman of Newton Area CETA, announced today.

Newton Area CETA is soliciting proposals under the Youth Community Conservation and Improvement Projects (YCCIP). These projects should provide constructive work experience for unemployed, out-of-school youth (ages 16-19) in labor-intensive projects having lasting, tangible and beneficial community impact.

Proposals selected by Newton Area CETA will compete with proposals from 17 other subgrantees for approximately $2 million in YCCIP funds. The U.S. Department of Labor retains final approval of YCCIP projects.

The deadline for submission of proposals for this program is July 10. Projects are expected to begin after October 1, 1978.

The projects funded under YCCIP will emphasize opportunities for youths with severe difficulties in obtaining employment (high school dropouts, minorities, offenders, etc.) and meaningful and well-supervised work experience which will enhance the youth's long-tern career prospects. .

Likely projects include improvements to public facilities, neighborhood conservation, weatherization and basic repairs to low— income housing, energy conservation, and natural resource conservation on non-federal publicly held properties.

Agencies eligible to apply to sponsor projects include units of local government, community organizations (public and private nonprofit), and local educational agencies. Sponsoring agencies must have at least two years' experience and demonstrated administrative capability in project operation. Community-based, minority, and private nonprofit agencies are encouraged to apply.

Applications and project criteria are available from Newton Area CETA, 899-7800, and must be received by Newton Area CETA, 103 Moody St., Waltham, MA, by 4 p.m. Friday, July 21.

Travel

Mention Canada and New Englanders will probably first think of quaint cafes, signs en francaise and the clean new metro in Montreal. But take a closer look, head northeast and discover the "tailbone" of Canada — Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick.

The key word for Yankees is "accessibility." Drive, take a luxury cruise or fly to those unspoiled Maritime provinces. Direct flights from major centers touch down daily in Halifax, Yarmouth and Sydney. Or for a luxury cruise, auto-ferries leave from Portland and Bar Harbor, Maine, and dock 8 or 10 hours later in Yarmouth. There is also a shorter cruise and regular ferry service from St. John and Digby, Nova Scotia. New Brunswick is only 350 miles from Boston.

A visit to Nova Scotia is a visit to Canada's Ocean Playground. To be inland is to never be more than 35 miles from the ocean, with the tang of salt always in the air. Quiet coves, gently rolling hills, protruding and jagged cliffs and secluded beaches silhouette the 4,725 mile coastline.

For those who are country at heart select a farm vacation or live in a fishing village. Many families open their homes and hearts to visitors. Luxury yachts, resorts, cabins and country inns are available for whatever travelling style.

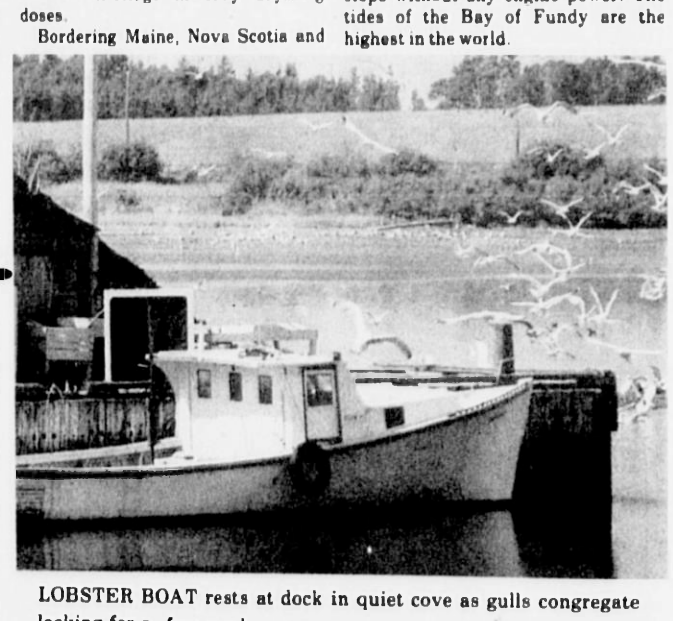

Summer comes to Nova Scotia early in June and the days warm to 65 degrees. By July, the temperature rises to the mid seventies. People head for the beaches, and large pots boil lobsters, corn on the cob and steamers. August brings even warmer temperatures followed by Indian summer in September. As October comes and the leaves turn, Nova Scotia moves indoors except for those hardy winter sportsmen, for the winter until April and the promise of spring.

Customs vary from shore to shore but easy living and the spirit of good fun is the common denominator. Casual is the clue when packing for a Nova Scotia vacation, with sophistication in the cities.

Moving north from Nova Scotia one comes to Prince Edward Island, the "Garden of the Gulf." Varying terrain, warm gulf waters and live summer theatre are here. No one wants to miss the Summerside Lobster Carnival, the traditional Elden Highland games or the Dundas Plowing Match. There are dozens of well equipped camping and picnic areas for the outdoorsman as well as hotels and inns with all the comforts of home in Charlottetown, the province's capital. Three senic routes have been designated to introduce visitors to the island and her people. Winding through three countries visitors will see sites most representative of the island's heritage in easy day-long doses.

Bordering Maine, Nova Scotia and Quebec is New Brunswick. Nearly 40 per cent of the people here are French-speaking although most also speak English. Along the 1400 miles of clean sandy beaches one can swim, fish or boat. It's in Canada's Picture Province where a family can just relax. Head inland to New Brunswick's countryside of 28,000 square miles of rolling wooded hills. Quiet villages with friendly inhabitants and white-painted churches nestle in the senic beauty. But there are cities which surround the wooded wonderland. Moncton is a modern city and the hub of the Maritimes; St. John is the oldest chartered city in Canada; Fredericton is the capital and a quaint city of stately trees, culture government and the university.

Come to Magnetic Hill near Moncton where the car will travel up the slope without any engine power. The tides of the Bay of Fundy are the highest in the world.

LOBSTER BOAT rests at dock in quiet cove as gulls congregate looking for a free meal.

Evelyn and Gardner Wood, volunteer drivers for Traveling Meals of Newton, receive packages for their route deliveries from Tom Jones, chef at the Carroll Center for the Blind. The center recently joined Newton-Wellesley Hospital and Mount St. Vincent Retirement Center in preparing meals for the program, now in its fifth year.

Service for cancer patients can be contacted at City Hall

A local office to provide service to cancer patients in Newton and Wellesley is now operating out of the Newton City Hall under the auspices of the American Cancer Society's Newton-Wellesley Unit.

The office, staffed by Cancer Society volunteers is open from 1 to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday. The phone number is 964-4143.

According to Virginia Joyce of Newton Highlands, service chairman of the Newton-Wellesley Unit, the office will provide cancer information to the public in addition to counseling and assistance to local cancer patients and their families.

"We can assist cancer patients by providing transportation to and from treatment centers and doctor's offices, as well as with loan items like sickroom supplies and wheelchairs," Miss Joyce said. "The Service Committee also can provide limited temporary emergency funds for visiting nurse, homehealth aide, and homemaker services. In addition, rehabilitative programs for breast cancer patients, laryngectomees, and ostomates are available.

Frances Somers of Auburndale, who has served as service chairman of the Newton-Wellesley Unit since its formation in 1977, will continue as a consultant for this committee.

Also serving on the Newton-Wellesley Service Committee are: Zelda Goodglass, MSW, co-chairman; Shirley Singer and Howard Snow, publicity; Rachel Bliven; Claudia Finck, ACSW, Newton-Wellesley Hospital; Nita Finn, MSW, and Shelley Weiss, Newton Human Services; Robert Keyho, Newton Red Cross; Anne Kinsley, RN, Wellesley Health Departnent; Meira Max, MSW, Department of Public Welfare, Newton; Frances Mervyn, Ph.D, Human Relations Service of Wellesley and Weston; Eleanor Mullin, Wellesley Friendly Aid; Gay Newman, West Suburban Elder Services; Elizabeth Norton; Joan Norton, Wellesley Red Cross; Kay O'Connell; Marion Power; Betty Sacks, RN, Newton Health Department; Eleanor Shaughnessy, MSW; Florence Tankevich, RN, MS, and Donna Dow, RN, Newton-Wellesley VNA; and Rose Wolbarst.

If you need assistance or would like to volunteer, call the Newton-Wellesley Service Committee at 964-4143 from 1 to 3 p.m., Monday through Friday. At other times, you may contact the Boston Office of the American Cancer Society at 1-800-952-7664.

Wellins appointed

The General Agents and Managers Conference of the National Association of Life Underwriters has named Henry G. Wellins, CLU, manager of the Henry G. Wellins Insurance Agency of Lower Falls, a life and qualifying member of the National Management Award.

Change in bus routes

Effective now and continuing through November, there will be a minor diversion in Needham on MBTA Bus Route No. 532, Needham Square to Watertown Square.

Due to repair work on the Hunnewell Street Bridge by the State Department of Public Works, the section of road from Highland Avenue to Hillside Avenue will be closed to traffic.

The bus route diversion will be as follows:

Needham to Watertown: Regular route on Highland Avenue, turn left on West Street, right on Hillside Avenue, then continue regular route on Hillside.

Watertown to Needham: Regular route on Hillside Avenue, turn left on West Street, right on Highland Avenue, then regular route to Needham Square.

Federal documents soon to be more open to public

Rep. David J. Mofenson (D-Newton), chairman of the Legislative Commission on Privacy, has praised the new federal rules for classifying government documents.

Mofenson said, "The new regulations start from the premise that there is much government information which is being overclassified or classified unnecessarily.

"The new procedures, which go into effect Dec. 1, will establish narrower, more explicit criteria for restricting public access to government information."

The rules reduce to six years the period after which most top secret documents automatically would be declassified. Under the old 1972 rules, only about 47 percent of all classified documents automatically are declassified after six to 10 years, with the remainder exempted by executive branch officials from declassification until they are 30 years old.

The new rules allow executive branch documents to be classified for 20 years.

Other major changes between the new executive order and the 1972 order include:

— A requirement that a document could be classified only if its unauthorized disclosure reasonably could be expected to cause "identifiable" damage to national security. Current standards allow classification if any damage reasonably could be expected.

The information also would have to fall into one of the seven categories relating to national security or foreign relations. One of these is a catch-all, but use of that criterion must be reported to an oversight office created by the order.

— Classification of most documents on a section-by— section basis. The White House claimed this was significant since most documents are classified because they refer to other, previously classified documents.

Under the new system, the later document would not have to be classified if it referred to a non-secret part of the original document.

— A requirement that in reviewing classified documents to see whether they should be made public, the public's interest in knowing the information be balanced against the need to keep it secret.

— Creation of an Information Security Oversight Office to police the classification system.

— Removal of authority to classify documents from 11 domestic agencies that have made little or no use of the authority in recent years.

The House Government Information Sub-Committee will hold hearings in Washington on the order this fall and issue a detailed report before it takes effect in December, Mofenson said.

Italian-Americans convene this weekend in Auburndale

The last in a series of regional conferences dealing with issues, problems and needs of the Italian-American community in this area will be discussed at the New England Conference of the National Italian-American Foundation Saturday, Aug. 5, at 9:30 a.m., at the Marriott Hotel in Auburndale.

Judge Joseph Tauro will serve as moderator of the conference and former U.S. Ambassador John A. Volpe, president of the foundation, and Ralph J. Perrotta, acting executive director, will keynote the parley.

More than 100 leading Italo-Americans are expected to attend and hear presentations involving education, arts and culture, finance and banking, broadcast and newspaper media, government, and community affairs.

Speakers will include Dr. Carlo Golino, retired chancellor of the University of Massachusetts; Samuel Ussia, president, Dante Alighieri Society; Frank Viola, president, Haymarket Cooperative Bank; Anthony LaCamera, Boston Herald American television critic; Sen. Samuel Rotondi, Ronald Di'Orio, president, National Education Association of Rhode Island; Joseph Agostinelli, publisher, The Echo in Providence, R.I.; and Carol Bonomo Ahearn, acting president of UNITAM.

Serving on a panel for the conference will be Guy Arrigo, grand venerable, Grand Lodge, Order of Sons of Italy; Adele Malone, past president, Women's Guild of Don Orione Home; Carmen Elio, chairman, Massachusetts Pension Fund Commission; and Anthony DeFalco, former Massachusetts Commissioner of Administration & Finance and presently director of Quincy City Hospital.

Volpe will speak at the luncheon which will follow the morning session of presentations. Workshops are scheduled for the afternoon.

Jeno F. Paulucci of Duluth, Minn., board chairman of the foundation, will also speak. Other regional conferences have been held on the west coast, Chicago, and New York. A national conference will be convened in Washington, D.C., Sept. 15-16.

Individuals interested in attending the New England conference in Newton should contact P. Alfred Pannesi, 924-3600. Cost is $12.50 per person.

Ms. Strauss researches changes in cancer cells

Phyllis R. Strauss, a Newton resident and assistant professor of biology at Northeastern University, was one of 18 faculty lecturers for "Frontiers of Scholarship Day" held at Northeastern's main campus in Boston.

The day provided faculty, students, and the public with the opportunity to learn about the research and scholarship being conducted by professors on Northeastern's campus.

Ms. Strauss spoke on "The Cell Surface and Leukemia." Her work concentrates on the membrane that contains the matter of each cell.

Her lecture revealed the complex changes in the cell membrane that provide evidence of cancer, specifically leukemia. Strauss studies the inflow of important nutrients, marked with traces of radioactivity, into leukemic and normal cells.

Ms. Strauss was a post-doctoral fellow at Harvard Medical School. She earned her B.A. degree at Pembroke College, Brown University, and her Ph.D. at Rockfeller University.

The cards are loaned for seven days and are subject to the regulations for seven-day materials — no renewals, five cents fine for each day overdue, and no reserves will be taken.

These membership cards provide the bearer with free admission to the insitution, to members' rooms, and for discounts on purchases.

The cards are available at the circulation desk of the Main Library, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner.

Summer hours at the Main Library are 9 a.m. - 9 p.m. Monday through Friday, closed Saturday and Sunday through Sept. 9.

Call 552-7145 fore more information.

Rossman joins faculty

David Rossman of Dickerman Road, Newton Highlands, will join the faculty at the Boston University School of Law in the fall as an associate professor of law.

Rossman is a staff attorney at Boston University's Center for Criminal Justice and director of the Boston University's School of Law Clinical Programs in Criminal Law. He has also had his own private law practice since 1972 and represents criminal defendants.

Rossman has been an instructor at Boston College and a court law clerk for the United States Court of Appeals, District of Columbia Circuit.

He earned a J.D., magna cum laude, from Harvard Law School in 1971.

Daniels is trustee

Edward M. Daniels, M.D., of Chestnut Hill, a psychiatrist at McLean Hospital, has recently been appointed to the Board of Trustees at the Cambridge School, where his son will begin his second year this fall.

The Cambridge School is a private co-educational boarding and day school in Weston.

Daniels received his A.B. from Brown University and his M.D. from Yale University School of Medicine.

He is affiliated with many different hospitals in this area and, in addition, is an associate clinical professor of psychiatry at Harvard Medical School and a member of the faculty at Boston Psychoanalytic Institute.

Lawlor heads labs

Joseph Lawlor, Ph.D., of Arlington has been appointed director of clinical chemistry for Newton-Wellesley Hospital's pathology laboratories.

Lawlor joins Newton-Wellesley from the Clin-Chem Laboratories in Boston where he was chief of the radioassay department for the past five years.

Certified by the American Board of Clinical Chemistry, Lawlor has also worked at Rhode Island Hospital and Cambridge City Hospital.

He earned a Ph.D. in organic chemistry at Providence College and a B.S. in chemistry at Manhattan College.

Travel Talk

By Josephine Aria

In the early 1920's, E.B. White, the great American essayist and author of children's books, traveled across country with a college friend, and noted that a small town "consists mainly of four stores and an excellent view of the mountains." It's hard to believe that this definition still holds true, but it does. One can drive across the U.S. today and find many such towns of no more than a few hundred people. The towns usually lie snug in between miles and miles of cornfields or beanfields, and often are not visible from the main highways. There is still much of beauty, simplicity, and variety right here. On your next vacation, why not get to know your country better?

Travel today is far different than in 1920. BARCLAY INTERNATIONAL TRAVEL SERVICE, INC., 305 A Washington St., Newton Corner, is up to date on all the latest travel developments. ## Fellini's offers varity

Fellini's at 1114 Beacon Street, Newton's Four Corners, is open.

Planned and designed by restaurant consultant-owner Richard S. Keesan, Fellini's is committed to providing diners in the west suburban cities with "excellent cuisine and intimate ambience and the total entertainment experience," according to Keesan.

Couples can enjoy cocktails, dinner and continental service and then adjourn La Club.

La Club Cocktail Lounge and Oyster Bar provides dancing and entertainment, a variety of hot and cold seafoods as well as cocktails, according to owner Keesan who is a 35-year veteran of creating distinguished dining facilities.

The La Club menu gives guests the opportunity to mix or match clams, crab, shrimp and oysters to snack while enjoying their cocktails. Guests can also choose from a large assortment of more filling scampi dishes, hot Italian antipasto items, soups, chowders and an Italian cioppino (bouillabaisse)."

The dinner menu offers two dozen appetizers, eight different presentations of tasteful homemade soups and stews and an assortment of breads and pastries, all baked on the premises. Also featured on the Fellini's menu is a variety of specialty seafood dishes such as Halibut Florentine, Baked Atlantic Halibut, Lobster fra diavolo and Clambake Fellini.

SEMIOR ADULT BUS TRIP

The next Senior Adult Bus Trip will be to Plymouth t Wednesday, August 23rd. There are 90 seats available. Those who plan to go should arrange for their own lunch. Send name, address and telephone number to Diane Dragoff, c-o Newton Recreation Eepartment, 70 Crescent Street, Auburndale, MA 02166. Seats on this trip will be confirmed by post card.

CARNIVAL DAYS GREAT SUCCESS

The Carnival Days held last week on Newton's Playgrounds were very successful. The youngsters constructed and operated their own carnival games and booths and the amount raised was well over last year's total.

The proceeds will be divided evenly between the Jimmy Fund and the American Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund. The theme of this year's carnivals was "Children Helping Children."

BASEBALL TOURNAMENT

The Newton Recreation Department's Playground Baseball Program will mark Tournament Week from August 6th to the 11th. During this period, the champions of the playgrounds will meet. There are two divisions, Midget and Junior.

BICYCLE IDENTIFICATION PROGRAM

There are still four dates in which Newton cyclists may have their vehicles registered and engraved with identification. The Regi-Cycle Club is sponsored by the Newton Police Explorer Scouts and directed by Newton Police Safety Officers.

Those who take advantage of this program will have their names engraved on both wheels and the frame of their bikes. They will also have two Polaroid pictures taken. One will be encased in a plastic pouch with the name corresponding to the engraving on the wheels and frame. The other photo will be etched on a metal plate that will be sent back to the owner. It may be attached to the bike with bonding material.

The Regi-Cycle Club membership entitles each to a premium discount book for admissions to the Larz Anderson Transportation Museum, Museum of Science and the New England Aquarium. In addition each member will receive a $5,00 discount on a nationally advertised "U" Lock.

The fee for joining the Club is based on the bike. $3.00 for youngsters with 24-inch bikes, $4.00 for 26-inch bikes and 28-inch bikes, and $15.00 for Mopeds and motorcycles.

The program is endorsed by the Massachusetts Secretary of Public Safety, the Massachusetts Chiefs of Police Association and Medical Alert International.

The remaining dates and locations are Saturday, August 5th at the Newton Police Headquarters; Wednesday, August 9th at Burr Park, Newton Corner; Saturday, August 12th at the Newton Police Headquarters; and Wednesday, August 16th at the Hawthorn Playground in Nonantum.

All programs will be held between 9 and 11;30 a.m. on those dates.

AMERICAN "B" SOFTBALL

The "B" Division of the American Softball League is now in the playoffs. In the final standings of regular season play The Knights finished first with a 15-2-1 record followed by the Shamrocks, 11-7-0; Last Chance, 10-7-1 and a tie for fourth between the Heshell Club, 9-7-2 and the ADB Club, 10-8-0.

WEST NEWTON COMMON

Last Thursday the youngsters at the West Newton Common displayed their community concern by sprucing up their playground. The enthusiastic workers supervised by Brian Vallely, Neil Levitan, Debbie Perruzzi and Michael Vaughan included Judy, Tom and Paul Perkins; Glen, Richard, Danny and Chris Nourse and Lynn Daley and Mike Perruzzi.

At the conclusion of the cleanup, the workers received refreshments courtesy of McDonald's of Newton.

Other activities scheduled at the West Newton Common for the week included a bake sale and a Swim-a-Thon to benefit the Jimmy Fund, a miniature golf tournament and field trips to Newton Police Headquarters and Boston's Museum of Science.

NATIONAL DIVISION STANDINGS

The standings in the Newton Recreation Department's Twilight Baseball League National Division as of July 25th were: Boy's Club, 11-2-0; Upper Falls Panthers, 10-5-0; St. Bernard's, 8-6-1; Auburndale Sport Shop, 7-5-1; Newton Centre, 7-7-0; Mosca Club, 4-9-2 and Matthews Club, 1-14-0.

ALL STAR SERIES

Newton and Waltham split this year's All Star Series. Waltham won the first played at Newton by a score of 5 to 3, and Newton won 6 to 5 in the game played at Waltham.

TENNIS CLINIC

The Newton Recreation Department and the Boston Glove are sponsoring a Tennis clinic on Friday, August 11th at the Newton North High School Courts. Two members of the Boston Lobsters will be on hand to provide professional instruction.

TENNIS LESSONS

Free tennis lessons are available on weekdays in various sections of the City. The schedule is as follows: Mondays from 9 to 10:30 a.m. at Newton Highlands and 10:45 a.m. to 12 Noon at Newton Upper Falls, 1 to 4 p.m. at Newton Centre; Tuesdays from 9 a.m. to 12 noon at Hamilton School and 1 to 4 p.m. at Burr Park; Wednesdays from 9 a.m. to 12 noon at Warren Junior High and 1 to 4 p.m. at Cabot Park; Thursdays from 9 a.m. to 12 noon at Memorial School and 1 to 4 p.m. at Burr Park; Fridays from 9 a.m. to 12 noon at Angier School and 1 to 4 p.m. at Burr School.

PLAYGROUND TENNIS TOURNAMENT

The Recreation Department's Annual City-Wide Tennis Tournament is scheduled for Monday, August 7th and Tuesday, August 8th at 9 a.m. at the Newton North High School Courts.

The Midget Division will be open to boys and girls ages 10 to 12 and the Junior Division for boys and girls ages 13, 14 and 15.

Those interested may sign up with their playground tennis instructors Andy Jacobs and Leslie Fitzgerald or at the North High Courts the first morning of the tournament.

No player who has won a sanctioned tournament or who holds a New England Lawn Tennis ranking is eligible for this tournament.

Connors to play at Stowe tourney

Jimmy Connors will play in the English Leather Tennis Grand Prix, Topnotch at Stowe, August 14-20. Connors, fresh from his victory at last weekend's Washington Star Invitational tourney in Washington, D.C., joins the field of prominent touring pros to compete for the title in this $75,000 event, the largest professional cash tennis competition ever held in the state of Vermont.

Connors was 1977's top ranked player in men's tennis, earning $428,919 on the pro tour as he volleyed and smashed his way to three WTC singles titles and reached the finals at Wimbledon, Forest Hills, Philadelphia Grand Prix, WTC Toronto and the Indianapolis Grand Prix. This year, aside from winning the nvitational, Connors again reached the finals at Wimbledon for the fourth time in five years, won WTC titles in Philadelphia and Rotterdam, and captured Grand Prix tourneys in Denver, Memphis and Birmingham to bring his 1978 earnings to more than $200,000.

His performance this year, joined by accomplishments from his past, including singles titles at Wimbledon-1974, Forest Hills-1974, and the 1974 Australian Open, doubles titles (teamed with the colorful Ilie Nastase) at Wimbledon in 1973, the French Open in 1973 and the 1975 US Indoor, surely make Jimmy Connors one of the greatest attractions in tennis today.

The exceptionally strong field in the English Leather Tennis Grand Prix includes Harold Solomon, one of the top-ranked players in the world. Solomon was one of the few men to defeat Connors last year. Peter Fleming and Steve Docherty, both coming off outstanding performances this year at Wimbledon, are also competing.

"Jimmy has committed to play this tourney not only because of his professional and competitive drives, but of his fondness of the Vermont countryside," says English Leather Tennis Grand Prix Tournament Director Marshall Goldberg.

"He is also looking forward to the opportunity to work out on the brand new Deco Turf II surface installed here at Topnotch just for this tournament."

The Deco Turf II playing survace at the new Topnotch facility is the same court surface that will be used at this year's US Open, which is to be held one week following the conclusion of the English Leather Tennis Grand Prix Tournament. The players competing at Topnotch will be served the opportunity to adjust their styles to the new surface with hopes of winning the title at Stowe and getting a week's head start on the competition for the Open.

In addition to the new court surface, a new outdoor tennis stadium, in what is undoubtedly one of the most scenic areas in the United States, is being built at Topnotch. The new outdoor stadium holds 4,888 spectators and expectations are for one of the finest professional tennis tournaments of the year, set against a classic New England backdrop.

Billy Martin - why the turnaround?

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Now that it's all over and the two of them are buddy-buddy again following a surrealistic chain of events which kept swinging somewhere between sheer farce and pure fantasy, everyone has the same question.

Why?

Why did George Steinbrenner, ordinarily a tough, iron-willed individual with rocklike resolve, suddenly turn around after firing Billy Martin as manager of his New York Yankees' ball club and hire him back again five days later?

People are asking some other questions, too.

Like, what happens to Reggie Jackson now?

And will Billy Martin actually ever take over as manager again 18 months from now?

But, let's get back to the first one: What made George Steinbrenner change his mind?

The answer isn't quite as simple as it was made out to be in the news conference immediately following Saturday's Old Timers' Day celebration at Yankee Stadium.

One of the aspects which wasn't even mentioned, mostly because both men considered it strictly private, was the mutual oath Steinbrenner and Martin took together one day last week.

It concerns Billy Martin's health.

The former and future Yankee manager can't really be called a sick man but he has a condition, which if not properly taken care of, could appreciably shorten his life.

Within the past year, doctors discovered a spot on his liver and told him it probably came from drinking. They also told him he could help the condition if he quit drinking.

By ordinary standards, Billy Martin isn't a big drinker. I know a number of baseball men who drink twice as much as he does and it may be that they have liver problems also, but the majority of them weren't under the same continuous stress as Martin.

As manager of the Yankees, Billy Martin felt the pressure of his job every day, the same way he felt it in the days he played second base for the Yankees. Some of those pressures as manager were relieved with a couple of drinks after a tough ball game.

Steinbrenner became aware of Martin's health problem only recently. When they talked about Martin's coming back this past week, the Yankee owner came up with an idea to help Martin.

They'd lick Martin's problem together, Steinbrenner said. He would help Martin, but only on one condition — that he, meaning Martin, make a genuine conscious effort to help himself.

Should baseball writers also work as official scorers?

By PETER MAY
UPI Sports Writer

BOSTON (UPI) — There comes a time when baseball, the most tradition-conscious of American sports, must change.

It did so when the National League allowed the Dodgers to abandon Ebbetts Field and move west, leading to a migration unsurpassed since John Sutter found some gold out there.

It again changed when the American League instituted the designated hitter, a move that has been criticized in some circles.

It's time for another change, but this one has only little bearing on what goes on inside the baselines. It's time to put an end to writers using their alleged expertise and acumen as official scorers.

Never mind that writers and players enjoy a symbiotic relationship, the former depending on the latter for information needed to perform his job. Never mind that baseball is the only major sport that allows writers to be official scorers. Never mind that an error is an error, unless it's committed in Fenway Park.

The writers simply do not do that good a job and lack the objectivity needed in such a statistics-conscious sport as baseball.

Writers who score games are supposed to be those who have an eye for baseball. They must watch about 100 games a year for three years to qualify, and then are selected by the local chapter of the Baseball Writers Association with the blessing of the league.

Many major newspapers, such as the Boston Globe, do not allow their writers to be official scorers. Others are the New York Times, the Los Angeles Times and major dailies in several big league cities.

The writers who decide a passed ball is not a wild pitch and a hit is not an error are paid $50 a game by the league, not an unpleasant amount to make a few judgment calls a game and submit their report to the league.

The need for an overhaul was evidenced last weekend, when the Red Sox and Kansas City Royals played a three game series. In Friday night's game, Rick Burleson made a low throw to first and was charged with an error. The next day the scorer changed his mind, as is his power, giving the error to George Scott.

In Saturday's game, Fred Lynn hit a tailor-made double play ball to Freddie Patek, one of the surest fielding shortstops in the league. Patek booted the ball and was correctly charged with an error. But the scorer changed his mind, gave Lynn a hit, and an RBI. The change came quietly and many writers were not told of it. When they found out, they could not believe it.

In a recent game with the Yankees, Scott booted a ball hit right to him and was given an error. The next batter hit another bouncer to the Boomer, almost a replay of the first, and he booted it again. The batter was given a hit.

Aside from the cases mentioned above, there are numerous examples of writers making bad calls all year in every city, usually in favor of the team they cover.

The umpires union and the writers support a proposal to have five-man crews cover a game with the fifth arbiter used as the official scorer. It is a proposal that merits close scrutiny.

Baseball, however, may be reluctant to cough up the estimated $400,000 it will cost for such a proposal. It now costs the leagues about $105,000 a year to pay writers $50 to cover a game.

Surely any change which would add professionalism and remove writers from the scoring scene altogether would be a most-welcome addition to the national pasttime.

At Viking camp

MANKATO, Minn. (UPI) — Running back Rickey Young and veteran defensive tackle Alan Page reported Monday to the Minnesota Vikings' training camp and both practiced during the afternoon.

Tight end Bob Tucker was the only casualty from the day's practice. He suffered a strained left knee.

Yankee shifts

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Yankees rejuggled their lineup Monday night, putting Thurman Munson back behind the plate and Reggie Jackson back in right field.

The switch is a result of the return from the disabled list of shortstop Bucky Dent, who was suffering from hamstring problems. To make room for Dent on the roster, the Yankees sent catcher Mike Heath to New Haven.

Track and field championships

The Waltham Recreation Department in conjunction with The Waltham Track Club and the Waltham Savings Bank today announced that The All New England Track and Field Championships will be held on August 26 and 27 at 10 a.m. at Marcus Field, Brandeis University in Waltham. # Pfister outlasts Garcia in Volvo Tournament

NORTH CONWAY, N.H. (UPI) — It he had gone to breakfast any earlier, Hank Pfister would have been the player eliminated from the second round of the $175,000 Volvo International Tennis Championships, rather the intial entry into the third round.

But a well-timed telephone call allowed the 24-year-old Pfister of Bakersfield, Calif. to barely beat the default deadline of his morning match Tuesday. He survived early problems to capture a 6-7, 6-4, 6-0 victory over Tim Garcia of Albuquerque, N.M.

"I had woken up a little before 10 o'oclock and for some reason I was really awake," recalled the lanky, six-foot-two Pfister. "I was really psyched up so I told my wife Kim, 'lets go eat breakfast' then the phone rang."

On the other end of the line was a conscientious tournament official asking if Pfister planned to make his 10 a.m. second-round match with Garcia.

"I knew Garcia hadn't played yesterday, but I'd forgotten he had a bye into the second round," said Pfister, who gained national attention in May when beat Arthur Ashe, Jimmy Connors and Roscoe Tanner on his way to the semi-finals of the Alan King Classic.

"So I had no breakfast, nothing. The only reason I made the match on time was because I took a helicopter over to the courts from the hotel. It was getting off roller skates, not exactly the best way to start a match," he said.

Despite the lack of preparation, Pfister fought Garcia to a first set tiebreaker, but lost the last six points to drop the opening set.

"I said I'd just tough it out after that," said Pfister, who won the next two sets 6-4, 6-0.

Stan Smith, meanwhile, probably wished he had overslept, as his day turned into a bad dream at the hands of Bruce Manson of Los Angeles, 6-4, 6-1.

"I just can't seem to get it going," said the 13th-seeded Smith, who along with eighthseeded Ken Rosewall were Tuesday's seeded losers. "I thought I played pretty well the first set, but he did too. After he won that, he seemed to get better and better."

Smith's downfall was his low percentage of good first serves and Manson was quick to jump on the second offerings.

"I just had no rhythm on the serves," said Smith.

In other matches ninth-seeded and defending champion John Alexander beat fellow Austrialin Paul Kronk 6-4, 6-1; fourthseeded Corrado Barazzutti disposed of Rod Fawnley of Australia 3-6, 6-0, 6-3 and fifthseeded Harold Solomon beat North Carolina State graduate John Sadri 6-4, 7-5.

Seventh-seeded Wojtek Fibak, of Poland, ousted Australian Cliff Letcher 6-4, 6-3; Hans Gildemeister stopped Nick Saviano 7-6, 6-1; tenth-seeded Arthur Ashe rolled over Australian John Bartlett 6-2, 6-2; and 11th-seeded Jaime Fillol defeated South African Bernie Mitton 6-3, 0-6, 6-2.

Payoff for Pat Bradley

— For two days Pat Bradley faltered on the final holes. On the third day she lectured herself and it paid off when she won the fifth annual $60,000 Hoosier Classic, the latest stop on the LPGA tour.

Bradley, winning for only the second time this year, closed out Sunday with a 4-under-par 68 over the Plymouth Country Club course for a 54-hole of 206, 10-under-par.

That tied the lowest score on the tour this year and netted her $9,000.

Bradley trailed leader Marlene Hagge by a single stroke going into the final round.

"It was a close race all the way, until I birdied the 16th hole," she said. "I had trouble the previous two days on the closing holes and I felt the tourney would be won or lost on the final holes.

"I just told myself, 'let's play harder.'"

She did, and her 68 tied the final day's best round.

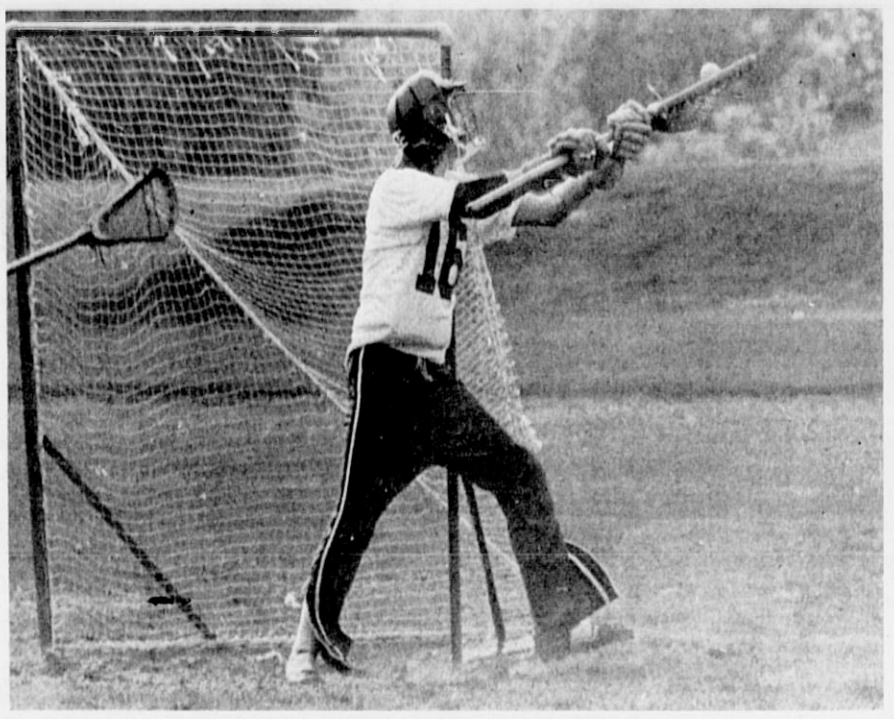

JoAnne Carner, the first-day leader, had a final-round 71 to finish three strokes behind the winner — the second week in a row that she came in second. Last week she tied for runnerup honors behind Hollis Stacy in the U.S. Women's Open at Indianapolis.

Three other veterans were next: Mickey Wright, with a closing 69, was third at 211, followed by Kathy Whitworth and Hagge at 212.

Hagge soared to 75 on the final round.

Dot Germain, with the other 68 Sunday, tied Jan Stephenson at 214. Jane Blalock, M.J. Smith and Betty Burfeindt were next at 215 and at even-par 216 were Bonnie Bryant and Clifford Ann Creed.

Bradley said the tourney's turning point was on No. 16, a par-3, 150-yard hole, which she birdied. Hagge took a bogey, giving Bradley a two-stroke lead.

Steve Simon, son of Dr. and Mrs. Harold Simon of 111 Hammondswood Rd., Chestnut Hill, was named a varsity letter winner on the 1978 Haverford College varsity lacrosse team. The starting goaltender for the Fords, Simon was instrumental in compiling Haverford's 10-4 final record. In the last two years he has been nationally ranked in goalie efficiency. Stated Coach Dana Swan, "Through a lot of hard work he has become an unusually dependable netminder." Simon is a religion major at Haverford.

'String enough good days together'

How two young people tested their resources after becoming handicapped

By ELEANOR SIEGEL
In Focus Editor

As young, healthy people, Lydia Maloof of Hyde Park and Daniel Johnson of Dedham were both brutally thrust into the world of the physically handicapped. The experience put the severest test to their resources.

Johnson was "blown apart" in Vietnam near the Cambodian border in 1969. At the time he was 20 years old. "One ear was almost totally destroyed and 40 percent of the other ear was damaged. The sounds which he hears are mainly garbled, thus he listens by reading lips.

A pin holds his arm and he "lost some basic parts" in his stomach." The nerve endings in his hand were severed. Today he suffers recurring physical problems such as lesions and ulcers in addition to having a "piece of metal moving inside."

"You string enough good days together—you can't let it dominate your existence," shrugs Johnson who was married in March, 1977. It is not an instant philosophy, it is one he has worked hard to achieve.

Ms. Maloof, 24, had a spinal tumor removed last fall after undergoing roughly 12 hours of surgery which left her temporarily paralyzed. When she awoke, she discovered that there were three possibilities—either she would not be able to walk or she would walk only with braces or crutches or she would "come out o.k., and walk with a limp."

For her the surgery was the culmination of eight years of pain. She had been routed from doctor to doctor receiving exercises, pills and at one point advice to "buy a sports car, move into an apartment and take a trip." One doctor even attributed her constant back pain to the weather.

Ultimately, the growing tumor forced a physcial emergency and was revealed through a milogram. After surgery, at first she was relieved because she was "vindicated psychologically." Although the physical cause was now known, new problems emerged.

Some of the situations which Ms. Maloof encountered, Johnson never did. For example, she had to find out what services could provide help for her when she was released from the hospital. Since Johnson was in the service at the time of his injury, he had "everything I needed and I didn't have to pay." If he had, the tab8 would have been in excess of $300,000.

However, he recognizes that for civilians like Ms. Maloof, the problem can be formidable. "It is an argument for integration of services," observed Johnson, adding "the average person doesn't know where to go and when they do get some service, it is fragmentary.", Ms. Maloof returned to her parents' home. "I was in a once familiar environment, but I was now physically different. She had to "fight with" hospital personnel to obtain a visiting nurse so she would not have to be alone all day. At first, hospital personnel were unaware of what services were available. Only because of Ms. Maloof's persistence did a social worker finally call the Visiting Nurse's Association.

"It is an unknown bureaucracy," says Johnson, "where you get the runaround." Johnson returned to college after service and graduated from Curry College with a BA in sociology and a BA in history. He went on to Brandeis to receive an MA in human services administration.

Daniel Johnson of Dedham

He commented that the problems Ms. Maloof faced were not unusual. "Volunteer agencies are not well funded and many times the person is left hanging...the social worker plays the game of making someone eligible for a program knowing he will lose something else."

But not being able to get services is only part of the picture, says Johnson. The psychological trauma is great. There are frustrations ahead for someone facing a handicap and they must be encouraged. "If you are in a soft environment, you give up and lose the desire to do for yourself rather than face the frustration."

Initially patients want to work and then there is a point where "you want to give up...there has to be a combination of honey and vinegar."

A person born with a handicap, observed Johnson, "learns to work around it...they adapt to it, but a healthy person must go through a self-reappraisal and often it comes out negative on their part."

There are tough life issues to confront. Ms. Maloof pointed out that as a young woman just forming relationships with men, she began to wonder if she would have a career or if she would marry. In addition, at the beginning she lost her independence for not being able to walk, she had no mobility and had to rely on people to take her places.

They also had to face their own mortality. Johnson explained "I used to wonder how long I could live—if I had a different life expectancy—I no longer think about it."

"Before this happened, I never thought about what handicapped people need or want," acknowledged Ms. Maloof. Suddenly there seemed like all kinds of obstacles from the simple, how to carry a handbag that was fashionable while walking with braces, to the complex—how to handle public reaction over her handicap.

"Many people, when they see someone handicapped, they think you must also not be able to communicate.

Johnson agreed this is a problem and said that people should not treat handicapped people in a patronizing way. "Don't treat them like children. They are adults and all they want to do is be productive...we must stop making handicapped people not want to contribute."

Lydia Maloof of Hyde Park

People with "invisible" handicaps suffer also said Johnson. For instance, people thought he was "unfriendly" because he did not hear them. It was difficult for him to tell them for "it is very hard to admit some part of your body doesn't function the way it used to."

"Anyone can overcome a physical handicap," avers Johnson. But it takes assistance from people who are often struggling with guilt because they are normal, he noted.

"I got through because of my family and friends... I always knew they were there," said Ms. Maloof. She said they delivered the message "I have worth, I am necessary."

"If you are lonely, depressed and apathetic," she says, "it will work against you." Today, her doctor feels "all signals are go and I will get better...I am working with one crutch now and I feel it will be possible to get rid of the crutches...the timetable is about a year," she said.

In the meantime, to prove that she could live a full life, she decided to vacation in Martinique, a decision which made her aware of what she could accomplish if she wanted to. The trip also made her acutely aware of what is needed to integrate the handicapped into society so they can have access to airplanes, bathrooms and restaurants—even physical activities. Both praised legislation mandating the "mainstreaming" of handicapped people.

Not having the handicapped "isolated," is important said Ms. Maloof. Johnson emphasized getting the "public to accept handicapped people—there is no reason to feel sorry or solicitious for them."

THE READERS WRITE.. Diane Taylor

This is the reader's column and readers are invited to send recipes or questions to Diane Taylor, c-o Transcript Newspapers, 420 Washington St., Dedham, Mass. 02026.

Dear Diane: I am looking for some good recipes f country style spareribs, especially for the barbecu
Mrs. M.M., Westwo

Dear Mrs. M.M., Here is what are some recip and a hint. Before grilling spareribs, parboil th for 30 minutes. Grill 30-40 min. Parboiling keeps ri moist and juicy and shortens grilling time.

COUNTRY STYLE SPARE RIBS
(Double this sauce and freeze — it will always be on hand)
4 lb. country style spare ribs
¾ cup finely chopped onions
1 cup catsup
1 cup chili sauce
1 cup water
½ cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons brown sugar
2 tablesoons sugar
1 tablespoon dry mustard
1 clove garlic, mashed (optional)
1 teaspoon salt
dash of pepper

Cut ribs in serving pieces; place in roasting pa Bake at 375 degrees F. for 45 minutes. Drain fa reserving two tablespoons. Saute onions in reserve fat; set aside. Combine remaining ingredients i sauce pan; bring to a boil. Add onions; simmer 2 min. Pour sauce over ribs. Bake at 350 degrees F. fo one hour, basting with sauce. Serves five.

BARBECUED SPARERIBS (Chinese style)
Preparation time: 15 minutes; Cooling time: 4 minutes
Ingredients for 4:
12 single pork spareribs (cut into individual servin pieces)
4 tablespoons clear honey
3 tablespoons soy sauce
3 tablespoons tomato ketchup
Tabasco sauce
1 small clove garlic
Dry mustard
Paprika
Salt and black pepper
Juice of 1 small orange ,
4 tablespoons wine vinegar

Broil the ribs for 10-15 minutes under a preheate broiler until they are brown, turning them severa times. Arrange them in a single layer in a larg roasting pan and pour in the pan juices.

Put the honey, soy sauce, tomato ketchup, and a few drops of Tabasco sauce into a bowl. Season t taste with the dry mustard, paprika, salt, and freshly ground pepper, then add the orange juice and wine vinegar. Mix, then pour over the spareribs.

Cook, uncovered in the center of preheated oven at 350F for 30 minutes. Serve the ribs piping hot in the sauce.

KITCHEN CORNER

Vary the foods you grill in summer and appetites will never grow jaded. After you have run through beef, pork, sausages, chicken, then try fish which can be very appealing not only to fishermen and fisherwomen, but to all who delight in outdoorsy aroma of food cooked on charcoal.

While we have given recipes for red snapper, there are a variety of choices among lean fish. Among these flounder, halibut, sea bass, sole and swordfish will qualify. So will catfish, yellow or ocean perch, bluefish, haddock or hake.

Crabmeat makes delicious fondue or even a different Italian dish.

If you are grilling the fish, they will not smoke impossibly on the grill. Baste with sauce before and during the grilling. They will be done quickly.

Use a hinged grill that holds the fish on both sides since the tender meat flakes easily. After brushing with butter sauce, then heat the remainder and serve as a "pass along" so nothing is wasted.

Serve the fish with buttered corn on the cob, almond coleslaw (recipe included) and buttered garlic bread. Dessert can be a strawberry sundae or ice cream cones.

ALMOND COLESLAW
8 (approx. ¾ cup) servings
1 cup dairy sour cream
2 tablespoons vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon dry mustard
4 cups shredded cabbage (1 small head)
¾ cup thinly sliced and halved cucumber
½ cup sliced almonds
½ cup chopped celery, cut in ½-inch pieces
¼ cup chopped green pepper
¼ cup chopped onion

In a bowl blend sour cream, vinegar, salt and mustard. Cover and chill. In a large bowl combine cabbage, cucumber, almonds, celery, green pepper and onion; cover and chill. Just before serving add dressing to vegetables and toss lightly.

GRILLED RED SNAPPER
6 to 8 servings
½ cup (1 stick) butter
¼ cup lemon juice
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon onion salt
2 pounds red snapper
Chopped parsley

Melt butter in a 1-quart saucepan; add lemon juice, Worcestershire sauce and onion salt; mix well; remove from heat. Place fish in hinged wire grill. Grill, basting occasionally with sauce for 5 to 8 minutes on each side turning only once, or until fish flakes when tested with a fork. Heat remaining sauce and serve with fish.

[Note: This butter sauce may also be used with other lean, firm fish such as pike. Fish may also be broiled in your oven as follows: Brush both sides of fish with sauce. Broil 2 inches from source of heat for 7 to 8 minutes, basting occasionally with sauce, or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Do not turn fish.

Crab "Italiane"
1 pound crabmeat (claw or regular)
¼ cup chopped celery
¼ cup oil
1½ cans condensed tomato soup
1 soup can water
2 tablespoons instant minced onion
1 teaspoon parsley flakes
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon hot sauce
‡ teaspoon garlic powder
¼ cup dry sherry
8 ounces spaghetti
Grated Parmesan-Romano cheese, for topping

Remove all cartilage from crabmeat.

In medium-size pan, saute celery in oil until tender. Add all ingredients through hot sauce and simmer for 1 hour. Add crabmeat and sherry; simmer 5 minutes.

Cook and drain spaghetti according to package directions. Put on platter and pour sauce over it. Sprinkle with cheese. Serve at once. Makes 4 generous servings.

Crab Fondue
1 pound crabmeat
1 8-ounce package cream cheese
1 6-ounce package Guyere, cheese, grated
½ cup milk
¼ teaspoon lemon and pepper seasoning
¼ cup sherry
Salt and pepper, to taste
French bread cut into 1-1½ inch cubes

Remove all cartilage from crabmeat.

In fondue pot, set on low, combine cheeses, milk, seasonings and sherry. Stir until blended and smooth. Add crabmeat and heat, stirring occasionally, until hot and bubbly, 5 to 10 minutes.

For serving, spear cubes of bread with fondue fork and swirl in figure-eight motion. If fondue thickens on standing, stir in a little additional milk or sherry. Makes about 4 cups fondue.

Note: If you do not have a fondue pot, mixture may be made in a double boiler anddeither served from that or transferred to a chafing dish.

Newton Day Care Centers offer three programs for fall

The Newton Day Care Centers offer an exciting program to all children of parents who need day care for reasons of work, school, or health.

The major goal is to provide a warm and nurturing environment to promote the social, emotional, intellectual and physical development of each child in accordance with his or her individual needs and abilities.

Differences in rates of maturation, interest and personality are respected at all times.

The centers are structured to enable each child to maximize his-her potential through noncompetitive experiences.

Learning areas guide the children into self-initiated discoveries. As a result, teachers do not function as the sole dispensers of knowledge, but create an environment in which the knowledge and information is available.

Activities include active and quiet play, indoor and outdoor play, art, woodworking, dramatic play, music, creative movement, sand and water play, table games, reading, block building, and cooking.

The preschools and infant-toddler centers have a nutritious lunch and snack program. Field trips are also planned.

The teaching staff consists of men and women of varying ages who are warm, competent people, well-trained in early childhood education. Our staff-child ratio is 1:5 in the preschool centers, 1:8 in the after school care center, and 1:3 in the infant-toddler center.

Preschool centers are for children ages 2.9 to 6 years. All children must be toilet trained.

Locations are Newton Corner Day Care, United Presbyterian Church, 75 Vernon St., Newton Corner, and Newton Center Day Care, Sacred Heart Church, 80 Crescent Ave., Newton Center. The hours are Monday-Friday, 7:30 a.m.-6 p.m.

After school care is for children in first through fifth grade at the Pomroy House, 84 Eldredge St., Newton Corner. The hours are 3-6 p.m. daily and 1-6 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday.

The infant-toddler center is for children ages 3 months to 2.9 years at the Auburndale Congregational Church, 64 Hancock St., Auburndale, 8 a.m.-6 p.m.

Children are accepted on a five day a week basis only in all centers. Applications are being accepted at the Newton Community Service Centers, Inc., in West Newton.

Spaces are presently available in all four programs, but we anticipate a full enrollment by the fall. For more information csll 969-5906.

Expectant Parents' course at N-W Hospital

A course designed to make childbirth as satisfying as possible is being offered at the Newton-Wellesley Hospital to expectant parents. It meets on a continuing basis one evening a week for six weeks.

The course includes discussion of late pregnancy, labor and delivery, medication and anesthesia, Caesarian section, and new developments such as the Leboyer method and birthing rooms.

It also covers fetal monitoring, induction, newborns, breast and bottle feeding, and rooming-in. Participants see films, demonstrations of equipment, and tour the hospital's maternity and nursery units. They may practise body toning exercises, breathing and relaxation techniques and other comfort measures for labor.

Most of the expectant parents taking the course plan to deliver at Newton-Wellesley, but it is not a requirement. Tax deductible tuition for the course is $30. Coordinator Greta Delaney suggests that parents take the course eight weeks before their baby is expected, and that couples or pregnant women enroll early as registration is limited to 20 per class. Each class will arrange a convenient night for meeting.

For further information, call 964-2800, ext.281.

Pat O'Brien: Old trouper with a lot of fight left

By LILLIAN O'CONNELL
UPI Life-Style Editor

SHANNON, Ireland (UPI) — The blue eyes and grin are the same and so there is no difficulty recognizing Pat O'Brien as he sits half hidden by his fans in the lounge at the Shannon Shamrock hotel, not far from the airport.

We have just gotten off a flight from London, landing one hour late, and he is waiting for us. The 78-year-old veteran of 106 movies has a cane at his side. "This weather doesn't do my arthritis any good," a reference to the rain outside, known locally as Irish mist.

So how goes it, Pat, we inquire, raising a glass in toast. But O'Brien is discussing peacocks. "They kill rattlesnakes, you know. Now there's a little trivia for you."

A strange subject for snakefree Ireland.

Then someone muses about possible peacock victims, and O'Brien says, "There are a few agents in Hollywood I'd like to set them on." May I quote you? "Quote me. All the way," he chuckles, sipping his brandy.

O'Brien, who lives in Brentwood, Calif., with his wife of 47 years, Eloise, is on his way to Killarney to receive an award from the Ancient Order of Hibernians. He has been touring the Shannon and County Clare areas, home of the O'Brien kings of Ireland who drove successive waves of invading Norsemen into the sea.

Currently appearing in the Burt Reynolds' film, "The End," in which Myrna Loy and he play Reynolds' mother and father, Pat's most famous movie roles, such as Knute Rockne, coach of the Notre Dame "Fighting Irish," and Father Duffy of the 69th Regiment, featured Irish personalities or affiliations, as did his television series back in the early sixties, "Harrigan and Son."

One of his most famous roles was as a priest opposite his long-time friend James Cagney in "Angels With Dirty Faces."

His wife also is part Irish. "And part English, God forgive her. And part French. So she's got a triumvirate of ethnic backgrounds. She had to have something to stay 47 years with me."

How do you live together 47 years? "Well, you've heard of the sixth sense? The sixth sense is a sense of humor and that's what does it," he says, pointing out that his is not the only longlasting Hollywood marriage.

"Cagney's been married 54 years, the Robert Youngs, 46 years, Irene Dunne, 50 years. But who wants to read about happy people?"

O'Brien spent 11 years on Broadway and in stock before Howard Hughes brought him to Hollywood in 1931 to play Hildy Johnson, the fast-talking, anything-for-a-story Chicago newspaper reporter in Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur's "The Front Page." Born in Milwaukee, he grew up with Spencer Tracy for a friend.

Strange as it sounds, there never was a better time to have cerebral palsy.

At long last, the simple rights of ordinary people are becoming the rights of handicapped people.

The right to public education. The right to non-discrimination in jobs. The right to ride on buses and airlines. The right to get into public buildings. The right to get out of institutions and into apartments, group homes and other living centers.

Nice to see you, Mr. Lincoln. As recently as 1978, persons in wheelchairs had only a distant view of the Lincoln statue in the Lincoln Memorial, Washington. Nowadays an elevator brings them as close as anyone else.

These rights are the stuff not of air, but of laws—laws made necessary because the rights of the handicapped were denied, or withheld, or given the back of the hand.

The laws were lobbied for, fought for in the courts, picketed for and sat-in for. In courtrooms and offices, in homes and on the streets, United Cerebral Palsy stood with the handicapped in these struggles.

Important as the laws are, they only begin to give the handicapped their due. The rest depends on the hearts and consciences of people—on your heart, and your conscience. Give understanding. Give good will. Give money.

Remember: When you give, you help people live like human beings.

A new role for cruise missile?

By ROBERT KAYLOR

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tiny cruise missiles, which a year ago were the downfall of the B-1 bomber, now are beginning to make fighter pilots nervous about their jobs.

Less than 20 feet long, the highly accurate, pilotless jets are already well on their way to becoming a major strategic weapon in the 1980s. Between 3,500 and 7,000 of them would be carried by B-52 bombers, and possibly aboard adaptations of wide-bodied jetliners.

Nuclear-armed versions are also being developed for ground, ship and submarine launching. Beyond that, defense officials are now looking at still another potential use in nonnuclear warfare.

Last April a fillip was added to the computerized terrain "map" that guides the Tomahawk, one of two cruise missile types that will compete for the bomber-launched role. It was a photo of a desert airstrip "target" that could be matched up with the actual view seen by an electronic eye in the missile's belly.

Nicknamed "Smack" (for Scene Matching Area Correlation), the photo system enabled the Tomahawk to zero in on the airstrip after an 800-mile flight with greater accuracy than ever before, dumping dummy bombs squarely across it.

It was the sort of precision bombing normally done by skilled fighter pilots. It brought raves of "remarkable" from senior officers. And it also started shock waves among military power groups who remember President Carter's decision to cancel the B-1 in favor of cruise missiles.

"People who fly airplanes are nervous," said one source involved in the program, "because it points to the direction of at least reducing their jobs if not someday eliminating them."

As one example, the source said, there had been "quite a bit of support for the groundlaunched cruise missile in the Tactical Air Command until some beancounters in (Defense Secretary Harold) Brown's office suggested they might replace two wings of F-111 fighter-bombers."

Far-reaching effects wouldn't involve the Air Force alone. Sources say the Navy, spearheaded by its senior weapons expert, undersecretary James Woolsey, is starting to look into using the small missiles with aircraft or possibly even launching them directly from aircraft carriers, a potential space and money saver.

The subject is sensitive enough so that Woolsey declined to discuss it at a time when Congress is considering another large-deck supercarrier for the Navy. The Air Force's chief of staff, Gen. Lew Allen, isn't as reluctant.

Allen sees no wholesale threat to piloted planes, which fly much faster, do many jobs that include fighting other airplanes, and can be used more than once. But he also considers "massive" Soviet air defenses that are now deadlier in Europe than the strategic attack route across the northern borders of Russia.

"If the defenses are heavy and we're going to be losing men and $15 million airplanes, the expense of $1 million cruise missiles may not be so bad," he says.

James B. Angelus

James B. Angelus of Waban died Wednesday (July 26) after a long illness.

A native of Greece Mr. Angelus was educated in Dimitsana, Greece and attended the Athens Gymnasion. He came to the United States in 1912 when he was 23 and worked in the markets and slaughterhouses in Sommerville. Eventually, he owned his own business, the Boston Baking Co. on Washington Street in Boston' from 1925 to 1949.

Among his numerous activities, Mr. Angelus was a charter member of the Athens Chapter of Ahepa, Boston; charter member of the Cathedral of Boston and the St. Demetrios Church, Newton.

He was a corporator of Security Trust Associates, an investment group of Hellenes, started in 1929.

A resident of Waban for 40 years, Mr. Angelus was a benefactor to numerous charitable organizations.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Aspasia Angelus; three daughters, Mrs. Anita Koulopoulos of Sudbury, Mrs. . Mary Philopoulos of Canton and Mrs. Mina Marken of Southborough; two sons, William of Waltham and Nicholas of Centreville, Va.

Services were held Friday (July 28) in the Greek Cathedral of Boston. Burial is in Newton Cemetery.

Mary Rosoff

Private funeral services were held last week for Mary R. Rosoff.

Mrs. Rosoff, 95, of Newton died Thursday (July 27) in a Newton nursing home.

Mrs. Rosoff came to the United States in 1900 and was the wife of the late Boston restauranteur Frank Rosoff.

She was a life member of Beth Israel Hospital, Jewish Rehabilitation Center, Jewish Memorial Hospital and Boston Aid to the Blind. She was also a member of Hadassah, Jewish Vocational Aid Society, National Council of Jewish Women, Brandeis University Women's Auxiliary, Jewish Health Society, Sisterhood of Temple Ohabai Shalom of Brookline.

Mrs. Rosoff lived in Brookline from 1923 until 1975.

She is survived by her daughter, Mrs. Gerald Laskin of Longmeadow; two sons, Sylvan and Arnold, both of Newton; six grandchildren, three great-grandchildren; and one great-great-granddaughter.

Burial is in the Baker Street Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Mary E. Falvey

A funeral mass was said Wednesday (Aug. 2) in St. Bernard's Church for Mrs. Mary E. (Gavin) Falvey.

Mrs. Falvey, 82, of West Newton, died Saturday (July 29) in a Mattapan nursing home after a long illness.

A resident of West Newton for more than 40 years, she was a member of St. Bernard's Ladies Sodality.

Widow of Frank J. Falvey, Mrs. Falvey is survived by her son, Frank J. of Medford; her daughter, Mrs. Maryann Shea of Canton; and six grandchildren.

Burial is in St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Stella Renaud

A funeral mass was said Wednesday (Aug. 2) in Notre Dame Church, Pittsfield, for Mrs. Stella (Avalle) Renaud.

Mrs. Renaud, 89, of Newton, died Sunday (July 30) in a Wellesley nursing home. She lived in Pittsfield for 70 years before moving to Newton six years ago.

Widow of George E. Renaud, Mrs. Renaud is survived by her daughter, Mrs. Wilfred Dery of Newton; a sister, Mrs. Evelyn Greenwood of St. Petersburg, Fla.; two grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Frederick Steglich

Memorial services will be held Saturday, Aug. 12, at 2 p.m. in Wilmington, Del., for Frederick C. Steglich.

Mr. Steglich, 86, a longtime resident of Waban, died Saturday (July 29) in St. Francis Hospital, Wilmington, after a long illness.

Mr. Steglich retired in 1957 as district sales manager of the Atlas Plywood Corp. of Boston.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Edna K. Steglich; his daughter, Ruth S. Bismore of Wilmington; three grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Services will be at the home of Paden F. Bismore.

Herbert Kestle

Herbert W. Kestle died in St. Augustine, Fla., Tuesday, July 25, after a short illness.

He retired in 1964 as vice president and personnel officer after 42 years with the Newton-Waltham Bank & Trust Co.

A native of Massachusetts, he moved from Newton Highlands to Cape Cod and from there to St. Augustine in 1973.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Vivian Kestle.

William Stanley seeks election from 10th District

State Rep. William J. Stanley formally announced today his bid for reelection to the Massachusetts House of Representatives from the newly created 10th Middlesex District comprised of north Newton and south Waltham.

Stanley feels that his constituency work is equally rewarding as the legislative success he has gained over the past two years. "The very nature of the district dictates an enormous amount of constituent work by the state representative. The fact that I was able to assist hundreds of people in a personal manner during the past two years has been extremely rewarding," Stanley said.

Stanley, in his second term as a Waltham city councillor, was elected to the House of Representatives in 1976 and has since devoted all his time to government. Prior to his election he was employed by Raytheon Electronics in industrial managenment.

Stanley is a member of the Committee on Urban Affairs, which he says "controls the pursestrings" of the Department of Community Affairs, the administrative body of all the public and elderly housing in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Urban Affairs also guides policy and priorities within that department.

"In 1977," Stanley said, mainly through our committee work, a bill was passed for $100 million to be devoted to the builing of housing for the elderly and handicapped in the Commonwealth. These monies will supply 4000 units of housing. The initial reward for the Newton-Waltham area has been recently received via a grant of $1.2 million for each community that will furnish 40 units for each city. Newton and Waltham were two of . 16 communities that received awards out of 125 that applied."

Other legislation Stanley has worked on or cosponsored included a bill providing for the development of home care services for the elderly; a bill providing for a program of special needs in the Department of Elder Affairs; legislation making changes in alcoholism insurance coverage; a bill that would establish the rights of patients and residents in hospitals, clinics and certain other facilities; legislation that wuold benefit the blind homeowner; and a bill that would allow property tax relief to certain people over the age of 65.

In citing his 99 percent roll call record of attendance Representative Stanley said, "It's not enough just to be there all the time pulling that lever that says yes or no, it's the study and rationale of each vote that really matters."

"Property tax relief holds the highest priority among the people of the Commonwealth, and my votes on the matter were done so after a great deal of study. Given the alternatives we had to offer that relief, I voted for full court funding by the state and the school educational formula, as it would provide over $2 million for Newton.

"I did not vote for the circuit-breaker form of relief as my fellow incumbent opponent did in May of this year. Circuitbreaker legislation was termed as the most irresponsible vote by our elected representatives in recent decades by the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation."

Stanley voted against Proposition 2 ½ in its present form because he found after intensive investigation it would only help four communities in the Commonwealth. "The dire need for property tax relief is still present, but Proposition 2 ½ is not the answer," he said. If the legislation were imposed, Newton would have to come up with about $30 million to maintain the services that exist today, Stanley said.

Stanley voted for a bill that would allow the Public Utilities Commission an additional four months to investigate Edison rate increases and for working a five-day week in the Legislature. Another challenger for the 10th Middlesex seat apologized recently for her mistake in saying otherwise.

Representative Stanley is vice president of the Waltham Democratic City Committee, and has been active in school, religious, and civic organizations. Stanley and his wife, the former Roberta Bryson, and their five children live at 52 Derby St., Waltham.

Mofenson watches Sen. Long for action on welfare reform

David J. Mofenson (D-Newton), House chairman of the Committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs, said that the eyes of state legislators concerned about the need for national welfare reform are focused on the Sen. Russell B. Long (D-La.), chairman of the influential Senate Finance Committee.

"Sen. Long has the power to help forge a compromise and lift the burden of welfare costs off the states or permit the year-long efforts of welfare advocates in and out of Congress to go down the drain," Mofenson said.

"I hope that the newest bill, introduced by Senators Daniel P. Moynihan (D-N.Y.) and Alan Cranston (D-Calif.) will be given full consideration and that Congress will not adjourn before passing a substantive welfare reform bill."

The Cranston-Moynihan compromise bill has three key sections: expanded tax credits for the working poor, tax credits for employers who hire welfare recipients, and fiscal relief for states and localities.

Mofenson noted that there are other versions of federal welfare reform legislation being worked on in Congress, some he said which "contain not only fiscal relief provisions but would bring about some substantive structural reforms as well." One proposal cited by Mofenson would provide $400 million in temporary fiscal relief to states for fiscal 1979 alone. It would allocate money on a formula based on AFDC caseloads, error rate, and revenue sharing allotment.

"Even if we don't get the ideal bill this year," Mofenson said, "we need a good interim step."

New MBTA bus stop signs will have more information

A federally aided program to install standard bus stop signs at some 8000 bus and trackless trolly stops will soon be started by the MBTA to provide route information for the riding public.

The new double-sided, sandwich-style sign has been approved by the Federal Highway Administration and the Massachusetts Department of Public Works and will be used to replace the outdated bus stop markings that exist throughout the MBTA bus network.

A similar program for signing streetcar stops is being planned as a separate project.

The new sign is different from any other traffic sign in the area and will be more visible for bus patrons and bus drivers. It is round at the top, 12 inches wide and 34 inches long (38 inches long in tow zones).

The front side of the sign will face the street and show the (T) logotype, a picture of a bus, and the international "No Parking" symbol. The back side will face the sidewalk, show the (T) logotype, and tell what buses run, where they stop, and their destinations.

The signs will be installed in all the cities and towns with MBTA bus service. Bids will be sought in the fall and the signs will be installed as soon as the frost is out of the ground.

The new bus stop signing project is part of the MBTA's $10.6 million federally aided transit efficiency program.

Alderman coordinates Avi Nelson's campaign

Avi Nelson, Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate, has appointed Ald. Robert Stiller of Newton Centre as his campaign coordinator in Newton.

Nelson said, "I am pleased to have Bob Stiller running my campaign in Newton. I'll be placing a great deal of emphasis on winning Newton. Bob's experience as an alderman will ensure that he gets the job done, and done right."

Abused children guaranteed legal counsel by Mofenson bill

Gov. Michael S. Dukakis recently signed into law a bill filed by State Rep. David J. Mofenson (D-Newton), House chairman of the Committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs, to guarantee legal counsel for all abused or neglected children.

According to Mofenson the act mandates that all children who are brought before the court under a care and protection petition will receive the benefit of legal counsel. If the child is unable to retain an attorney, the judge will appoint one to represent that child. Every child is entitled to legal protection at a hearing "which is literally determining the child's fate."

Presently, the abused or neglected child receives legal representation only if the "interests of justice" require such protection, Mofenson said. When counsel is appointed, the court will then pay his fees, if the child or parents are unable to do so.

Mofenson said, "If an attorney had been present when Jennifer and Edward Gallison's cases were before the court, perhaps their tragedies would have been avoided."

"Our principles of justice have, until now, been at odds. A person who commits a heinous crime is guaranteed an attorney, but this same guarantee is not granted to an innocent victim of a parent's rage or contempt. With this legislation, such protection is guaranteed."

'Appalachian Afternoon' Sunday at De Cordova

The Sunday afternoon concert at the DeCordova Museum in Lincoln Aug. 6 will be an Appalachian Afternoon, featuring music and songs from the traditions of Appalachia.

The performers will be Dorothy Carter, Rick and Lorraine Lee, John McCutcheon and Bill Wellington. The concert begins at 3:30 p.m. in the outdoor amphitheater.

Dorothy Carter sings and plays the hammered dulcimer, an ancient folk instrument which has 50 strings and is played with tiny wooden hammers, and the psaltery, which has 76 strings and a harp-like resonance. She has given numerous concerts throughout the East. Ms. Carter lives in Cambridge. "Troubadour," her first album produced by Celeste, is a collection of international folk songs.

Rick and Lorraine Lee have developed a special sound in their years of playing music together. They play and sing ballads and old time country music blending the mountain dulcimer, banjo and piano with instrumental skill and an understanding of the music of the southern mountains.

The Lees perform regularly at colleges, coffeehouses, and festivals and have recorded "Living in the Trees" for Folk-Legacy Records.

John McCutcheon, a Wisconsin native now living in Virginia, moved south in the early 1970s. Since that time, he has traveled extensively learning tunes, organizing music festivals, teaching school, calling square dances. A versatile musician, McCutcheon plays many instruments including the fiddle, banjo, guitar, autoharp and dulcimer. He has two albums on the June Appal label, "How Can I Keep from Singing?" and "The Wind that Shakes the Barley, Hammer Dulcimer Music."

Bill Wellington is currently artist-in-residence in Grant County, West Virginia, where he conducts a program of old-time music in schools and surrounding communities. He plays the fiddle, banjo, guitar and calls square dances.

Tickets for the concert are $2.50 for adults and $1 for people 17 and under. DeCordova Museum members are admitted free. Concert admission includes admission to the museum exhibit, "African Art: The Spirit Manifest," over 300 pieces of African art borrowed from the Peabody Museum at Harvard University. For more information call 259-8355.

Dorothy Carter, shown playing the hammered dulcimer, will be one of the performers at De Cordova Museum in Lincoln Sunday in the outdoor amphitheater.

Open house next week at Chestnut Hill School

Making like a clown at the Chestnut Hill School is an artfully decorated Lisa Bornstein of Newton, a participant in the school's summer creative arts program.

A special Open House Day to explore the creativities of children will be held at Chestnut Hill School Thursday, Aug. 10, from 1 to 7 p.m.

"Summer Scenes" will include informal presentations and demonstrations of dance, music, art and drama. The Chestnut Hill Repertoire Players will highlight the afternoon with a performance of "The Velveteen Rabbit," starting at 1 p.m. The cast is made up of children from the Chestnut Hill School Creative Arts Summer Program, under the direction of Alice Cohen, director of the touring company and faculty advisor of the Boston Children's Theater.

All classrooms and activities will be open to the public. Slides of school-year programs will be shown in the library, and faculty members will be available to answer questions.

Learn on Babson computer installed at Main Library

Have a great adventure this summer by learning how to use a computer, free, at the Newton Free Library, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner.

The library is providing a unique opportunity for people to gain the valuable technical experience involved in learning how to operate a computer.

Essentially the method consists of a typewriter terminal placed in the Library with a telephone hook-up between it and the computer in Babson College.

The Circulation Desk at the Main Library, 552-7145, will 0 take reservations of time from individuals who want to use the computer.

An audio tape prepared by Babson, as well as clearly marked instructions for using the computer, will be available near the console. Use of the computer was arranged with the cooperation of Edgar Canty, director of academic computer sciences at Babson.

The length of time allotted to an individual for computer time will depend on demand.

The cheapest way to Europe from Boston.

$279 round trip.

This is the lowest scheduled transatlantic fare from Boston to Amsterdam and back. And Pan Am, who's introduced more low fares than any other airline, is the only one offering it.

The $279 round trip fare is available from now until September 14 on Pan Am's daily nonstop from Boston to Amsterdam. The entire flight will be filled on a standby basis only. No reservations can be accepted.

Open tickets may be purchased from your travel agent or Pan Am, entitling you to stand by any day.

Once you have a ticket, you can obtain boarding passes on a first come, first go basis, from 9:00 a.m., at the Pan Am counter at Logan International.

The flight will leave every day at 7:30 p.m.

To take full advantage of the $279 fare ($155 over and $124 back), your return must be no later than September 14.

This fare is even $14 cheaper than the Standby Fare from Boston to London. Plus our fare takes you to the continent with convenient air and land connections to almost anywhere you want to go in Europe.

Arrival in Amsterdam will be at 8:15 a.m. the following morning.

For more information, we've set up a special number in Boston for you to call: (617) 338-9383.

But don't wait to call. These low fares won't be around forever.

By Bob Young

There's no need to have second thoughts about a trip to the Cape Cod National Seashore. This is not the Cape Cod of seething discos, air-conditioned shopping malls or $300-a-week bungalow rentals. This is Cape Cod as the Wampanoag Indians, the Mayflower Pilgrims and Guglielmo Marconi knew it — natural, untouched beauty. Relatively untouched, anyway. Nowadays there are parking lots that bring you right up to the beach, and the boardwalks make trips through the swamps drier and more pleasant. But all in all, the National Seashore has accomplished what it set out to accomplish 17 years ago — to preserve the environmental and architectural uniqueness of one of America's longest and most gorgeous shore areas, extending from Orleans to Provincetown, and to make it available to everyone.

Happily, the Seashore is only a two to four hour drive from most New England mainland locations. In fact, a third of the nation's population lives within a two-day drive of this Outer Cape area. To be sure, the attractions are there: swimming, hiking, boating, historical tours, horseback riding, camping, kite flying, even hang gliding. You name it, the National Seashore's got it. The following sketch is designed to whet your appetite for a day or week's visit. But the actual exploring of the Seashore on your own is the fun part.

Seashore Formation

The first effort to establish a National Seashore on Cape Cod began as far back as 1939 but it wasn't until 1955 that serious consideration of the idea began. From that year until 1971, the Seashore plan was embroiled in controversy among the towns to be affected — Chatham, Orleans, Wellfleet, Eastham, Truro and Provincetown. When President Kennedy approved the act in 1961, it was agreed that homes and structures built after September, 1959 would be acquired for the Seashore, while single family homes with a minimum of three acres of land would be retained by private ownership.

Today, 27,000 acres of land — 54 total miles of shoreline — comprise the Seashore. Up to this point, the government has spent $33,500,000 for land acquisition in that area.

The Beaches

The sands of Cape Cod, the ocean spray misting in your face, the lure of the tranquil seaside — they've all been shaped into poetic and musical images. And deservedly so. Cape Cod beaches, and those along the National Seashore in particular, merit every syllable of praise ever directed their way. Each beach has its own character and its own throng of devotees claiming that it's the "only beach to go to." Decide for yourself among the beaches the Seashore has to offer. Nauset Beach, stretching from Chatham to Orleans (the usual point of entry) is long and wide enough to accommodate even the heaviest crowds. Coast Guard Beach, in Eastham, was nearly devastated by the great blizzard this winter, but has fortunately survived. Right up the road in North Eastham is Nauset Light Beach, featuring some very sheer, very dramatic dune cliffs.

Wellfleet sports several Seashore beaches of its own, off Route 6, of which the most popular are Lecomb's, Newcomb's Hollow, and Marconi's. But for secluded bathing in this town, you'd do well to try the Cape Cod Bay Beaches, along the stretch of Great Island, where the surf is gentle enough even for children trying out their first strokes.

Though it was wrecked way back in 1873, you can still catch sight of the remains of the bark "Francis" from Head of the Meadow Beach, a long stretch of sand in North Truro. It's a popular swimming and sunning area, where a good trek by the shore can take you out of civilization's clutches. At the end of the Cape, in Provincetown, our list finishes with the spectacular Race Point Beach, near the Provincetown Airport and Coast Guard Station, and Herring Cove Beach, near town. The surf i heavier at Race Point, and a sunn day means crowds at both places.

Parking at Nauset Beach (a town-owned lot) is $3; at all other Seashore lots, the charge is $1, and in rare cases there's no fee at all. For Coast Guard Beach, there are shuttle buses, available from 10 am to 6 pm from Nauset Regional High School, the Salt Pond Visitor's Center, the Doane Rock picnic area and the Nauset Light Beach lot.

Seashore Trails

But the Seashore isn't made up of beaches alone. In fact, the eight swamp and beach trails here are a major attraction, and serve to highlight the Seashore's unique nature. Take a walk through a beech or cedar forest, and you'll get a sense of the environment's interrelationship with the sea, as well as its geographic roots. And, of course, the trails provide a very lovely and quiet time.

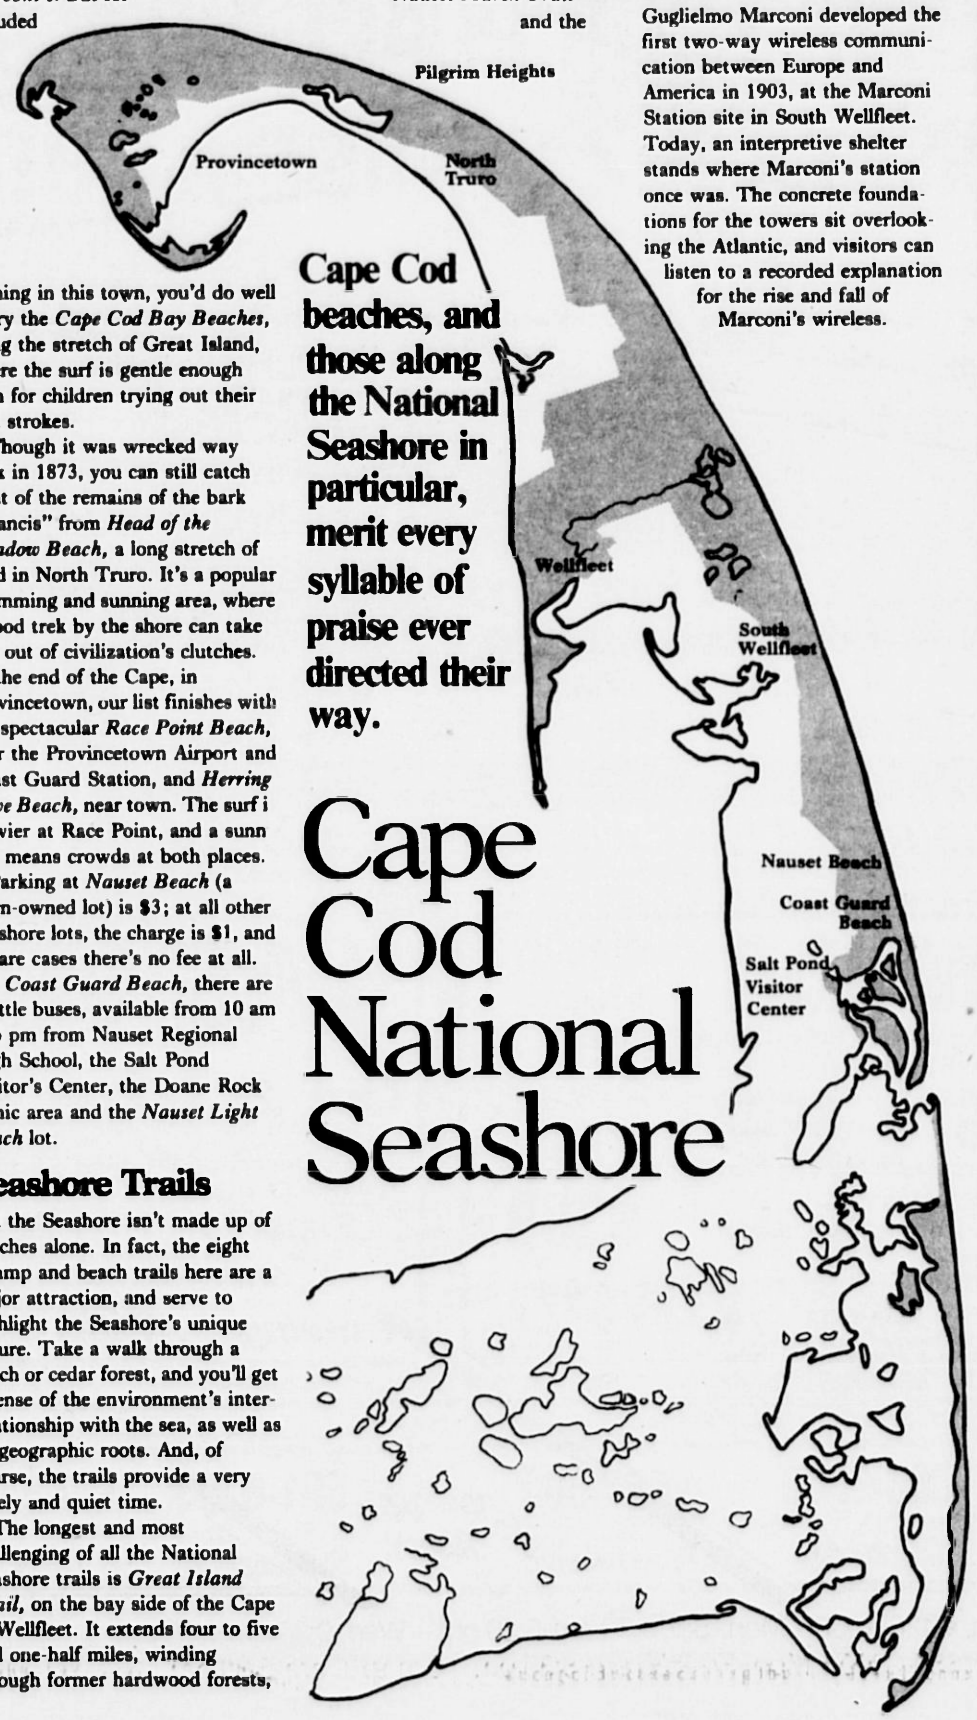

The longest and most challenging of all the National Seashore trails is Great Island Trail, on the bay side of the Cape in Wellfleet. It extends four to five and one-half miles, winding through former hardwood forests, pastures and cranberry bogs. Guided tours of the trail, which last three hours and cover three miles of territory, are offered by the Seashore at 11:30 am, Wednesday and Sunday.

Over in North Truro, the walking delights are twofold. The Pilgrim Spring Trail, in the Pilgrim Heights section, is a half-mile, self-guided tour of the area, which includes the celebrated spot where the Pilgrims drank their first New England water. There's also a trail through Small Swamp, and a nearby interpretive shelter traces the history of the Pilgrims and the Indians in North Truro.

Wildlife is in abundance on the Nauset Marsh Trail and the Button Bush Trail, both originating from the Salt Pond Visitor's Center in Eastham. Brochures are available, and help to illustrate the way.

Finally, don't miss a night walk on the Atlantic White Cedar Swamp Nature Trail, again in Wellfleet. It's forested by oaks, red maples, pitch pines — the white cedar reigns deep in the swamp. Light-colored boardwalks make a night hike enchanting and comfortably safe.

For details on the other trails to be prowled, contact the Seashore.

Special Seashore Sites

Guglielmo Marconi developed the first two-way wireless communication between Europe and America in 1903, at the Marconi Station site in South Wellfleet. Today, an interpretive shelter stands where Marconi's station once was. The concrete foundations for the towers sit overlooking the Atlantic, and visitors can listen to a recorded explanation for the rise and fall of Marconi's wireless.

Further out towards the Cape's tip in the Province Lands are three 19th century lighthouses. Race Point boasted one back in 1816, and Long Point Light (at the very tip of Provincetown) was built ten years later. Wood End, the most recent light, was erected in 1976. And small wonder Provincetown needed three such lights. In 1850, the largest fishing fleet in the United States was harbored in Provincetown — almost 200 mackerel and Banks schooners.

Biking and Riding and Gliding

Bicyclists can have a field day within the Province Lands. Eight miles of paths wind through with often glorious views of the Atlantic, but beware, the course is hilly at times. Bike rentals are available in several locations in and around town.

Nelson's Riding Stables, near the junction of Route 6 and Race Point Road, offer guided horseback trail rides through the Province Land dunes. The rides are scheduled four times daily, with a two-hour sunset ride closing out the day.

And for the brave of heart, the Seashore has designated certain areas within its boundaries as safe for hang gliding. Information on the when and wheres of this sport can be obtained at the visitors centers.

Rules and Regs

The National Seashore has laid down several regulations that bear keeping in mind. Open fires are not permitted, except when authorized by permit. Charcoal grills and fuel stoves are allowed.

Camping is prohibited within the Seashore, and fines will be levied. It's best, then, to head for private campgrounds and Nickerson State Park in Brewster — and wise to make reservations during the busy summer months.

Pets must be leashed in developed areas and are prohibited in public buildings, on protected beaches and nature trails or in picnic areas.

Mopeds or motor bikes are not allowed on the bicycle trails. Nude bathing is prohibited, and is punishable by a $25 fine.

Seashore Information

Any area comprising 27,000 acres of land requires a lot of explanation. The Seashore takes good care on this count. Information is available in Eastham at the Salt Pond Visitor Center (255-3421) and at the Province Lands Visitor Center in Provincetown (487-1256).

If you're interested in an early morning bird walk or a wild cranberry walk, two hours on the Great Island tidal flats or a children's hour and talk, check the visitor's centers on the latest update of activities. Specific hikes and tours for all age groups are slated by the Seashore as well.

Food | On The Seafood Trail

A recent expedition in search of really fresh fish found the best and most reliable fish restaurant far from the water, sitting in an unlikely shopping mall.

James Connolly

By Judith Barrett

Summer is seafood season. After a day in the hot sun on a sandy beach near the salt water, there's nothing like a half-dozen cherrystones, a bucket of steamers, broiled bluefish and a mug of ice cold beer.

But back home, where it may be harder to go digging clams and trolling for blues yourself, it's not easy to find a fresh finny meal. Few restaurants can afford to keep only the freshest fish around. Fish really stays fresh no more than forty hours after it's caught. After that it rapidly loses its fluffy, flaky texture and its delicate flavor. Even lobsters and shellfish begin to lose their firm, ocean-fresh quality after more than a day or two away from the ocean depths and the daily tides.

All this would lead one to assume that the closer to the ocean a restaurant is, the fresher the fish will be. Shockingly enough, though, a recent expedition in search of really fresh fish cooked with care found the best and most reliable fish restaurant far from the water, sitting in an unlikely shopping mall.

The search for seafood began unassumingly at The Surf in Magnolia. I had heard rumblings of praise about the place over the years. But in spite of its sea-worthy name, only one-third of the menu is seafood and fish. The rest is landlubber fare — steaks, chicken dishes and pizza. The selection of seafood was small and limited in its preparations. It could have been a seafood restaurant in Kansas.

Considering the inland tilt to the menu, it wasn't too surprising to find that the broiled haddock caked with breadcrumb topping had a distinct "fresh-frozen" instead of "ocean-fresh" flavor, that the cherrystones, which were too big, were a day or two past being delicious, and that the baked stuffed clams and shrimp were so full of breading I could hardly identify the fish involved.

But I am not one to be daunted by disappointing meals. So the seafood search proceeded to more specialized turf — The Salty Dog. This is a hole-in-the-wall combination fish market, bar and seafood restaurant at the Fanueil Hall Market Place in Boston. It is no more than two blocks from the ocean and a mile from the docks where the fishing boats come in.

I had been to the Dog to buy fish a few years ago, when the Market first opened. Since it has been advertising as a restaurant recently, I figured the place had expanded to accommodate the hungry hoards flooding Quincy Market daily.

But the same four walls existed, as before. The fish market scales and counter had been moved around to one side, while three feet away, a bar had been erected on the other side, and a few small tables were squeezed into an airless space in the back. There is no air-conditioning or fan. At dinnertime, stools line both the bar and fish market counter and the whole place becomes a sweaty, crowded restaurant.

Of course, decor is not what makes a seafood restaurant. In fact, ambience in seafood restaurants is usually inversely proportional to the quality of the fish. Mere shacks can often offer the freshest catch. Many memorable fried clams have been devoured at drive-in dives in Essex, and I recently ravished a truly sensational lobster at the unpretentious Lobster Pot on Route 6 in Orleans.

But in the case of The Salty Dog, the fish did not rise above the decorations. Even though generally reliable friends have reported consistently good results, my own experience was disappointing.

Had the fish fared better, I wouldn't have minded the hot

Kids' Trips | Short Hops

A whole play chest full of things are happening for kids this coming week in MetroBoston including a city safari and no less than two productions of The Wizard of Oz.

By Harriet Webster

Like ice cream on an August afternoon, the summer is melting away before our very eyes. This is the time to stop procrastinating, to take positive steps to get your kids involved in the multitude of activities going on in MetroBoston. Hussle on over to that telephone and make plans for tomorrow.

Telephone 442-2005 and ask for Lula Christopher in the Education Department of the Franklin Park Children's Zoo. She runs a pair of five-day-a-week programs and although she will try to accommodate children who simply show up, she much prefers pre-registration (that just means you let her know you're coming). Children can attend for one day, or three, or six, or any other magic number that strikes their fancy. The fee is $1.50 per day.

The City Safari is for two- to five-year olds and each day focuses on one of four categories: Animal Movement and Sound, Animals in Art, Animal Homes, Animals and People. At the beginning of each session, Lula introduces her guests to a young zoo animal, encouraging them to touch the creature and ask questions.

After that, the group does some fieldwork. On an Animals and People day, Lula might stress the dependence of the animals on the zoo staff. "All animals need certain things to survive," she explains, "even in captivity — food, water, shelter, exercise space." She takes her group on a guided tour of the zoo's kitchen to see how the animals' food is prepared. Then it is time to walk around the zoo, observing how the needs of different animals are met.

The session finishes with a crafts project. The kids are given pictures of animals and are asked to draw in objects that help them meet their needs. Trees for birds, a swing for the monkeys and so forth. When Animal Homes is taught, the kids learn to build a bird's nest. Now that's a pretty neat skill to have on tap.

Claws and Paws is designed for six- to 12-year olds. "We talk about one animal each time," Lula explains, "his adaptations like coloring, skin texture, whiskers, claws, and the way they help him to survive." Next, the kids are sent on a treasure hunt. Armed with a list, they hurry out into the zoo area to find certain animal features and characteristics related to the afternoon's talk. Claws and Paws often includes a crafts project, and films are shown each Friday.

Lula Christopher is a friendly lady who obviously enjoys her work. She welcomes parents to come along and help out, particularly with the pre-school group. City Safari is held at 10 am Monday through Friday, and Claws and Paws at 1 pm the same days. Each session lasts about an hour and a half, and participants are free to explore the zoo on their own following the program. Both programs will continue through August 22nd.

Rag Bag Annie

If you and your brood prefer art to animals, set aside Wednesday for the free-of-charge double bill offered compliments of Articulture, Cambridge's answer to Boston's Summerthing. The program presents the Dorothy Rankin Puppet Theatre in "Rag Bag Annie" along with the Locomotion Circus, experts in the fine arts of juggling, theatre and acrobatics. The show starts at 11 am and will be held at the Harrington School at 826 Cambridge Street in Cambridge. Articulture says there's always plenty of space for everyone who comes. If you have questions or need help finding the school, call 547-2541.

The Wiz

Those who feel flush and want to spend some pennies on the kids' entertainment might consider the Wizard of Oz revival. Broadway musical The Wiz, winner of loads of prestigious awards, opened its run at the Shubert last Tuesday. Tickets will set you back a bundle, anywhere from $9 on up to $16.50.

A less expensive alternative is being offered by the North Shore Music Theatre in Beverly, which is presenting its own musical version of The Wizard of Oz on Thursday at 9:30 and 11 am. Can't stress enough how important it is to call ahead and reserve or find out about availability for the performance you wish to attend. Tickets are sometimes available the morning of

Another Opening, Another Show

Two new movies make their debuts tonight at locations around town. National Lampoon's Animal House stars John Belushi, the pudgy psychopath from Saturday Night Live, Donald Sutherland, and Tim Matheson, and is a Seventies look at a Sixties fraternity house. The Eyes of Laura Mars stars Faye Dunaway as a fashion photographer who gets mixed up in murder. Animal House is scheduled to open at the Cheri in Boston (536-2870); Laura Mars at the Paris in Boston (267-8181), and the Sack Cinema in Natick (653-5005). Film bookings are always subject to last-minute changes, so call ahead.

Japanese Gardens

One of the objectives of Japanese gardening is to remove "imperfections of nature." Find out about applying this and other principles from the East to New England sod tonight, as expert Sam Newson speaks out at the Peabody Museum of Salem, East India Square in Salem. Admission is $1.50, and the talk starts at 8. The curious can call 745-1876.

Kris & Rita

The rock world's answer to Ozzie and Harriet, Kris Kristofferson and Rita Coolidge perform tonight at 8 at the Civic Center, tucked away in Providence, Rhode Island. Tickets are $7.50, $8 and $8.50, on sale at the box office, (401) 331-6700, and at major ticket agencies.

Just for the Mull of It

Martin Mull has very blond hair and an absurd little moustache that makes him look as though he had forgotten to wipe his lips after a drink of milk. He sings and makes jokes and sometimes he is very, very funny. Mull is in charge of entertainment tonight and tomorrow night at the Paradise, 967 Commonwealth Avenue in Boston. Sets are at 8:30 and 11, tickets are $8.50, available at the club (254-2052) and at the major ticket outlets.

Mary Cassatt At Home

Mary Cassatt at Home is an exhibit of paintings, pastels and prints by Cassatt, the expatriate artist. Also included, however, are objects of her life, some furniture, china, letters, and photographs, which document her career and her personality. The exhibit opens today at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, and will remain through September 24. Today, the museum is open from 10 am until 5 pm, and the admission is $1.75. For more information, call 267-9377.

War!

The Civil War has broken out again — at Fort Warren on George's Island in Boston Harbor, today and tomorrow. In addition to the battle, there are demonstrations of artillery, displays of clothing, and musket and infantry drills. All events are free, and the hours are 11 am to 6 pm today, until 4 pm tomorrow. You get there by taking a commercial boat from Long Wharf by the New England Aquarium. For all information, call 268-3183.

Cleo

Singer Cleo Laine and her musician husband John Dankworth make a rare appearance tonight at the Berklee Performance Center, 136 Mass. Ave. in Boston. Shows are at 7 and 10, tickets are $8.50 and $9.50. They're on sale at the box office (266-7455), Strawberries, Out of Town and ConcertCharge (426-8181).

6• sun.

Myopia

You don't have to be near-sighted to watch the finals of the National Ten-Goal Copper Cup today at the Myopia Hunt Club on Route 1A in Hamilton. The action starts at 3, and the tickets, at the gate, are $2. If you want more information, try calling 532-1441. They share the line with an ambulance service, so don't be disarmed.

Older Gold

Revival time tonight, as The Four Aces and The Kingston Trio grace the stage of the South Shore Music Circus, Sohier Street in Cohasset. The show starts at 8, and all tickets are $8.50. For reservations and information, call the box office at 383-1400.

Same Time Next Year

The smash comedy Same Time Next Year opens tonight at the North Shore Music Theatre, off Route 128 at Exit 19 in Beverly. Starring Jess Cain, the show is performed Monday through Saturday evenings at 8, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2. Ticket prices are $8.95 Monday through Friday, and taking a leap to $9.95 on Saturday. All matinee tickets are $6.75 and $4.75. The show continues to August 19.

The Beach Boys

How quintessentially summer can you get? The Beach Boys, who get around (round, round, round, they get around) are at the Garden, on Causeway Street in Boston, tonight at 9, with guest star Charles Lloyd. The tickets are $7.50 and $8.50, at the Garden box office (no reservations by telephone) and at Ticketron.

8• tues.

Kinks

The fathers, or at least the elder brothers, of the current rage for eclectic rock, the Kinks are at the Springfield Civic Center, tonight at 7:30. The tickets are $6.50 and $7.50 at the box office, (413) 781-7086, and are also available at all Ticketron locations.

Nothing Ventured, Nothing Gained

Venture forth these next two weeks to see the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company perform Gilbert and Sullivan, at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street in Boston. Tonight starts things off, with Iolanthe, a very funny show. Also on the agenda are HMS Pinafore, The Mikado, and The Pirates of Penzance. The performance schedule calls for evening shows at 8, Monday through Saturday, and matinees at 2 on Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Tickets for all performances range from $6 to $16, and are available at the box office, where the number is 426-9366.

Tharp Times Four

It's opening night for the Twyla Tharp Dance Company, performing through Friday at the Boston University Theatre, 264 Huntington Avenue in, naturally, Boston. The extraordinary troupe is on stage each night at 8:30; tickets are $7.50 and $9.50, except for the Friday night gala show, which includes a reception and costs a mighty $10, or $37.50 if you're so inclined. For ticket information, call the box office at 353-3392.

Bear Facts

Today is the birthday of T. Edward Bear, and his party takes place at the Children's Museum, on the Jamaicaway in Boston from 2 to 4 this afternoon. Bear, a foundling, has been feted by the Museum since he was abandoned there five years ago, although his exact age is not known. He is married and is the father of four children. The public is invited to the festivities, which include cake, lemonade, singing, and stories. Admission to the Children's Museum is $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for children. For more information, call 522-4800.

You Don't Need a Weatherman . . . . .

The Western Wind, a sextet of singers whose repertoire includes love songs from the Middle Ages and the present, blows into the outdoor amphitheatre at the De Cordova Museum in Lincoln, tonight at 8. Admission is $3.50 per person, at the gate. The museum's on Sandy Pond Road, and the phone number is 259-8355.

Feature Attraction

The Eyes of Laura Mars

A mystery, in which Faye Dunaway plays a fashion photographer whose Nikon eyes see those things which, perhaps, they ought not to have seen. With Tommy Lee Jones, The Eyes opens Friday at the Paris in Boston, and at the Burlington Cinema, the Sack in Natick, the Chestnut Hill Cinema, and the Peabody Cinema.

Animal House

Until recently, the folks at the National Lampoon have been content to satisfy their creative urges by liberating scatological prose and making dirty words safe to print. They have now broadened their horizons and expanded onto the big screen. Animal House is nothing more than a springboard for the kind of jokes Johnny Carson sometimes likes to tell on national television: sex, sexist, and more sexist. The plot, which involves two college frats at war with each other, is as exciting as watching the grass grow. Not even John Belushi and Donald Sutherland can make Animal House habitable. Cheri; Braintree Cinema, Brockton Cinema, Chestnut Hill, Sack Danvers, Framingham Cinema.

Foul Play

Goldie Hawn and Chevy Chase are a hoot in this suspense comedy written and directed by Colin Higgins which might well be subtitled Saturday Night Live Meets The Streets of San Francisco. Chase's famous pratfalls are limited to a tolerable few, and he and Hawn share a sweet kookieness that is engaging. Hawn, who plays a librarian named Gloria Mundy (a Thurber steal), is the target of a pair of hitmen; Chase, as a police lieutenant under a cloud, assigns himself to protect her, and incidentally they find True Love. With Billy Barty, Rachel Roberts, and members of the New York City Opera. Beacon Hill, Cheri; Brockton Cinema.

Grease

Entertainment and that's all; or rather, television director Randal Kleiser's idea of entertainment, the kind we've been insulted by for years. This isn't to say that the musical numbers aren't energetic, that John Travolta isn't charming, that Stockard Channing isn't proficient as the high school bad girl. But where is the heart behind the monster? And what in heaven's name is this fascination with the Fifties? Cinema 57; Brockton Cinema, Sack Natick, Peabody Cinema.

Hooper

Burt Reynolds has been kicked around before but in Hooper his latest film about a team of Hollywood stunt men working on a multi-million dollar "disaster" movie, he really gets beat up. There's a lot of self-parody, humor and (dare I say it) nifty stunts woven into this pleasantly surprising picture. Directed by Hal Needham, who also guided Burt in Smoky and The Bandit, Hooper is aided by a good supporting cast: Jan-Michael Vincent (Ski, the young hot-shot who emulates Hooper ), Sally Field (Hooper's girl friend), and Brian Keith. Hooper might not be remembered by the time the Academy Awards roll around next year, but it takes its audiences for one hell of a ride. Savoy; Braintree Cinema, Brockton Cinema, Sack Danvers, Framingham Cinema.

Heaven Can Wait

Heaven Can Wait should have been a good film. It's based on the romantic fantasy comedy Here Comes Mr. Jordan, a story about a man who dies before he's supposed to and is brought back to life as a different person. But this is entirely Warren Beatty's film. Previously his extra-acting activities lead him to produce Bonnie and Clyde and Shampoo. This time, he not only took the starring role but also wrote the script with Elaine May, directed the film with Buck Henry, and produced the project as well. Clearly, he has overextended himself. Although Buck Henry, James Mason, Julie Christie, and Dyan Cannon turn in fine supporting performances, the direction lacks the charm and sophistication to pull off a complex tale. Still, Heaven Can Wait has flashes of good comedy and fine action. It's close, but no heavenly encounter. Cheri; Sack Brockton, Burlington Cinema, Framingham Cinema, Hanover Mall, Liberty Tree Mall.

Revenge of the Pink Panther

All the Pink Panther films are pretty much the same. Peter Sellers again (for the 5th time) turns in a funny performance as Inspector Clousseau. This time, however, he's after the French Connection (no relation to the movie), a drug syndicate, which has tried to assassinate him 16 times. In the course of the plot, which at times is nonsensical and confusing, Sellers craftily disguises himself as a midget artist (Toulouse Lautrec), a Swedish peg-legged sailor, a priest, a transvestite, a Chinese coolie, and an Italian gangster. For Blake Edwards, the director and original creator of the Pink Panther series, making this film was more like sleep walking — and the direction snores. Edwards is not at his best. But with stellar performances by Sellers and Dyan Cannon (as his sexy ally) the film moves swiftly from pitfall to pratfall, and The Revenge of the Pink Panther is good for a few laughs. Cinema 57; Braintree Cinema, Sack Brockton, Sack Danvers, Framingham Cinema, Hanover Mall.

Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band

Turning rock albums into movies has become the vocation of music promoter — and now movie mogul — Robert Stigwood. He's done it before with Tommy and Jesus Christ Superstar. His latest transformation is the Beatles' album Sgt. Pepper and as in the previous Stigwood attempts, Sgt. Pepper is nothing more than a silent movie with musical accompaniment. The BeeGees are the Sgt. Pepper's Band and Peter Frampton is Billy Shears, their leader. Somehow some one (Henry Edwards) has managed to construct a story (for lack of a better word) by taking the album's lyrics and translating them into images. The result: a punk-rock, drug-oriented, romantic-fantasy. There's not one word of spoken dialogue in the entire film except for the narration by George Burns. It's painfully obvious that this film is geared to the 13- to 18-year old market which has only heard of The Beatles in reference to "classical" music. Fortunately Hollywood no longer uses the "M" rating, because Sgt. Pepper is not for mature audiences. Charles; Braintree Cinema, Brockton Cinema, Sack Danvers, Framingham Cinema.

THE BOSTON LEGACY

A 17-hour series of specials on Boston's ethnic communities.

GOOD DAY!

Good Day!

New England's most popular local morning show since 1974.

The Federal Communications Commission has recently published its findings showing WCVB-TV Channel 5 is the number one station in America. In its recent survey of this country's more than six hundred network affiliated stations, Channel 5 ranked number one in total hours of news, number one in public affairs programs, and number one in local programming. More local programming to serve you better . . . promising, from our first broadcast in 1972 to do more, and living up to that promise every year since. Innovative programming . . . pioneering new forms to better fulfill the varied needs of the community and continually refining them. Ambitious programming . . . regularly producing specials rarely attempted by other local stations and presenting them in prime time. Quality programming . . . receiving more than two hundred awards to date and repeatedly winning some of the industry's most prestigious honors. Our commitment to bring you more quality programming is stronger than ever, because putting you first has made us number one in Boston . . . and number one in America.

The Voyage of the India Star–is a multi-media production held at the Theatre at Pickering Wharf, Salem, which focuses on a 19th century clipper ship and her crew, ports and purposes. It's given daily every half hour from 9:30 am-8:30 pm, and admission is $1.75 adults, $1.25 children 18 and under, free for under 6. For all details call 745-8694.

Kids' Trips

the show and sometimes not.

The stage is inside a large tent and the style is theatre-in-the-round. It's wise to spend the extra 50 cents for up-front seats if your kids are very young or very short. Telephone is 922-8500. If you miss out this week, the same play will be performed August 12 and 19th at the Arena Civic Theatre in Greenfield. Shows at 11 am both days, with a 2 pm performance as well on the 19th. Admission sets you back a mere 75 cents. More information at (413) 773-9891.

Upcoming

Now that we've given you some ideas for this very week, we want to tell you about a special program that won't get into gear until next week. The problem is that if you want to get involved, you'll have to make reservations right now. Old Sturbridge Village (in Sturbridge) is offering a series of family workshops. Children (no younger than eight years) and parents attend together. You and the kids get to do the tasks you usually only get to watch the village guides do. Lecture and village exploration precede hands-on experience.

In the Textiles workshop on August 12, participants will learn the fundamentals of carding, spinning and weaving wool. Food is scheduled for the 19th (emphasis on fireplace cooking with 19th century ingredients) and Woodworking will be held on the 26th. The programs last from 10 am to 3 pm and the fee is $6 for adults and $2 for children. Call right away to reserve space! Telephone is 347-3362.

Bad News

One final tip: from one who has seen the Bad News Bears and enjoyed it, seen the Bad News Bears in Breaking Training and endured it with a smile — avoid at all costs The Bad News Bears Go to Japan, even if it comes to your local drive-in at $2 a carload. It's that bad.

Food

bright lights glaring into my eyes, the paper plates and plastic forks or the watery chowder served in disposable plastic storage containers. Had the bluefish, which was the special of the day, tasted like that day's catch instead of surplus stock from a previous catch, I could have tolerated the sweat dripping from my forehead into the littlenecks, which simply were not cold or fresh enough. And had the batter on the fried fish been crisper, and the scallops less spongy, I might have ignored the blaring rock music and the people crushed in behind me waiting for my seat.

Prices are reasonable at The Salty Dog, I kept saying — $4.75 for the "fried fisherman's platter" that comes with french fries and coleslaw, and only $3.95 for the bargain bluefish. But The Salty Dog, even for its moderate prices, ice cold imported beer served in chilled mugs and Perrier water with a twist of lime, was cramped, crowded, noisy and uncomfortable. And worst of all, the fish tasted as if it had waited too long on the docks.

How come a restaurant so close to the water can't do better than that? Well, fortunately there is a restaurant that can do better than that. And it's nowhere near the water.

Legal Seafood fish market and restaurant has been my favorite fish place for years — both for buying fresh fish and for an informal dinner out. Its success on both fronts has led to a recent expansion from the original Cambridge location to the new Chestnut Hill restaurant and market on Route 9 (near the Chestnut Hill Mall). For a dinner out I urge you to go there because it's bigger, more comfortable and is an all-around more pleasant place to eat than the old Cambridge store.

The fish is the same in both locations, always the freshest and always cooked with care and respect. According to George Berkowitz, Legal's owner, all the fish is fresh every day — all 200 tons of it — and what's left over goes into the thick, creamy chowder.

Legal's selection is staggering. All items are posted on large blackboards. The offerings change daily, so you know that what you're getting was down at the docks earlier that day.

For appetizers you can have plump cherrystones and oysters, served on a bed of crushed ice in an attractive shell-shaped dish, and sashimi, which is simply sliced raw fish accompanied by hot Japanese horseradish. On a recent Wednesday night the blackboards displayed 13 different varieties of fish, as well as boiled lobsters, steamed clams, mussels, and shrimp. There are casseroles, baked stuffed selections, and steaks for landlubbers. But what lures me back to Legal each time is the reliable opportunity for a straight fix of unadorned fresh fish.

You can have your fish fried or broiled to your taste, with butter, garlic butter, margarine or plain and dry. I usually order a fisherman's platter, a selection of four or five different fish and seafoods broiled "dry" — that is to say, without butter or topping. Most any fish, if it's truly fresh, can hold up to this minimal treatment. All dinners are served with coleslaw, hot rolls, and a salad or potatoes (fried or baked).

If you've never been to Legal Seafood, there are several things you should know. First of all, it's always packed for dinner. On a recent weeknight, at 7 pm, it was wall-to-wall people, including children and infants. You have to give your name at the door and then be prepared to sit or stand around for as much as an hour with drinks, chowder, or seafood from the raw bar until your named is called. Clearly, lots of folks think it's worth the wait.

Second, the place is set up informally. There are some single tables and booths, but mostly it's long tables with lots of chairs and no intimacy. The noise level is high, but not uncomfortable. There are paper placemats, and sanitized flatware in glassine envelopes. Water, coffee or tea are available at dispensers in the center of the large dining area.

You pay when you order. Though it's not the most cordial of practices, it's a minor inconsideration. Legal Seafood is not a seabed of luxury, but it's friendly, efficient, clean and offers the freshest, tastiest fish I've found.

Prices are reasonable. Fish broiled or fried costs $4.95 to $6.95, lobsters are familiarly priced at $9.95 for one-and-one-quarter-pounders, and $12.95 for two-pounders. Appetizers were in the $2.50 range, and chowder is 50 cents a cup, 75 cents a bowl.

Notes:

Legal Seafood is located on Route 9 in Chestnut Hill, Newton. Telephone 277-7300. The restaurant is open from 11:30 am to 9:30 pm, the fish market from 9 am to 9 pm. Parking is available, American Exprets accepted.

HUB

Ahmad's-96 Winthrop St, Cambridge, 547-9351. The dancing is downstairs, upstairs, the entertainment is gastronomical. French and Moroccan dishes: Kefta Tagine, cous-cous, medaillon de veau. Reasonable prices, full bar. Hours: Mon-Fri, 11:30 am-2:30 pm; Mon-Thurs, 5 pm-10 pm, Fri-Sat, until 11 pm. Sun, 11 am-10 pm. Reservations are recommended on Fri-Sat. AE, MC.

Athens Olympia-51 Stuart St, Boston, 426-6236. In the midst of the theatre district, the Olympia has service that's geared to get you to the show on time. On the menu: taramosalata, dolmas, saganiki, souvlaki, baklava. Exotic names, but they're all good Greek stand-bys. Open every day, 11 am-11 pm. Full bar, reservations accepted. AE, MC.

Cafe Florian-85 Newbury St, Boston, 247-7603. A European-style sidewalk cafe, deep in the heart of Back Bay. Snacks, suppers, full meals, pastries, omelettes, beer and wine. Hours: Mon-Sat, 11:30 am-midnight, until 1 am Fri-Sat, Sun, noon until 6. Reservations are accepted for dinner only. No credit cards.

Cafe l'Ananas-281A Newbury St, 353-0176 or 247-8300. There is more than pineapple on the menu at this Back Bay boite. International cooking, with an outdoor area for balmier days. Full bar. Hours: Mon-Sat, noon-2:30; Sun-Thurs, 6 pm-10, Fri-Sat until 11. Reservations are advisable. AE, BA/V, MC.

Casa Romero-30 Gloucester St, Boston, 261-2146. Mexican dining a la Back Bay. Tacos, tostados, enchiladas, and more uncommon offerings like Pollo a la Mexicana and shrimp in garlic and coriander. There's a full bar to cool off with. Reservations are accepted. Hours: noon-2:30, Tues-Fri; 5-10 pm, Sun-Thurs; 5-11 pm, Fri-Sat. AE, MC.

Copley's Restaurant-In the Copley Plaza Hotel, 138 St. James St, Boston, 267-5300. Continental favorites from more than one continent, curries rub elbows with clams Casino on the menu. Moderately expensive, fully licensed. Hours: Mon-Fri, 11:30 am-3 pm, and 5:30 pm-midnight, Sat-Sun, 5:30-midnight, also Sun, noon-4 pm. AE, BA/V, CB, DC, MC.

Dini's Sea Grill-94 Tremont St, 227-0380. Right on the Freedom Trail, the home of the schrod. Also, sole with lobster sauce. Full bar. Hours: Daily until 10:30 pm. AE, MC.

Hermitage-955 Boylston St, 267-3652 or 247-8029. Named after the famous museum in Leningrad, the Hermitage is, appropriately, inside the Institute of Contemporary Art, but the cuisine echoes not Leningrad, but St. Petersburg: Stroganoff, Russian Eggs, smoked salmon. Fully licensed. Hours: Tues-Sat, noon-2:30; Sun-Thurs, 6-10 pm, Fri-Sat until 1; Sun brunch, noon-3. Reservations are recommended. AE, BA/V, MC.

Jason's-131 Clarendon St, Boston, 262-9000. Dining among palm trees and sensational salt-water aquariums. Seafood and continental specialties: oysters Rockefeller, veal Oscar, roast Long Island duck. Moderately expensive, full bar. Hours: Mon-Fri, 11:30 am-3 pm. Dinner daily 5-midnight. AE, DC.

Lechner's Gourmet Restaurant-21 Broad St, 523-1016. The prices may be rarified, but the menu is just as refined, with a pronounced German accent: Edelfische, Kalbschnitzel, Schinkenroellchen. Continental things, too, for those of you who do not the German specialties prefer. Fully licensed. Hours: Mon-Fri, 11:30 am-3 pm, and 5:30-10 pm. Sat, 5:30-10 pm. Closed Suns and holidays. Reservations are the rule for Sat. AE, BA/V, DC, MC.

Maison Robert-45 School St, Boston, 227-3370. Located in the Old City Hall, Maison Robert is elegant and luxurious. It is also expensive, but the kitchen is among the best in Boston: Filet of Dover sole Grand-mere, Veal Orloff, steak au poivre. Plan ahead for a dessert souffle. The service is meticulous. There's a full bar and reservations are accepted. Maison Robert is open for lunch Mon-Fri, noon-2:30; and for dinner every night, 6-10. AE, BA/V, MC.

Parker's-60 School St, in the Parker House, 227-8600, ext 200. Up-to-date and elegant, with a menu of American and continental specialties, like duckling with green peppercorns. And, of course, Parker House rolls. Rather expensive. Full bar. Hours: Daily, 11:30 am-10:30 pm. Reservations are a good idea any time, and are required for Fri and Sat night, and Sun brunch. AE, BA/V, CB, DC, MC.

Schroeder's Restaurant-8 High St, 426-1234. Downtown eating, German style: herring in dill sauce, kassler rippchen, Holstein schnitzel. Prices start in the middle range. The premises are fully licensed. Hours: Mon-Fri, 11:30 am-3 pm; Tues-Fri, 3-9:30 pm; Sat, 5-8 pm. Reservations accepted. AE, BA/V, MC.

Seaside Restaurant and Bar-188 Faneuil Hall Marketplace, Boston, 742-8728. Intimate dining in a contemporary ambiance. Specialties include fresh seafoods, salads, sandwiches, prime sirloin, lobster, homemade desserts, choice wines. International bar on two levels. Popular and correspondingly crowded, so a reservation is a good idea. Hours: 11 am-2 am daily. AE, MC, House charge.

Union Oyster House-41 Union St, 227-2750. Boston's oldest eatery, the place is aptly named: oysters and other marine life star on the menu. Full bar. Hours: Sun-Thurs, 11 am-9 pm, until 9:30 Fri, until 10 Sat. AE, BA/V, DC, MD.

NORTH

Andover Inn-Chapel Ave, Andover, 475-5903. On the grounds of Phillips Andover Academy, but a far cry from school fare. Some of the far-flung favorites are Loempia, scampi flambe. Make sure that the pastry cart rolls past your table. On Sundays, the dinner feature is Rijstaffel, a Dutch-Indonesian buffet. Moderately priced, elegant. Full bar. Open Mon-Sat, 11:30-3, and 5-10. Sun, 10:30 am-3 pm, and 4-9 pm. AE, BA/V, DC, MC.

Beef and Oyster House-143 Washington St, Salem, 744-4334. Beef and oysters, yes, but you needn't limit yourself to these eponymous delights, as there are other land and sea dishes to be had. Moderately expensive, fully licensed. Hours: Daily, 11 am-11 pm. AE, BA/V, MC.

Beverly Depot-10 Park St, Beverly, 927-5402. Take the Boston and Maine to the Depot, for steaks, chops, and all the trimmings, in railroad surroundings. Moderate prices, full bar. Closed on Mons, it's open for dinner 5-10 pm, Sun-Thurs; 5-11 pm Fri-Sat. AE, MC.

Bishop's-99 Hampshire St, Lawrence, 683-7143. The standard bill of fare — roasts and steaks — is enlivened by shish kebab and Arabic appetizers: tahini, stuffed grape leaves, baba ganoosh. Open daily, 11:30 am-10 pm, Fri-Sat nights 'til 11. Full bar. No reservations are taken on Sat nights, but they are strongly advised on Wed, Fri, and Sun. AE, BA/V, CB, DC, MC.

Michael's House-26 Atlantic Ave, Marblehead, 631-1255. The house predates the restaurant by nearly two centuries. At lunch, try the quiche du jour, or the open steak sandwich. Seafood is a specialty any time. Prices are moderate. Open daily, 11:30-2, and 5:30-midnight. Full bar, wine list. AE, MC.

Proctor House-373 Lowell St, Peabody, 531-1598. In 18th-century surroundings, the menu is Yankee con brio, American and Italian specialties. Moderate prices, full bar. Hours: 11:30 am-10 pm, til 11 Fri-Sat. AE, BA/V, CB, DC, MC.

Rosalie's-18 Seward St, Marblehead, 631-9888. The cucina here is North Italian, the surroundings warmly Victorian. Veal Sorrentino, shrimp Luciana. Open daily, 11:45-2:30, and 5:30-10 pm. Reservations are advised for dinner. Fully licensed, no credit cards.

WEST

Cafe l'Orange-Thoreau St, Concord, 369-8700. Upstairs in the Concord Depot, the Cafe is low-key, contemporary, and the cuisine is French: boneless rack of lamb, coquilles St. Jacques, duckling. Prices are moderate, reservations are accepted. Fully licensed. Hours: Mon-Sat, 11:30 am-2:30 pm, and 6-9, ('til 10 pm Fri-Sat), closed Suns. AE, MC.

The Every Day Gourmet-Mill & Speen Sts, Natick. 653-8010. Not quite everyday, actually, it's only open on weekends. The menu from this teaching kitchen changes all the time. Make reservations, and bring your own things to drink. Hours: Fri-Sat, noon-3 pm, Sun, 10 am-2 pm. No credit cards.

Legal Seafoods-Rte 9, in the Chestnut Hill Shopping Centre, 277-7300. Legal's outpost on the western front is sometimes less hectic than the Cambridge branch, especially if you are willing to eat early or late. Otherwise, the set-up is pretty much the same: the crowds, crowds, crowds are offset by the fish, fish, fish. Reservations for large parties. Full bar. Hours: Mon-Sat, 11 am-9 pm; Sun, 1-9 pm. AE, and personal checks.

Longfellow's Wayside Inn-Rte 20, S Sudbury, 443-8846. Both the Inn and its kitchen are faithfully and sturdily Yankee. Hot corn muffins are a stand-by. Among the other favorites: Massachusetts duckling, lobster, baked stuffed shrimp. Open every day, 11:30-3:30, and 5:30-9. Suns, 12 noon-8 pm. The premises are fully licensed and reservations are strongly advised. AE, BA/V, DC, MC.

Old Mill-Rte 2A, Westminster, 874-5941. Down by the old mill stream, and waterfall, a traditional setting for traditional dining. Duckling, prime rib, baked stuffed shrimp. Full bar. Open daily, 8:30 am-10 pm. AE, BA/V, CB, DC, MC.

Peking Garden-27 Waltham St, Lexington, 862-1051. Sino-American egg rolls and chow mein for the bashful, and a host of Szechuan, Mandarin, and Shanghai specialties for the initiate. A range of prices: House Special Duck tops the bill at $9. Full bar. Reservations are accepted for parties of eight or more. Open Sun-Thurs, 11:30 am-10 pm; Fri-Sat, 'til 11 pm. AE, DC, MC.

La Petite Auberge-4 Waltham St, Maynard, 897-2850. Hearty French country cooking. Some of the features of the menu are snails in garlic, cassoulet, filet mignon. There is a full bar and an exceptional wine card. Open daily, 11:30 am-9 pm, 'til 10 pm Sat-Sun, when reservations are a must. No credit cards, but personal checks are accepted.

The William Paul House-Reservoir St (Rte 31) Holden, 829-6666. The specialty of the House is seafood, with a continental accent: baked stuffed filet of sole, seafood Mornay. Moderate prices, full bar. Hours: Tues-Sat, 5-10 pm, Sun, noon-8 pm. AE, BA/V, MC.

Yangtze River Restaurant-25 Depot Sq, Lexington Center, 861-6031. Mandarin-Szechuan with Polynesian things as well: Gai-Har-Lo-Mein, Shrimp Almond Ding. Blessed Family Happiness. More happiness: everything is nicely explained on the menu, which is long. Full bar. Hours: Sun-Thurs, 11:30 am-9:30 pm; Fri-Sat, until 10:30 pm. AE, BA/V, MC.

SOUTH

Barnside Tavern-Assinippi Corners, Rte 3, Hanover, 878-9814. Sprawling and always crowded, it's Americana from the word go: prime rib and shrimp are among the favorites. Salad and dessert bars. Fully licensed. Open daily from 11:30 am-10 pm, 1 pm-9 pm on Sun. AE, BA/V, DC, MC.

Ben White's-31 Providence Highway (Rte 1), Norwood, 762-6740. Elegantly continental, with a greenhouse to enjoy along with things like chicken Jerusalem, veal Viennoise, and a full range of potables. Hours: Mon-Fri, 11:30 am-9:45 pm, Sat, 5:30 pm-10:45 pm, Sun, noon-9 pm. AE, BA/V, MC.

Casa Berrini-Main St, Marshfield, 834-8765. Continental embellishments on a traditional menu: veal, prime rib, seafood, and Salad Gazebo. Moderate prices, full bar. Open daily except Mon, 11 am-1 am. AE, BA/V, CB, DC, MC.

The Country Fare-1217 Main St, Hingham, 749-[illegible]60. Wildlife from land and sea among the entrees. King Crab casserole, roast duck. Moderately expensive. The premises are fully licensed, and reservations are recommended. Hours: Tues-Sat, 11:30 am-9 pm; Sun, 11:30 am-8 pm. AE, BA/V, DC, MC.

Ronnie's Kosher Restaurant-1179 N Main, Randolph, 986-6743. Strictly Kosher, all the food is made on the premises under rabbinical supervision. Roast brisket, kreplach soup, and stuffed chicken are a few of the favorites. No liquor. Hours: Sun-Thurs, 8 am-11 am, noon-4 pm, and 5-9 pm. Fri: 8 am-5 pm. Sat: 5-9 pm. BA/V, MC.

The Victorian-583 Linwood Ave, Whitinsville, 234-2500. Near the Connecticut border, Whitinsville may be off the beaten track, but if you're in the area, or even if you're not, The Victorian will reward you with period decor and a menu that is mostly French, with continental and American accents. Closed Mons, otherwise, Tues-Sat, 11:30 am-2:30 pm and from 5:30 pm onwards, and Sun, noon-8 pm. Fully licensed. BA/V, MC.

Puzzle #39
Weather Proof

By Don Rubin

"You don't need a weatherman to know which way the wind blows."

Perhaps. But then, Dylan was merely discussing the surface wind direction, wasn't he? He said nothing about velocity, for example. Or hail. He never mentioned tornadoes or snowfall or any one of a dozen other meteorological phenomena. Presumably, you would need a weather (ahhh) person to know about those.

Or would you?

Simply match the maps with their appropriate captions. (Note that there are more captions than maps.)

As Howard Cosell sometimes says when he's feeling expansive, "Utterly unbelievable!" You folks batted 880 on our baseball puzzle, even though we tried to be sneaky with some pitching stats. Our winning team was: 1. Tony Oliva 2. Roger Maris 3. Hank Greenberg 4. Lou Brock 5. Joe DiMaggio 6. Ted Williams 7. Babe Ruth 8. Satchell Paige 9. Sandy Koufax.

Rules of the Game

From now on, the answers to and winners of any given puzzle will appear TWO WEEKS after the puzzle runs in METROGUIDE. Note that the deadline has also been extended.

1. Names of the first ten contestants with the correct answer will be published in METROGUIDE. All contestants submitting correct answers to any of the puzzles through August 31 will qualify for the Lottery, and a grand prize of dinner for two with all the trimmings. The METRODINNER winner will be announced in the September 14 issue of METROGUIDE.
2. All entries in The Puzzle Contest must be received at the METROGUIDE office, 227 Statler Office Building, Boston, MA 02116, by noon, the Thursday one week after publication.
3. All entries must be accompanied by the name and address of the contestant.
4. Employees of METROGUIDE and their immediate families are not eligible.
5. All entries must be accompanied by a tearsheet of the puzzle page. Whenever possible, the Puzzle answer should be entered on the form provided.

DO YOU HAVE THE YEN FOR A NEW STEREO?

The majority of hi-fi components, especially receivers and turntables, are manufactured in Japan. Unfortunately, the value of the American dollar versus the Japanese yen has been rapidly decreasing. Substantial price hikes are expected shortly from most of the Japanese manufacturers. Many of these price increases will occur immediately without the usual 30 day price change notice. In the interest of saving you money, the K&L Bomber strongly recommends that you purchase your equipment NOW . . . before the price increases get out of hand.

'Off to the races'

Abortion and inflation occupy voters in congressional race

By RICHARD WILLIAMS
of the Graphic staff

Abortion and inflation are the key words in the Democratic primary race in the U.S. Fourth Congressional District as football coach and teacher Norman Walker takes on incumbent Robert Drinan.

Both men live in Newton, one of the most eastern of the 20 communities that make up the district that includes Framingham, Fitchburg, Weston, Waltham, and Brookline.

The winner in the Sept. 19 is assured a seat in Congress, since there is no Republican opponent.

Walker, who teaches English and coaches at Newton North High School, admits he has an uphill fight against the four-term incumbent Jesuit priest.

At a recent house party in West Newton near the Waltham line, Walker told the guests that he voted for Drinan eight years ago, but now feels frustrated by him.

Robert Drinan

Walker is frustrated with "the present congressman and government in general — excessive liberalism, permissiveness, and big spending."

Calling himself a "moderate to conservative Democrat," Walker makes it clear that he is against abortion and its funding by Congress. Drinan has consistently voted for federally funded abortions.

At a recent party in the home of Eugene Wadman of Auburndale, Drinan's full-time bookkeeper, the incumbent said he is well aware of financial crunch inflation creates.

Drinan said he consistently votes against maritime subsidies and farmers' subsidies to reduce the tax burden, but "there are some things only the federal government can do."

These include enforcing clean air standards and creating agencies like the Tennessee Valley Authority to produce energy instead of being "ripped off by the Seven Sisters," Drinan's nickname for the biggest oil companies in the U.S.

Drinan doesn't have any "magic formula" for inflation, seems to favor a tax incentive plan for businesses that hold increases in wages and prices under 6 percent.

The incumbent also supports John Kenneth Galbraith's plan for limited price controls.

Walker believes the Keynesian economic theory of "letting the money run" doesn't work.

"If I go into debt $600, I would cut down on money spent on food, travel, entertainment, and go a little longer before buying another pair of shoes.

"Some say you can't use the principles of running a family in government. I say 'Why not?'"

Walker would also favor some form of price controls, but sees the main problem of the economy as government taking too big a chunk out of the normal flow of money between producers and consumers.

Norman Walker

Walker is running an anti-Drinan campaign, and it is in that way that he raises a few eyebrows. When he introduces himself at shopping centers, Walker said he gets no response from the people until he says, "I'm running against Drinan."

At house parties such as the one at Jack and Sylvia Moore's home, he hopes the image will change to a pro-Walker one.

Drinan holds up a long list of achievements to the Democrats who will be voting Sept. 19, including quick action to ban the chemical Tris, promotion of solar energy, and a bill to disallow most police searches of newsrooms.

Drinan and Walker agree that the ## Citizens challenge Underwood plan

The $1 million Underwood School renovation project may be delayed two more months if the citizens who fought to keep Emerson and Hamilton schools open are successful with a petition presented to the Board of Aldermen.

Jo Ann Best, chairman of the Newton Citizens for Neighborhood Schools, filed a petition with the clerk of the Board of Aldermen Tuesday asking for a public hearing to be held on the request that the vote on the Underwood renovation be postponed for 60 days.

Signed by 80 persons, the petition asks the Board to delay action "to give the School Committee an opportunity to explain how its decision to commit $1.05 million to one neighborhood school . . . relates to the School Committee's overall plan for dealing with declining enrollment and the question of the preservation of neighborhood elementary schools in all parts of the city."

The filing of this "group petition" under section 10-2 of the City Charter requires that the aldermen hold a public hearing and consider the measure within three months of the filing date. Signatures of 50 registered voters are needed for the petition.

This petition does not begin the process for a referendum, on the bond issue. Ms. Best said she does not know what course her group might take if the questions do not get answered.

Aldermanic Finance Committee Chairman Edward Richmond said Tuesday that he would ask his committee to consider the Underwood bonding issue as scheduled Wednesday night' since the full Board will not have the matter before it until the committee acts.

The full Board may set a date for the public hearing required by the petition at its meeting Monday night.

Upset with Committee

Ms. Best of Newtonville said Tuesday the School Committee's course of action "doesn't seem to make too much sense."

The petition was the outcome of a

Townhouses, condominiums sought for Sidney Hill, Nahanton sites

Developers are busy making plans to build multi-family housing on two parcels on the south side of Newton.

Attorney Oscar A. Wasserman announced this week that he will submit a proposal to the Newton Board of Aldermen in September for 125 units of condominiums in Nahanton Woods.

A similar plan failed last year.

Meanwhile, developer David Zussman revealed plans for more than 100 townhouses next to the Sidney Hill Country Club in Chestnut Hill.

Wasserman's Nahanton Woods plan for 125 units will mean all the units will would be in one building. Last year, the proposal was for 112 condominiums in two six-story buildings.

The 125 units would be in one building that would be five stories high. It would be set 1000 feet from Nahanton Street abut ing Mount Ida Junior College and the Charles River County Country Club.

In last year's attempt, the developer offered to transfer 21 acres of land to the city at no cost as a conservation easement. This offer stands.

Wasserman said the condominiums have been designed for "the more mature couple who have who have a desire for an ownership interest in a multifamily environment and who have found this choice of housing literally unavailable to them in Newton."

Zussman's townhouses would occupy the 12.3 acre farm on Florence Street that abuts the country club. He said he hopes to construct 130 to 150 townhouses and has leased the Spezzano farm in preparation for making his proposal.

This matter will have an initial discussion tonight (Thursday) at the Conservation Commission meeting at City Hall.

Both developments would require a special permits from the Board of Aldermen.

Local 800 votes Monday on offer

Members of Local 800 state and municipal employees union will vote on a new two-year contract Monday.

Balloting on the contract, offering a 5 percent pay increase in each year, will begin at 8:30 a.m. at the Crafts Street yard in Newtonville.

According to Union President Louis Rufo, the offer also includes increases in the clothing allowance, longevity pay, night differential and a change in funeral leave procedures.

Rufo indicated the clothing allowance would go from $55 to $80 in the first year of the contract and to $100 in the second.

Longevity pay, a lump sum that given to workers with 10 years or more time with the city, will increase from $175 to $225 for people with 10 to 14 years experience; $200 to $275 for people with 15-19 years experience, and from $225 to $325 for people with 20 or more years experience.

In the second year of the contract

A view from the top on affirmative action

Leon Brathwaite

By LINDA FRITZ
Graphic Correspondent

Should the city and the School Department have affirmative action officers?

Yes, said Massachusetts Director of the Office of Affirmative Action, Leon A. Brathwaite,II, a Waban resident.

An aggressive officer is the key to the success of the city's affirmative action plan, he said. The School Department should have a part-time person who could work full time during the hiring season, Brathwaite added.

The city has had affirmative action directors, but they have all left for better paying positions. The School Department lacks such a program. It does have a person who handles its Chapter 622 work, according to Thomas O'Conor, assistant director of personnel. The 622 program prohibits discrimination within the school system, but does not specifically define hiring practices.

'An aggressive officer is the key to success'

The city needs an affirmative action program, O'Conor said, because it is dealing with civil service positions. The School Department is not, he added.

While O'Conor's position may be correct, many businesses such as American Telephone & Telegraph (AT&T), have been required by the court to promote actively women and minority people.

The AT&T decision was upheld by the Supreme Court immediately after the Baake decision' Brathwaite noted.

The Baake decision, according to Brathwaite, made dual quota affirmative action programs such as the Davis plan illegal. If Davis had only one system, it would not have come under attack, he added.

The court or a federal agency can impose quotas Brathwaite said, noting some of the recent court cases. It is also appropriate for an organization to set goals for hiring minority members and women, he added. For example, he said, if there are five positions open, the organization can say one of these will go to a minority person. But it must be careful not to pinpoint which position is reserved, Brathwaite said.

A court or federal agency can impose quotas

Recently the School Committee approved the hiring of three white males to executive positions. School Committee member Katherine Jones opposed the decision, calling for the hiring of minority people and women.

The School Department said it had tried to find such people, but the most qualified were the three men selected. As for setting a goal of hiring at least one woman or minority person, O'Conor in a telephone interview rejected the idea. It would be like setting a quota, which the Baake decision clearly prohibits, he said.

When an organization fails to hire minority people or women, it often is searching for personnel with qualifications exceeding the requirements of the position, Brathwaite said. For example, it does not need to hire a Ph.D to do a job only requiring a Bachelor's degree' he said. Often the new personnel have more qualifications than the incumbents, he said.

Newtonville lawyer named chairwoman of Milk Commission

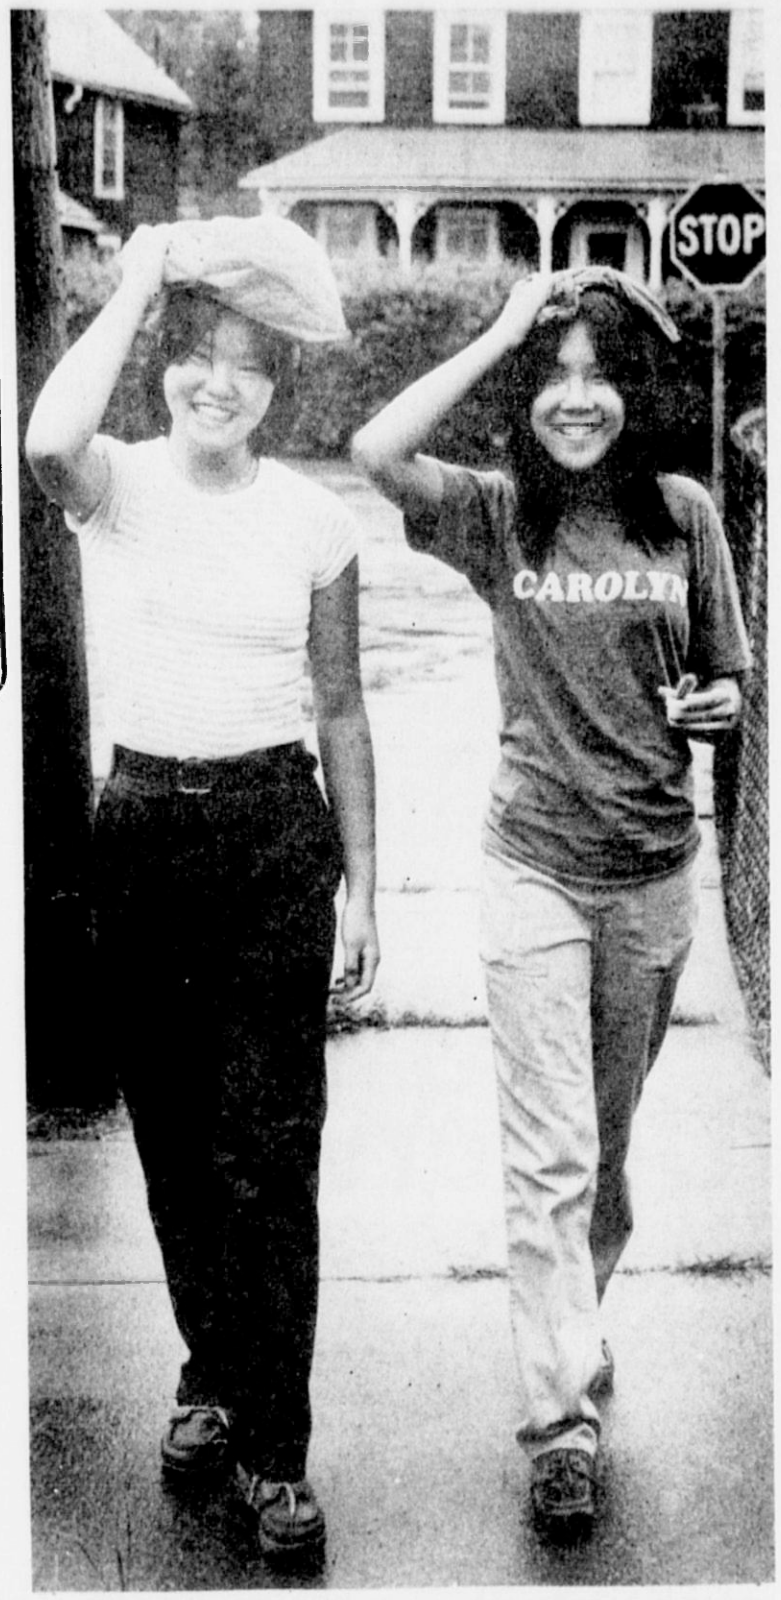

Catherine Clement of Newtonville, a general trial attorney with a private practice in Boston, has been appointed chairwoman of the state Milk Control Commission by Gov. Michael Dukakis.

The three-member commission was established during the Depression to ensure that dairy farmers received a fair price for milk. Since then most of its pricing functions have been assumed by the federal government, but it still audits the books of milk dealers and prevents the sale of milk below costs, as well as licensing various industry personnel.

Ms. Clement, 32, was previously an attorney for the Massachusetts Defenders Committee and a research assistant for the Harvard Law School Center for Criminal Justice, where she co-authored a study on sentencing information at the request of Chief Judge Walter McLaughlin.

Ms. Clement, who received her B.S. in mathematics from Middlebury College and her J.D. from Boston University Law School, has done systems analysis and computer programming for scientific and business applications for IBM.

Ms. Clement will serve in the unsalaried position until July, 1983.

State releases second money list

A second list of people who are entitled to unclaimed money was released by State Treasurer Robert Crane this week.

A third will be published in the Aug. 17 Newton Graphic.

Crane said the response to publication of the first list last month was "overwhelming."

"We have been averaging more than 2000 calls per day," the treasurer said.

The largest amount sent out was in excess of $14,000, according to Crane.

Two Massachusetts residents, a man from Brighton and a woman from Boston, each will receive close to $12,000.

Crane noted that most of the amounts of money are small , but said that "well over 2000 people have forgotten accounts of $100."

The Newton list represents the last known address of the people who are due money from lost or forgotten checking and savings accounts, unclaimed dividend checks or uncashed wage checks.

If your name appears on the list, the easiest way to claim your money is to write: State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane, 12th Floor, McCormack Building, Ashburton Place, Boston, Mass. 02108.

You can also call 727-5192 or 727-1157.

When writing, Crane requests you include your name, address, phone number and name as listed in the newspaper.

Needham man cited for speeding, then disorderly conduct

A Needham man was charged with disorderly conduct after he allegedly threw something at officers who had just given him a speeding ticket Monday night.

Paul G. Kauranen, 21, of 94 Fairfield St., Needham, was cited by police for allegedly going through a stop sign and speeding on Elliot Street in Newton Highlands at about 11 p.m. Monday.

As Officers James Rogers and Gregory Wright had began to drive away, the suspect allegedly threw something at Officer Rogers, who ducked and bumped Officer Wright who was driving, according police. The cruiser swerved into another lane on Rte. 9 and barely avoided an accident.

The officers stopped Kauranen again and arrested him on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Blood pressure screening offered

A blood pressure screening will be held Thursday and Friday in a mobile van in front of City Hall.

Open to all Newton residents, the screening will be from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. both days.

The free screening is sponsored by the Newton Health Department and Blue Cross-Blue Shield.

Cultural grants go to two here

The Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities has awarded $1.3 million to 261 cultural organizations in the commonwealth, the largest funding program in the council's 13-year history.

Receiving grants are the All Newton Music School and the Kodaly Center of America, both in West Newton.

All Newton gets $4000 towards free faculty concerts at commercial, social and community centers. The Kodaly Center will receive $6000 towards four weeks of intensive training in the Kodaly concept of music education.

The council requires that its assistance be contracted on a reimbursement basis, and must be matched by the organizations receiving grants. To be eligible, all groups that apply must be non-profit and have tax-exempt status.

Community Schools grant will train local organizers

Your local Community School program may run smoother this fall with the technical assistance from two persons who have been funded by the State Department of Education to train the volunteer coordinators.

Director of Community Schools William Slotnik said this week that this is the first grant the state department ever made to a community education program.

The $21,500 will fund the one-year salaries of a full-time training coordinator and a part-time research and administrative assistant, with funds left over for publication of a training manual.

Director Slotnik said the two new staff members will be attending meetings of the 23 local committees that plan programs in each school neighborhood. They will provide technical assistance to the 400 or so committee members to implement new program ideas, and train them with skills to run a better program.

"Training Volunteers in Community Education" is the name of the grant and will be the name of the manual to be written by the training coordinator and his staff, under Slotnik's guidance.

Slotnik said it will be distributed in Newton and in some parts of the state, and if funding allows, arrangements may be made for national distribution.

Piggy bank pried open; rings and watches taken

A piggy bank was pried open to net burglars $6 in addition to the diamond ring and watches taken from a Kewadin Road home in Waban.

The owner returned home Saturday after one week and found a rear cellar window broken. Intruders took two watches, one worth $100, a ring worth $60, a ring with diamond chips, and assorted jewelry, in addition to the child's savings.

A stereo set worth more than $2370 was taken from a home on Walnut Street in Newtonville sometime Friday. Intruders forced a window on the side of the house and also took some credit cards' police reported.

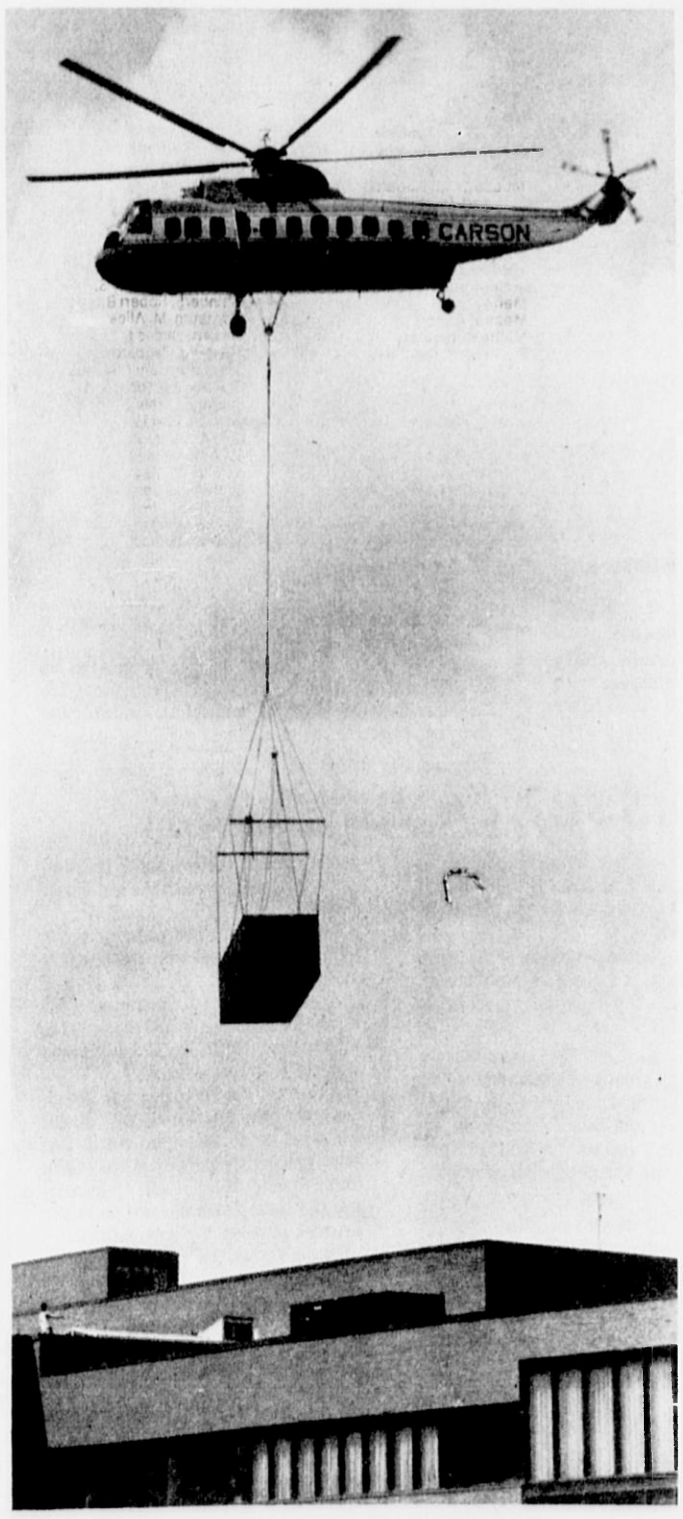

Two offices at 259 Walnut St., Newtonville, were broken into on between Friday night and Saturday afternoon, police said, and attempts were made to enter three other offices.

A typewriter was missing from the office of Parrazzo and Hurley, Inc., and the office of Photobeam was also broken into. The door jams of both places were broken.

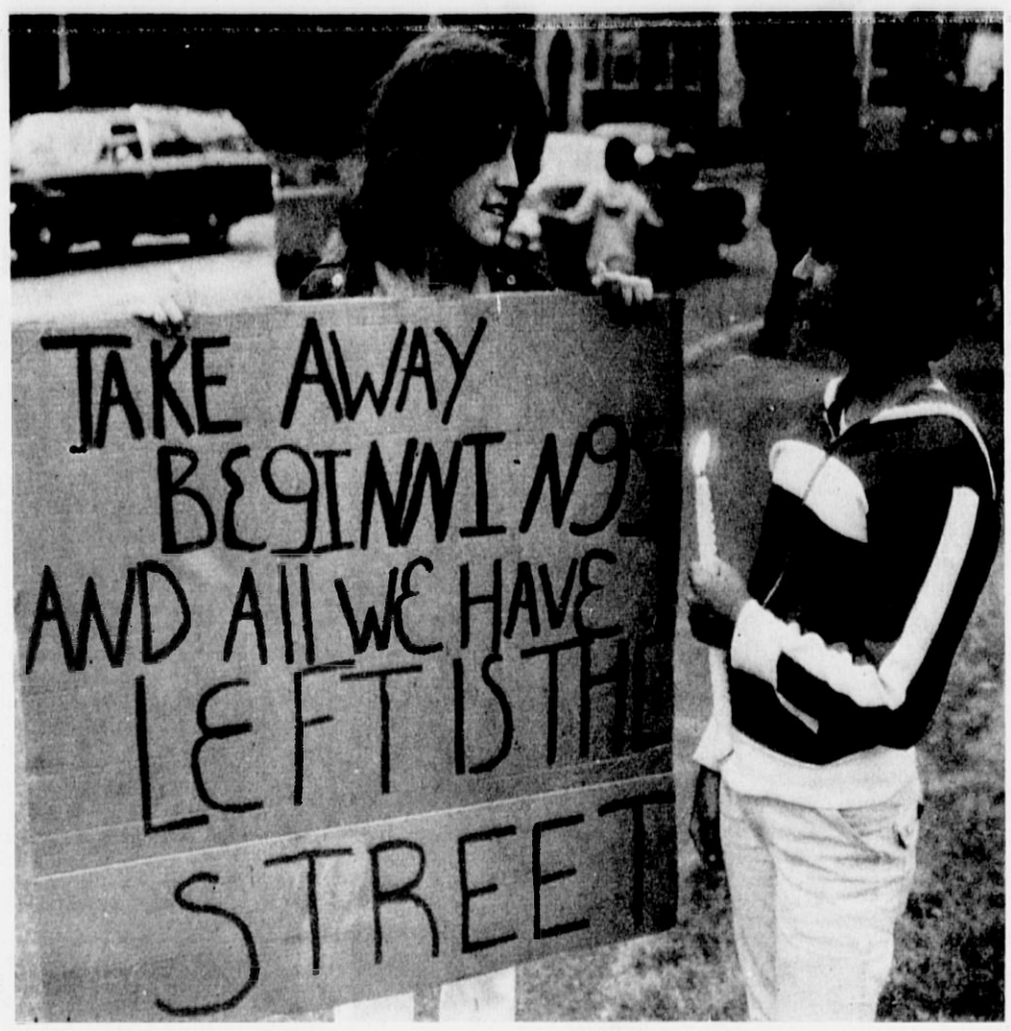

A woman on Andrew Street, Newton Highlands, had some silver and gold spoons taken from a table in the front yard during a yard sale Saturday at around noon. The 10 berry spoons were valued at $100' police said.

Hydraulic wrenches, adapters for fire hydrants, and brooms were taken from a truck parked in the Elliot Street city construction yard over the weekend.

The garage was broken into by breaking padlocks, and the tools were taken from a truck owned by Belli Construction.

Help is on the way. The first of eight three-ton ventilators was lowered on the the roof of Newton North High School last week to be used to help solve heating, ventilation and air conditioning probelms at the school. The Carson Co. flew the helicopter in from Philadelphia Thursday morning. With its 8000-pound capacity, the chopper took about an hour to move the units from four truck beds onto the roof. Director of Support Services Roy Cornelius said the renovation . is proceeding on schedule. (Graphic photo by Rich Williams)

'Beginnings' searches for new home and more money

By RICHARD WILLIAMS
of the Graphic staff

"Beginnnings" has come to a standstill.

The Newton Youth Foundation, which was the board of directors for the teen drop-in center in Newton Corner, voted to disband a month ago after 10 years of operation.

The Newton Community Service Centers Inc. (NCSC) has taken the program under its wing, but it is unlikely the program that served about 250 youths in the Eliot Church will be in full swing in September.

Anthony Bibbo, director of NCSC, and Edward Uehlein, vice president of its board, met last week with about 60 youths and adults to hear what is needed for a youth program in Newton Corner.

The two problems facing the future of any drop-in program in Newton Corner are space and money.

Several parents at the meeting in Pomroy House last Wednesday night expressed gratitude to the Eliot Church that housed the program for the past eight years.

Church Moderator Fred Rosene said the church is now re-evaluating its use of space, and is not ready to renew its commitment to Beginnings.

Rosene said the church would like to see more community support in running the program. The wear and tear on the building, including major repairs to heating and plumbing, will cost about $25,000 before the basement area can be used again.

Furthermore, he said the church feels less and less that they have a say in what goes on in its basement.

When residents asked if the church would accept Beginnings back if the repairs are made, Rosene said he could not answer for the whole church.

Bibbo said Wednesday that if there is no space found in the community, "We're flexible enough so that if we have to, we can open something at the Pomroy House," a building which is owned by NCSC and is already packed with programs.

Funding

Beginnings has always had a cash flow problem, Richard Weisman of the Newton Youth Foundation said.

It was run with state funds which always came in after the money had been spent, and from community donations, which have dropped off from $4000 to $700 in the past 10 years.

Weisman said it would take about $45,000 a year to continue the program that was in the church.

That included a drop-in center open every night, offering career guidance, a drama group, basketball, volleyball, pinball, boxing, and day and weekend trips.

The Department of Mental Health State Division of Drug Rehabilitation has already renewed its commitment to fund the drama director and career counselor, but there must be a full-time director and a building.

Mary Keady from the Department of Mental Health said the contract may be changed to allow for a different location, but there has to be a director. She tried to get funding for one, but was unsuccessful.

Bibbo said the Recreation Department has committed about $2900 to the program, and he is waiting to hear from the Planning Department how much federal Community Development money will be available.

No one at the Pomroy House meeting made any bright forecasts of what would happen if there is no program in September.

One parent said before Beginnings was there, kids would hang around all night in the streets. They can't hang out in the parks, the bowling alley, or the restaurant, she said.

Beginnings was an important place for Hannah Erlich.

"We had a lot of good times, a lot of sad times, a lot of great times," she said at the Pomroy House.

Bibbo and members of the community are going to be meeting to decide how to continue a program in Newton Corner. Already the teens have met and told the adults what is needed the most, including a place to go weeknights.

As Uehlein said during the meeting, "Beginnings will not die. It's a question of how it will survive."

Hearing on dead horse postponed

A show-cause hearing regarding a dead horse and Police Officer Edward Woloski has been postponed to this afternoon at 2 p.m., Newton District Court Clerk Henry Shultz said Tuesday.

The hearing was originally to be held Wednesday morning to determine if a misdemeanor charge will be filed against Woloski who was riding a horse in West Newton on July 9 before it collapsed and died.

Clerk Shultz said the hearing was postponed to allow it to be heard by an impartial judge who does not know Newton police.

The Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has been involved in the investigation of the incident along with Newton police.

The charge which may result from the hearing, which may or may not be open to the press and public depending on whether the judge feels there is sufficient public interest, is cruelty to animals, punishable by a $500 fine, a year in jail, or both.

Mayor wants archive money released

A request has gone to the Board of Aldermen from Mayor Theodore Mann asking for the release of $77,000 from surplus for the proposed city archive at the Jackson Homestead.

The funds will be used to construct the first level of the building which will contain vaults to be used for preserving and storing the city's archives.

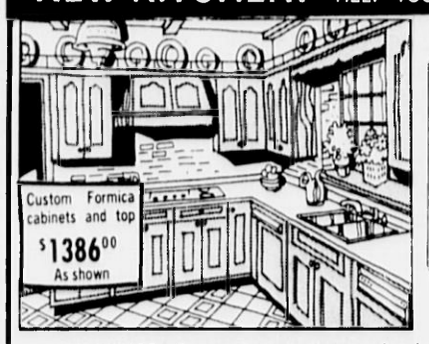

Friends of the Jackson Homestead have volunteered to raise an additional $125, 0000 to build second and third floors for storage and display of historic records of the city.

The Jackson Homestead is the city-owned museum on Washington street in Newton near Newton Corner.

"With nearly 300 years of history of the City of Newton, it is important that our archives be properly organized, catalogued and stored," Mann commented.

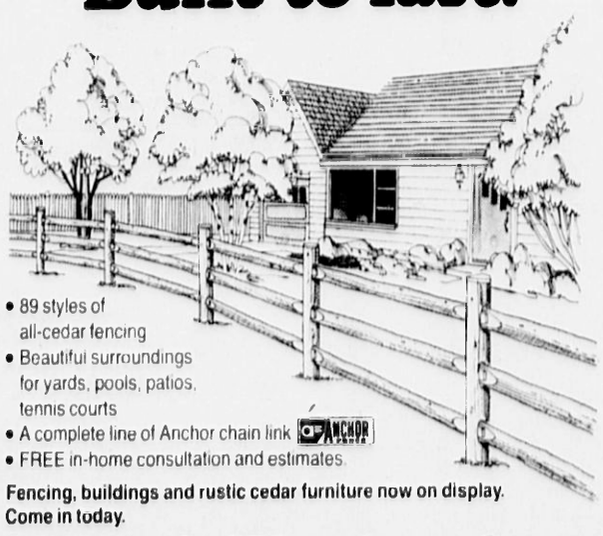

Moving the records, he said, will free needed space in City Hall for overflowing city departments.

Give money. Even more, give understanding.

Why all the fuss?

In an obvious attempt to smother what could be a hot political issue, President Carter instructed his press secretary, Jody Powell, to announce that "those who work in the White House are expected to obey the laws, and, if they do not, they can seek employment elsewhere." The news release was in reference to charges made by resigned drug abuse consultant Dr. Peter Bourne that White House staff members used both marijuana and cocaine.

Is the use of the illegal drugs really widespread?

At the time of the Bourne statement, several observers commented that marijuana use was commonplace with young executives, members of the educational community and those in the news media. White House staff personnel were present at a party held by a group seeking changes in laws relating to marijuana. The old argument that pot is not as harmful as alcohol was raised as well as references to cocaine, supposedly the drug used by many 19th Century British statesmen and men of letters.

But a "bust" in a small city in Connecticut may indicate the seriousness of the casual use of illegal drugs.

Williamantic is not a suburb or a wealthy town. It is a mill town. It is on a drug trafficker's route in the state, although reportedly much of the traffic has been stopped. But last March the police conducted a marijuana raid near public school playgrounds. They arrested 52 schoolchildren, including four who were only nine years old. The average age was 12. Pot apparently is being increasingly used by youngsters to avoid the stresses of adolescence.

And there is another reason.

After the children were brought to court by their parents, Judge Francis X. Hennessy commented that "an alarming number of parents want to know what the fuss is all about when their kids are picked up for marijuana. The parents use it in the homes. Lawyers who are defending the kids are smoking it . . . there are usually alcohol problems in the family of most children on pot. The families tend to rely more and more on the schools and the court to instill the discipline that they can't instill."

The White House indeed should set an example. That information should have been made known many months ago. President Carter's commendatory policy of not serving hard liquor at White House parties will go for naught if the illegal use of drugs is quietly condoned.

What a new pope may mean to Americans

Boston born Cardinal John Joseph Wright, one of two U.S. cardinals mentioned as possible papal candidates, is given little chance for election to succeed Paul VI by those who watch the Vatican.

By David E. Anderson, Religious Writer

Ordination of women, birth control, priestly celibacy and relations with non-Catholics all are issues that many Catholics believe will receive new consideration by the next pope.

The death Pope Paul VI left the Roman Catholic world preparing for new leadership, but what change, if any, a new pontiff may bring to the Vatican remains a matter of hope and speculation.

Popes, like Supreme Court justices in the United States, cannot be typed by their past records. The office changes the man as much as the man changes the office.

In the United States, with 50 million of the world's 700 million Catholics, the church has been on the cutting edge of the dramatic changes in modern religious life.

In a society ruled by pluralism where the church has to live at peace with Protestants, Jews and a hundred other varieties of religious belief and non-belief, tolerance for dissent is a way of life and the church has learned to live with it.

Additionally, like other religious groups in the United States, the Catholic church has had to face growing secularism and materialism and find a way to maintain the core of its faith while accommodating itself to the changes demanded by modern times.

For American Catholics it has not always been easy.

—Major elements of the American church, in defiance of its own hierachy, led the world in outspoken opposition to Paul's encyclical banning the pill as a means of birth control.

—The fledgling struggle for ordination of women was born and continues to receive its major impetus from U.S. church members.

—The church's continued opposition to married priests and its insistence on priestly celibacy has led to a critical shortage of priests and nuns at a time when Protestants are experiencing a glut of seminarians seeking the ministry.

While the American hierarchy stood firmly with Paul on such issues, the laity, a number of priests and nuns and a significant number of theologians broke with church teaching. Dissent, often sharp and provocative, has become a fact of American church life.

The new pope's impact will not be limited to Roman Catholics.

A central question Protestant and Orthodox church officials will ask is whether the new pope will continue to follow Paul's innovations and openness to the ecumenical movement.

Since Paul ushered Vatican Council II to its conclusion and brought the Catholic church into interfaith activities, a great deal of progress has been made in the area of interfaith relations.

A major stumbling block in overcoming these splits, however, remains the Vatican's conception of the authority and infallibility of the bishop of Rome — a question that is even now under scrutiny by Catholics and Lutherans in the United States.

Will there be a revolt against Pope Paul's stand?

By Ernest Sakler

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The death of Pope Paul VI renewed fears of a conservative backlash against church reforms he instituted and a liberal revolt against his firm stand on birth control and priestly celibacy.

Paul's successor must map the church's response to that double challenge.

Pope Paul gave the church a new liturgy, replacing the ancient Latin of the Mass with the language of the people, and a simplified administration. He stripped the Vatican of much of its pomp and ceremony and internationalized its Italiandominated bureaucracy.

His appeals for world peace and social justice and against racism won the church wide support in Third World countries.

At the same time, his reforms antagonized church conservatives. Movements against the vernacular mass sprang up in the United States and other countries.

Defying papal warnings, appeals and orders, French traditionalist Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre set up his own seminary, ordained his own priests and toured Europe and the Americas campaigning for a church like that of his forefathers.

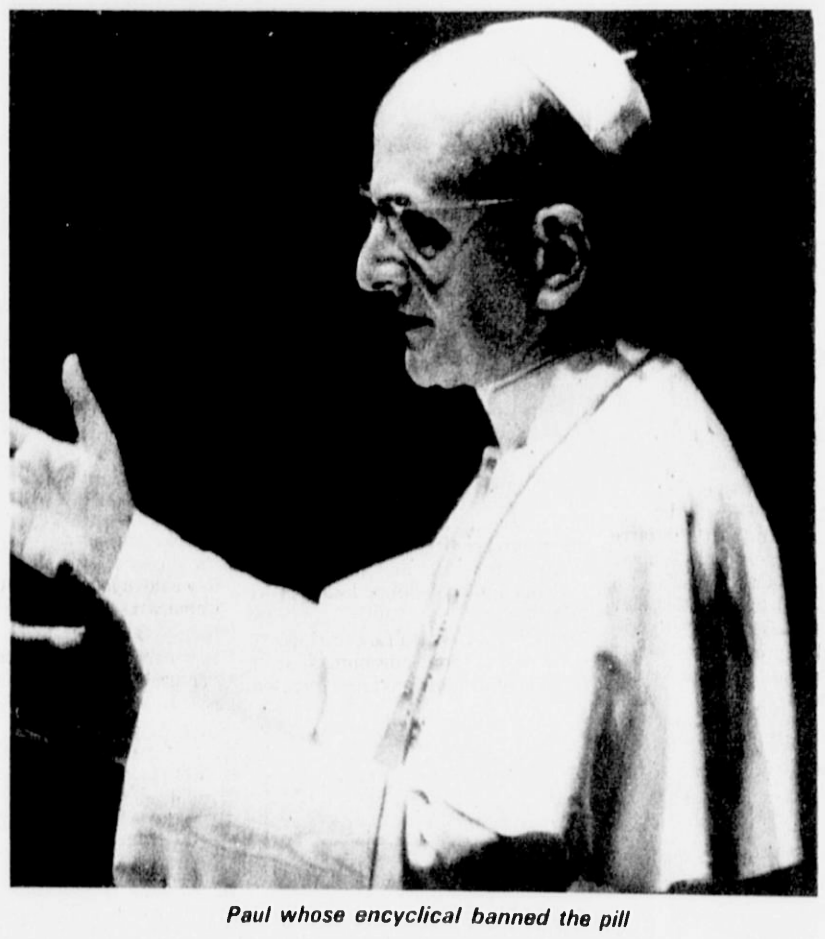

Lefebvre's supporters are believed to be in the tens of thousands and his financial backing is considerable. Only a mixture of firmness and caution on the part of the Vatican has prevented his movement so far from developing into Roman Catholicism's first 20th century schism.

Reformer as he was in some fields, Pope Paul firmly retained church heritage in others. His pronouncements in favor of priestly celibacy, against the ordination of women priests and against artificial birth control alienated many progressive priests and laymen.

A number of observers said the celibacy rule and Paul's insistence on his own authority were among the reasons for the dramatic fall in the number of applications to the priesthood and of a number of defections.

The Jesuits, the church's largest religious order and think tank, reported recently they had lost nearly one-fourth of their membership in 13 years.

The number of priests the world over is going down while total Catholic population is going up. Several European countries that once sent missionaries to the far corners of the world are now importing priests from Africa and Asia. In some parts of Latin America, Roman Catholics see a priest only a few times a year.

Paul whose encyclical banned the pill

Paul's ecumenical efforts were dramatically highlighted in 1964 by his "kiss of peace" embrace with Greek Orthodox Patriarch Athenagoras I on Jerusalem's Mount of Olives, and again last year by a joint prayer service in the Sistine Chapel with the archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Donald Coggan.

But the efforts have been set back or delayed by disputes among Catholics, Orthodox and Protestants. The Catholic doctrine of papal infallibility, which other churches reject, is one of the main stumbling stones.

The papacy and the pill—dissent continues

By David E. Anderson

On July 29, 1968, word was flashed from the Vatican that "the pill," developed in 1962 with the help of a Roman Catholic doctor, had been banned as a legitimate birth control device by Pope Paul VI.

The papal encyclical — a letter containing authoritative teaching — hit the U.S. church in the middle of a summer that had seen other American institutions shocked by a wave of assassinations, demonstrations, and dissent that shook them to their foundations.

But nothing was shaken so thoroughly as the Roman Catholic church in the wake of Pope Paul's encyclical "Humanae Vitae (On Human Life)."

For Catholics still hopeful of further reforms in the spirit of Vatican Council II, it was a stunning blow.

The document, a theological treatment of the moral issues involved in love and marriage, reiterated the church's traditional bans on abortion, sterilization and mechanical forms of birth control and added:

"Similarly excluded is every action which, either in anticipation of the conjugal act, or in its accomplishment, or in the development of its natural consequences, proposes, whether as an end or as a means, to render procreation impossible."

In those words, the contraceptive pill, developed in part with the aid of Roman Catholic Dr. John Rock and then being used by some 6 million women in the United States, was declared out of bounds for Catholics.

The Pope's action led to one of the most intense periods of dissent in the church's life since the Reformation of the 16th century.

Within hours of the encyclical's publication, a group of 87 theologians, led by Fr. Charles E. Curran, a moral theologian at Catholic University in Washington, issued a statement dissenting from the pope's teaching.

"As Roman Catholic theologians, conscious of our duty and our limitations, we conclude that spouses may responsibly decide according to their conscience that artifical contraception in some circumstances is permissible and indeed necessary," the statement said.

It was to gather the endorsement of some 600 theologians over the next few months and lead to an issue still unresolved: the role of dissent within the Roman Catholic church and the extent to which priest, theologian or lay believer may disregard papal teaching.

At the time the encyclical was issued, Commonweal, the lay-edited, liberal Roman Catholic magazine noted that "for millions of lay people, the birth control question has been confronted, prayed over and settled — and not in the direction of the pope's encyclical."

Recent studies confirmed the truth of those words.

Moral dilemmas in a scientific age

By RICHARD BULLWINKLE

The recent birth of Baby Louise Brown, the "test tube baby," has placed scientists of the "everything new is wonderful because its new"school at odds with those who fear the Orwellian aspects of future social planning.

The facts are that the technical accomplishment of the medical scientists in this case is of the highest order. The joy of the new parents in the birth of this child is obvious and real. Science aided nature in the miracle of this child.

On the other hand, the mechanics of a sperm bank, donor eggs and a third party host mother have elements of cloning and the development of a super race.

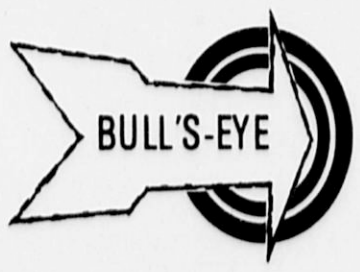

In reality, this technique may not work in every case, but only when conditions are propititious. Like the Dionne quints of the mid-30's, every event, growth and fever of this child will be under a worldwide microscope. The road from curiosity to the development of a potential super race must run the gamut of religionists, moralists and, finally, politicians, and I do not see this happening in my lifetime, in this country.

Two other stories relating to young parents allegedly abusing and disposing of their dead children are at best depressing and at the worst, fearful of the future.

One might consider these cases to be social aberrations, but the feeling is they probably are not.

The real concern is not only the changes in society, but, most importantly, the stability of that society. One can argue the efficacy of change, but one must feel secure that tommorrow's life will be similar to yesterday's.

The changing of the family shape and structure to one of smaller size and style (one parent, male or female) is not worrisome, but the breakdown of the family unit itself is foreboding.

The cement that bonds the family together is the touchstone that holds this great nation together.

Only when that element is eroded or eliminated will the United States go into decline.

A final, recent pertinent story has to do with the other side of the birth issue — abortions and the courts.

The Massachusetts legislature passed a law denying the use of state funds for abortions, except in rare cases. Vetoed by Governor Dukakis and overriden by the Legislature, it has become the law of the state.

A suit brought into the Federal District Court in Boston challenging the state law was modified by the Judge. Therein lies the rub.

The issues and merits of the law aside, the real point in this suit has to deal with the issue of separation of powers.

Not being a lawyer, my understanding of the function of the Legislature is to make laws and the judiciaries' purpose is to interpret the facts and merits of the law.

The judiciaries function is not to make or modify law — yet this latest case finds a federal judge doing just that.

On the broader merits of the separations of power, it would seem the Massachusetts Legislature should bring suit against the federal court for an excess of authority. Richard Bullwinkle is a former West Newton alderman.

Opinions

In an act akin to throwing the baby out with the bathwater, the carefully planted and tended flowers in Newton Corner were weeded out along with the weeds last week by a city crew. This island is north of the turnpike at Centre Street. (Graphic photo by Rich Williams)

Plants 'weeded out'

To the Editor:

How unfortunate it is that either through faulty communciation between city departments, or someone's lack of good judgment, a group of workers was sent to weed the traffic islands in Newton Corner and proceeded to pull up, with the weeds, $400 worth of flowering perennial plants!

You will recall how many hours of labor went into the planning of some color and beauty in the islands and the parking lots of the core area by the Living Color Croup of the Newton Corner Neighborhood Association. Not only did hours of work go into the planting of thousands of spring bulbs (which were so favorably noted this past spring), but additional hours, including evening work and pre-dawn work to avoid traffic interference, were spent in June by volunteers to ensure beauty and color during the summer.

Our group was told that we could have a small allotment of money from the Community Development funds, but that no maintenance could be provided by the city. With that in mind, the Newton Corner Neighborhood Advisory Committee requested the use of CETA young people for the summer in 1977 and again this summer.

We were told this was quite impossible, first, because CETA youth were supposed to be in a vocationally oriented program with regular counseling and supervision, and that plant maintenance was not considered within the proper category, despite the committee's arguments that the work might arouse interest in landscape work as a career.

Imagine our chagrin that the Main Library had been given five CETA workers for maintenance purposes.

In short, the Newton Corner neighbors are shocked by the carelessness of the work and the apparent lack of distinction between weeds and expensive plants.

We are requesting the city replace the plants from its budget.

Of course, we would be happy to see the islands maintained for the remainder of the season.

Removing pumper

To the Editor:

Mayor Theodore Mann and Chief Harvey Preble may possibly be right in their decision to partially eliminate the use of fire pumper No. 5 from the Auburndale Fire Station.

However, it seems sort of bizarre to base such a serious decision about public safety on the availability of men and overtime funds, rather than on a serious analysis of the equipment needed to provide the level of fire protection the citizens of Newton actually require.

It also seems strange that decisions such as this one frequently occur in the middle of summer when a lot of people are away or otherwise occupied.

It further seems terribly odd that the mayor would allow Chief Preble to make such a critical move without his prior consent. But, then, maybe the mayor knows a lot more about fire protection than many of us have given him credit for in the past.

Maybe he really has totally figured it all out and has a lot of data to prove that the people of Auburndale, West Newton and Newton Lower Falls can get along without one pumper for a few odd shifts between now and Dec. 1.

I think I'd sleep better each night if I really believed all of this.

John Stewart,
Newton Lower Falls

CETA successes

To the Editor:

The Newton Graphic's feature story, "Anatomy of a CETA Project Gone Wrong," by Elizabeth McKinnon in the Aug. 3 issue clearly states that, "Some, probably most, of the CETA projects undertaken by this and other cities are fairly successful." This is an important note to bear in mind as we are told of some flawed situations.

Success across the board is something seldom achieved in most human endeavors whether under the auspices of private enterprise or government. Where Mrs. McKinnon points to specific incidents, she also indicates that CETA officials were not long in taking corrective measures.

As we undertake needed reviews of projects and note defects, we should, at the same time, understand and appreciate the federal legislation for CETA (Comprehensive Employment and Training Act), which represents a compassionate and economically justified national effort to help the unemployed find jobs.

Without the training afforded under CETA, many would find the search for jobs either much more difficult, or futile. The purpose of the program and the concept are for better human living and in the national interest.

The Newton area CETA is generally given high marks for its administration and results. The local, federaliy funded manpower program, with Newton's Mayor Theodore Mann as chairman, serves the unemployed, low-income residents of area communities.

The objective is to see that participants in the program eventually join the private sector in permanent jobs. Obviously, general economic conditions influence the percentage of success in job placement and retention.

Inflation and sharply rising costs now plaguing the economy should not divert our national attention and efforts from what remains the critical national problem of unemployment.

The loss of human values and dignity because of unemployment and the permanent polarization of the unemployed as a class is a condition that is unacceptable and one that demands our fullest attention.

CETA is a vastly improved program based on lessons learned from earlier measures devised for meeting the crises of widespread unemployment. Its purpose and its achievements justify our most understanding support.

With the benefit of experience and constructive reviews, its percentage of successes can and will undoubetedly increase.

David A. Lurensky,
Chestnut Hill

Alternative Home should be watched

To the Editor:

Brian Fallon of Alternative Home Inc. (AH) recently prepared a document for the members of the Land Use Committee. Having reviewed that document, we believe AH has failed to make a case for treatment as an educational institution.

The following paragraphs offer specific comment on AH's citation of court cases, AH's claim that DMH regards it as an educational institution, AH's claim to be educational despite what its corporate charter states and AH's claim to be educational based on its in— house activities.

The final two paragraphs present our desires and conclusion that a permissive use is the best vehicle for the City of Newton to use in allowing AH to operate.

AH cites several court cases as supporting its claim to be an educational institution. None of the cases exactly parallels the AH situation and thus the city solicitor was less than definitive in reviewing this case.

Only a court case can resolve this question definitively. We do not advocate such a procedure.

AH states in several paragraphs that the DMH regards AH as an educational institution. However, DMH's opinion is immaterial, since it is self-serving and not grounded on any authority of DMH's to certify an organization as being educational.

The most definitive statement relating to AH's purposes in this Commonwealth is contained in its corporate charter. In essence the charter proclaims AH's intention of providing supportive service and undertaking good works. It does not mention educational services or activities. We agree that AH provides a needed and useful service. Based on its contracts with DMH, the documents provided to the Land Use Committee and other documents, we believe that any educational content is incidental to their operation.

Based on various statements and documents made and provided by AH it would appear that its operation supplies its clients with a "synthetic" family. Such a family can be more supportive to the clients than their "natural" families, since it is composed of individuals especially oriented to the client's problems. The "educational" activities listed by AH are precisely those educational activities undertaken in most homes by most families. Since these activities are the normal business of a family we believe they are insufficient to allow AH special privileges under the statutes.

The goal of the neighborhood is to have the city retain the authority to constructively review, at appropriate intervals, the operation of AH within a residential setting. We believe that the benefits of all aspects of the residential mental health treatment concept depend on maintaining the quality of the residential area.

To this end Ald. Carol Ann Shea has made the suggestion that AH be given permissive use. AH opposes this possibility.

It seems clear that AH is concerned that this approach would be used by the citizens of Wellesley to oppose AH. On the other hand, unilateral acceptance by the City of Newton of AH's claim to be educational will undoubtedly be cited by AH in its dealings with Wellesley. We believe that AH should be given a Permissive Use permit without prejudice to its educational character. Should the Land Use Committee wish to grant a Permissive Use, the undersigned neighbors, which include a majority of the abutters, believe that the hearings and discussions held thus far have adequately provided for the neighborhood right to a hearing before granting a permissive use.

In conclusion, we wish to restate our support for the publicly stated purposes of AH. We firmly maintain, however, that the community must retain the right to review an unusual use of neighborhood housing and that such right is best guaranteed through Permissive Use authorization.

Jere Beasley, and 11 others,
Auburndale

Conversation

To the Editor:

(In a plush Boston restaurant) "Thank you for the fine dinner, Mr. Lobbyist."

"Think nothing of it, State Legislator. After all, I know you will be thinking of our conversation as you vote in the upcoming sessions of the Legislature."

"I certainly will entertain the many fine points you have made and look forward to being entertained again real soon. Good day."

"Good Day, State Legislator."

(Back at the office of the State Legislator) "You know speaking to his legislative assistant), when this tax limitation amendment passes things are going to get very hot around here."

"Why is that, sir?"

"Because with limited state spending it will be more difficult to reward my friends. Furthermore, with limited state spending how do I create padded jobs, lucrative grants and special privileges for my friends?"

"Sir, you are riqht. Things will heat up, but I have the perfect alibi for you when you are unable to deliver special treatment to your friends and visiting lobbyists."

"What is it?"

"Well, sir, you point out to your friends that all state revenue has been allocated and with the budget ceiling imposed by the tax limitation amendment no more money may be appropriated. Furthermore, you can point out that this is the amendment approved by those selfish and lazy taxpayers who want to see a stop to rising taxes."

"Good idea. Now what do we do to stop the originator and leader of this amendment drive from winning the gubernatorial election this fall?"

"Don't worry, sir. He is only a realist and, as you know, we progressives, who realize the need and benefits of high taxes and big government, outnumber the realists by more 3 to 1. And even if a majority of the voters make the connection between this man and the tax limitation amendment we will, as we have in the past be able to cajole, fool and woo a majority to our candidate in the final election."

"I sure hope you are right in your thinking that Republican Edward F. King is nothing for us to worry about."

"Yes, sir, so do I."

Total cost

To the Editor:

Instead of ending the transaction with the words: "And $15 tax," the seller would be doing the buyer a service by telling the tax at the same time the purchase price is mentioned.

It matters little to many people whether monies go to a store or to the government. It is the total cost that is the buyer's concern.

One city's big business of Government PR

By JACK V. FOX

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Did you know that the dogcatcher of Los Angeles has a "senior public relations representative?"

That the "public affairs director" for the city's Department of Water and Power has an annual salary of $43,000?

That the county sheriff's office has a "Community Services Bureau" requiring 18 uniformed officers plus a number of secretaries?

That each of the county's five elected supervisors has a public relations adviser on the public payroll?

That the city's Municipal Arts Commission has two public relations people whose efforts in the past have included trying — unsuccessfully — to choose an official song for Los Angeles?

That the welfare and unemployment offices have press officers? That there are seven people handling information about smog conditions? That the U.S. Post Office publicity post in Los Angeles pays $26,800 annually?

In the county of Los Angeles alone, there are more than 100 city, county, state and federal agencies with their own separate posts bearing such titles as public relations, public information, public affairs, community relations — all boiling down primarily to the job of presenting the department in the best public light and image.

A survey of 50 of those agencies shows that the average salary of the public relations supervisor is $27,710. The city Department of Airports has an annual budget for community relations of $600,000.

Counting the total personnel, the postage, paper, rents and other overhead, the cost to taxpayers for supporting these offices of public information in Los Angeles county runs an estimated $20 million a year.

The majority of the jobs are protected by civil service. For example, when county assessor Phillip Watson resigned recently his successor, Alexander Pope, brought in a new public relations aide. A job was found for Watson's assistant in another county department.

Some public information officers, such as those serving elected officials like Mayor Tom Bradley and Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., function similarly to Jody Powell, the President Carter's spokesman, getting the boss' message across to the press.

Others deal with questions from public callers, in-house publications, brochures on services available, talks at schools and community meetings.

Many of the agencies can make a good case for their existence. As one public relations assistant put it: "There is too little communication with the public about what their government is doing, not too much. There is too little information before the fact and perhaps too much afterwards."

There are also occasions when public information offices are of great value in getting out fast and accurate information.

That applies in particular to disasters such as the recent floods, forest fires, airplane disasters. Law enforcement agencies need such offices to handle the deluge of news media inquiries in such cases, for example, as the Robert Kennedy assassination, the Sharon Tate murders and the current "Hillside Strangler" investigation.

But there are others whose main function is self aggrandizement, particularly of elective officials.

He says he was always aware of his built-in responsibility not only to make the boss look good but also to act as a buffer against bad publicity and he couldn't square it with his training as an objective journalist.

The city of Los Angeles has by far the most publicity offices.

Somewhat surprisingly, Mayor Tom Bradley has only one press secretary, Tom Sullivan, a deputy and two secretaries. Bradley's political style has always been to keep a low profile and his public information staff is smaller than that of his predecessor, Sam Yorty, although the overall personnel in the mayor's office has increased.

The largest public relations offices are in the three city departments that operate in a semi-autonomous fashion — the Department of Airports, the Port of Los Angeles and the Department of Water and Power.

All three are profit-making operations and they contend that publicity is as essential to their function as it is to General Motors, United States Steel or IBM.

The county has the second largest number of public relations personnel.

The Board of Supervisors in 1971 noted the proliferation of such posts in various departments and took action to centralize those duties in the Public Information Section of the Chief Administrative Office. Its chief gets $33,000, has eight assistants and five clerical personnel.

But each of the elected supervisors has an aide with the authority to deal with the news media although all five of the deputies say that is a subordinate part of their duties.

And there are federal and state PR jobs, too.

Robert Rush is not actually the dogcatcher of Los Angeles, incidentally. His title is general manager of the Department of Animal Regulation. The senior public relations representative is James McNamara and he feels his job is essential.

"We need one (a public relations agent) more than any other department," he says.

"People are animal conscious. We have a fluctuating, moving population. They need to know about our programs like the spay-neuter programs."

Astrologer forsees Zodiac treatment in psychology

By LLOYD G. CARTER

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — Astrologer Mary Orser foresees the day when psychologists will routinely consult the zodiac in treating patients.

Holder of a master's degree in psychology and author of three books on astrology, Ms. Orser was in the San Francisco Bay area lecturing and casting charts and visiting relatives in San Jose.

She is well aware that astrology is generally discredited by the scientific community but notes the scientific world has been wrong before.

"I have the feeling that astrology in the future is going to come back into its own, possibly under different names," she says, describing astrology and psychology are similar arts.

"For instance, there are a lot of psychologists now who are beginning to use it. I've worked with psychologists and I've been able to predict, for instance, when a person who was under a cyclic pattern was in a calm period."

"I've been able to predict to the day when he (the patient) was likely to become more disturbed. I remember when I did that and the psychologist called me up and said, 'Well, you sure hit it.'"

She says astrology, which she compares to personal weather predicting, can aid both patient and psychologist by providing explanations about their personality, its strong and weak points.

The basic premise of astrology is that the sun, the moon and the planets and stars have a subtle but discernible impact on human beings and that personalities can be studied and future events divined through its application.

Historians say astrology is as old as civilization, probably beginning when the first men and women turned their eyes heavenward and wondered what was happening in the cosmos.

While there has been no undisputable evidence documenting the validity of astrology there have been some studies citing influences of full moons on crime and suicides.

Humans, whatever else they are, are also energy fields that are effected to some degree by electromagetic waves, gravitational forces, light and a number of other still unknown forces.

RCA radio engineer John H. Nelson has shown a correspondence between atmospheric magnetic disturbance, solar flareups and conjunction and aspects of major planets.

French psychologist Michel Gauquelin has produced some remarkable studies showing a high statistical correlation between certain planetary positions in the birth charts of people in certain professions.

Ms. Orser's latest book, just released, called "What's My Sign" (Harper and Row), analyzes the signs of about 70 celebrities and is a primer on how to guess the signs of other people.

Her first book, "Instant Astrology", has gone into its third printing in a little over two years and sold over 30,000 copies. She has taught astrology at community colleges near her home in Woodstock, N.Y. for several years.

She says determining sun signs is a skill that can be developed and compares it to spotting people from foreign countries.

"I once met someone who knew an actor who had astrology as a hobby, and he was able, many times, many more times than chance, to look at a person and tell them, even within a few days, when they were born. And it makes a certain sense, because any actor is trained to observe and consciously observe certain characteristics."

She deplores greedy astrologers, the numerous charlatans which she admits riddle the field, and the immensely popular newspaper horoscopes, which she says are so general as to be meaningless.

"There's too much trying to make it over simple; that if you are this sign, you have to act this way. The truth is your sun sign, which is the sign the sun was in when you were born, is just one influence," she says.

"And where your moon is, and your rising sign and all the others, can modify the other (sun sign) so that it means you are less typical.

Affirmative action

In the School Department's case, it is difficult to evaluate if the three newly hired men have more qualifications than those they are replacing. Educationally they seem relatively comparable.

The positions could have been filled by people with lesser qualifications than the three appointees, O'Conor said. Are these men over-qualified?

No, O'Conor said. The term is a misnomer, he said. The three are "highly qualified", he said.

The School Department should not confine itself to administrative positions in seeking out women and minority people, Brathwaite said. It should also hire minority people for its custodian and cafeteria staffs, he added.

Fearful the Baake decision will erode some of the affirmative action programs already in effect, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) recently held a conference in Detroit, which Brathwaite attended. He participated in the government seminars.

The outcome, according to Brathwaite, is a plan to develop an affirmative action information network with coordination among black officials, the NAACP, and other interested outside groups. This network, he said, will keep affirmative action officials in the government abreast of the latest developments and will help to plan strategies.

Those participating in the seminar also plan to make an all out effort to keep cases similar to Baake's in the lower courts, Brathwaite said. At that level, he said, it is possible for the NAACP and other such groups to lobby effectively. Although the Baake decision did go to some lower courts, it was not until it reached the Supreme Court that the reams of information came out, Brathwaite said.

This fall, he added there will be a Massachusetts conference to discuss the Baake decision. At that time, its effects to date will be scrutinized, the affirmative action director said.

meeting of Newton Citizens for Neighborhood Schools (NCNS), with other signers including Stephen Brady and Douglas Moore, leaders in the unsuccessful referendum fight two months ago to keep Emerson and Hamilton schools open.

Ms. Best would like to see the School Committee come up with a long-range plan of the school buildings needed in Newton's future.

"They could close Underwood next year, the way the criteria (for dealing with school closings) are set up," she said.

She would also like the Planning Department in on decisions regarding school buildings, and wants the School Committee to open up to new ideas.

If the open enrollment policy was enhanced . to assure that parents could send all their children to one school for all elementary grades, Ms. Best wonders if one or two schools might be choice of so few parents that they would be the natural ones to close.

"There are a lot of questions that are not answered. Are they going to close Lincoln-Eliot in a few years?

"If so, it seems silly for the money to be spent (on Underwood)" she said, whose district borders on the Lincoln-Rliot district.

Underwood School PTA President Jane Siegel said she is disappointed with "neighborhood fighting neighborhood" over the project.

She claims the $1.05 million is "just the blood, bones, and skin" needed to perform the maintenance in the school that has been put off for the past seven years. The the renovation was proposed 10 years ago.

The original plans called for an addition to be constructed next to the school, but that has been eliminated as enrollment projections dropped.

Underwood has not been a candidate for possible closing by any of the past three school committees, Ms. Siegel said, and the neighborhood population is relatively stable.

"I think there is some kind of pressure being used against some people, with Underwood being used as a hostage."

Congress

defense of this country has become too expensive.

Drinan would like to ban the neutron bomb, and voted against the B-1 bomber which was cancelled by the President.

Walker said, "There's as much waste in the Defense Department as there is in other areas of government. I want to find out where we're getting fleeced."

To find an alternative to our reliance on foreign oil, Walker proposes an energy research program on the scale of the Manhattan Project. This would look for control of nuclear wastes, promote offshore oil exploration, conservation, and solar energy.

Drinan sponsored a two-day solar energy conference in Weston last year and worked successfully for a solar heating project at Fort Devens next year. He supports further use of coal, off-shore drilling for oil, and a stronger conservation program, but opposed one nuclear power plant because it would become prematurely obsolete.

Walker, 41, is a graduate of Williams College and has a master's degree from Harvard. He has taught at Newton North High School for about 20 years, and has won the Meserve Award for being an outstanding teacher.

He was also elected Coach of the Year by the Herald-American in 1976 for his football and baseball coaching, and has spoken at national conferences for sports and the teaching of English.

Drinan, 57, received his law degree from Georgetown University in 1949, and received a doctor of theology degree in Rome in 1954. He served as dean of the Boston College Law School for four years, and has been in Congress since 1970.

Walker's house party had been rescheduled from an earlier night, and about 15 people came, including Rep. Joseph DeNucci. Drinan's house party drew about 45 persons' including School Committeeman Manuel Beckwith.

these figures would increase to $275, $375 and $500 respectively.

Rufo also said the night differential would increase from 15 cents to 25 cents in the first year and then increase to 30 cents in the second year.

Currently, men get 15 days a year off, including and funeral leave is included in the time. Rufo said this offer contains a plan for separate three-day funeral leave.

The outcome of the election will be known Monday night.

Negotiations on police, fire, and City Hall clerical worker contracts are still being carried on.

Two men ride on roof as car floats down Cheese Cake Brook

A young man from Quincy and young man from Watertown escaped injury Sunday morning when they took refuge on the roof of a 1969 Ford sedan as it floated down Cheese Cake Brook in West Newton.

According to police, the car went into a puddle while going north on Albemarle Road and skidded into the brook before passing the Albemarle field house.

The passenger and driver opened the windows in the water-filled car and climbed onto the roof. They rode about 400 yards on top of the car before jumping off.

Police said the car floated north in the brook under several bridges and came to a stop near the entrance to the Charles River.

Driving the car was Paul J. Catalano, 21, of 12 Chauncey St., Watertown, and the passenger was Thomas J. McKinnon, 21, of 93 Shawmut St., Quincy.

Police reports indicate that the tow truck driver had to wait until the water receded before towing the car

Six men face charges of car theft, one also held for drug store break

Six persons were charged with car thefts in three separate incidents this week, police reported.

The sound of a car door closing in the middle of the night woke a Newton Highlands family Tuesday morning in time for the husband to see a car being stolen from the driveway at about 5 a.m.

The man on Columbus Street called police, and the car was spotted by Officer Diane White a few minutes later on Rte. 9.

Officer White stopped the car with two men in it at Howard Johnson's in Brookline, but when she stepped out of the cruiser the car sped away.

The stolen car stalled in Brookline Village. The passenger fled and police arrested the driver.

Inside the stolen car police found 46 containers of drugs that were allegedly stolen from Willey's Drug Store, Lincoln Street, Newton Highlands.

Behind the drug store police found a 1974 Mercury Cougar, which later was discovered to have been stolen from Cambridge on Monday night.

Police charged William J. Griffin, 20, of 99 Ridge Ave., Cambridge, with two counts of larceny of a motor vehicle, larceny in a building, larceny of controlled substances, and breaking and entering in the daytime.

Four men were charged with stealing a car from behind the Chestnut Hill Mall Saturday night.

Detectives Paul Ginnetty and Richard Forbes saw a man driving a car that seemed to have trouble starting. As they were approaching the car, another car drove up with a door open, and the man in the stalled car jumped out, dropped a tool, and ran into the woods. The car with the door open took off on Rte. 9.

Det. Ginnetty caught the man who ran into the woods, and the other car was stopped on Parker Street' Newton Centre.

Charged with larceny of a motor vehicle were W Dwayne M. Walker, 20, of 80 Center St.; Charles H. Gonn, 19, of 40 Washington St.; and Sylvester Witherspoon, 21, 119 Millet St., all of Dorchester; and also Kelvin O. Lee, 20, of 501 Bahama Dr., Norwood.

Walker was also charged with possession of burglarious tools.

Alexander Belin, 19, of 96 Tonowna St., Dorchester, was charged with larceny of a motor vehicle, operating without a license, and running a red light early Saturday morning.

Police said Officer James Keegan stopped a car on Parker Street after it allegedly went through a red light at the corner of Langley and Boylston streets.

The operator did not have a license, police claim, and it was found the vehicle was stolen.

Interfaith group formed to assist victims of February blizzard

More than a dozen religious bodies in the Commonwealth — Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish — are pooling their resources to provide financial and spiritual assistance to persons in the coastal communities who suffered losses in the blizzard and floods of Feb. 6-7.

These denominations expect to distribute more than $250,000 in the coming year, through a program called the Interfaith Committee for Blizzard Relief.

The committee, staffed and incorporated, consists mainly of appointed representatives of the participating denominations. The money to assist disaster victims has come primarily from gifts of local congregations and grants from the national relief agencies of some of the participating denominations.

The formal announcement of this community effort is the culmination of months of organizational work which began immediately after the storm struck.

Working in close partnership from the outset, the Massachusetts Council of Churches and the Catholic Charitable Bureau of the Archdiocese of Boston spearheaded the initial response from the religious community.

The chief function of the Committee will be to provide grants for victims whose incomes, insurance coverage, and federal assistance are not sufficient to cover their losses in housing and personal property.

In addition, the Interfaith Committee plans to help local churches and clergy to respond, through counseling and voluntary assistance, to the special problems of storm victims. Insofar as possible, the Committee also will serve as an advocate, enabling those with losses to secure the maximum amounts of assistance to which they are entitled from government and insurance companies.

"Though the temperatures in Massachusetts are now approaching 100 degrees, the winter storm crisis for hundreds will be continuing for months to come," said Father Frank O'Sullivan, executive director of Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of Boston and president of the Interfaith Committee.

"In fact, it is only now that many victims are discovering the full extent of their losses after insurance and governmental reimbursements. The varieties of voluntary help are impressive, but much more remains to be done," O'Sullivan said.

The Interfaith Committee for Blizzard Relief will cease to exist after one year of operation—the time expected to accomplish its purposes.

The headquarters of the Interfaith Committee will be located at 14 Beacon St., Boston, 02108. The telephone number is 742-2568.

The executive director is John F. O'Brien, a social worker with many years of practice in the Boston area, most recently as . director of professional services at Cambridge Family and Children's Service.

The participating denominations at this time are The American Baptist churches of Massachusetts, Lutheran Church in America, Disciples of Christ, Salvation Army, The Episcopal Church, United Methodist Church, United Presbyterian Church, United Church of Christ, Unitarian Universalist Association, Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Boston, and Associated Synagogues of Massachusetts.

Beth Israel Hospital will mark golden afniversary

A benefit concert and a dinner dance will be held October 29 by Beth Israel Hospital to celebrate the double anniversary of its 50 years as a Harvard teaching hospital and 50 years on Brookline Avenue.

Jane Olivor, popular singer, will star in the concert, which will conclude with a champagne reception at Symphony Hall. Her appearance was arranged by the Beth Israel Hospital Women's Auxiliary. Mrs. Hilda Berner of Chestnut Hill heads the committee planning the concert.

The dinner dance will be held in the evening at the Park Plaza Hotel ballroom, featuring music by the Bob Kovner orchestra and a historical audio-visual production. Arnold Z. Rosoff of Newton is chairman of the dinner dance committee.

Tickets to the "First Fifty" benefit are $15 per person for the concert; $25 per person for the concert and champagne reception; $50 per person for preferred seating at the concert and the champagne reception; and $100 per person for preferred Seating at the concert, champagne reception, the dinner dance, and free parking at the Park Plaza Hotel with shuttle transportation to and from Symphony Hall.

The benefit is jointly sponsored by the Auxiliary, the Men's Associates and the Hospital. For further information call the Beth Israel Women's Auxiliary office at 566-0925.

A&P has stamps

Some 447 A & P. Supermarkets in them midwest and east today begin offering trading stamps as another step in the company's continuing campaign to attract customers by "giving a little something extra'" according to Jonathan L. Scott, A & P chairman.

He said recent surveys demonstrate that consumers are once again receptive to trading stamps.

"Today's shopper is extremely price conscious and wants to get as much for her money as possible. Our popular 'Economy corner' and 'Action Prices' programs and the new trading-stamp-offering help meet this consumer challenge," Scott said.

The ' Economy Corner' program features unbranded food and general merchandise products priced as much as 30 percent below national brands. The 'Action Prices' program passes along to consumers savings the company has made on special purchases of various products.

Scott said sales increases generated by the consumer campaign "will more than offset the cost of giving customers that little something extra. A & P across the board prices will remain fully competitive and our traditional food quality standards will be maintained," he said

In the midwest, S & H Green Stamps are being offered in the company's 119 Chicago Division stores and the 46 stores of the Milwaukee Division.

In the east, Gold Bond Stamps are available in the 282 stores on the company's Boston, Springfield, Albany, Scranton, Altoona and Pittsburph Divisions.

Rabbi Elkin named headmaster at Solomon Schechter School

Rabbi Joshua C. Elkin has been named headmaster of the Solomon Schechter Day School effective Aug. 1, leaving his current position as educational director of Temple Emunah in Lexington.

Rabbi Elkin brings to Solomon Schechter in Oak Hill Park an extensive background in all facets of education both as an educator and an administrator.

Rabbi Elkin is a Summa Cum Laude graduate of Classical High School, Providence, and also of the Community Hebrew High School of the Bureau of Education in Providence.

He received his B.A. and M.A. degrees from Columbia University in New York where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa.

Rabbi Elkin is also a graduate of the Jewish Theological Seminary where he spent his junior year abroad at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. He received his M.A. degree at the School of Judaica and is a graduate of the Rabbinical School at the Jewish Theological Seminary. Rabbi Elkin is currently working on his doctorate in education.

Rabbi Elkin has been an active participant for the Program of Jewish Studies as a community effort to improve Jewish school education. He has also been a contributor of Hebrew Curriculum Development for the Bureau of Jewish Education; and is conference chairman of the New England Region Jewish Educators Assembly.

Airman Cynthia J. Halliday, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Halliday Jr. of Auburndale, has been selected for technical training at Chanute AFB, Ill., in the Air Force avionics systems field. ## It's been a very good year for Museum of Fine Arts, Boston

The Museum of Fine Arts in Boston has concluded one of the most successful years in its history, according to Howard W. Johnson, president. Making his announcement shortly after the closing of the museum's record-breaking exhibition, 'Pompeii AD79', Mr. Johnson noted that the 1977-1978 fiscal year had presented one of the most successful exhibition programs and achieved one of the highest attendance fiqures in museum records.

Jan Fontein, the director of the museun, said that more than 890,000 visitors came to the MFA in 12 months, a 75 per cent increase in attendance over the previous fiscal year. He attributed the increase to public enthusiasm for the museum's special exhibitions, among them "Pompeii AD79". This show of art and artifacts of the ancient Roman city was seen by 430,000 people during its three month stay at the MFA, and was the single best attended exhibit in museum history, Fontein noted.

Museum attendance had remained consistently ahead of last year even before the Pompeii show opened, Fontein said. Attendance compared favorably with the museum's centennial year 1970-1971 when more than 900,000 people came to see special exhibits such as those of Cezanne and Wyeth.

Last year's successful shows included 'Peter Rabbit and Other Tales', 'Thracian Treasures from Bulgaria' which attracted more than 100,000 visitors in one month, and 'Monet Unveiled', which showed a "miraculous accomplishment" in painting conservation.

"The public has responded with an enthusiasm that speaks very well for the future of this and other art museums," Fontein said. "Twice during the past year the museum has had to extend the dates of exhibitions in order to meet the public's demand."

Fontein noted that the increase in visitors to the museum is accompanied by a rise in membership.

Temple Reyim shows posters of Nazi era

Documentary posters of the period when the Nazis exterminated six million European Jews are on display until August 15 at Temple Reyim, 1860 Washington St. The exhibit, prepared by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, is open to the public.

The posters provide a pictorial documentation, with text, of Jewish life prior to the Holocaust, through the rise of Nazi Germany, the persecution, internment and extermination of Jews in the concentration camps, the Resistance Movement, to the liberation of the death camps and the Nuremberg Trials.

The exhibit is on display during the first half of the Hebrew month of Ab, starting on August 5. On August 12, coinciding with the 9th of Ab, Jews mourn the many tragedies that they have suffered.

Travel Talk
By Josephine Aria

Mark Twain was a generous traveler. Filled with anecdotes, descriptions of people, scenery, customs, and personal reflections, his travel essays are as rich in humor and as inimitable in style as everything else he undertook to write about. In 1873, as on several occasions, he reminisced about Hawaii's Sandwich Islands. Twain said of the islands: "When you are in that blessed retreat, you are safe from the turmoil of life; you drowse your days away in a long deep dream of peace; the past is a forgotten thing, the present is heaven, the future you leave to take care of itself."

Courage for caring

By ELEANOR SIEGEL
In Focus Editor

It's Dr. Kathleen Lynch's job to convince people they have a future.

In the austere halls, or in a hospital ward or cafeteria, the 34-year-old willowy Chief of Psychology Services at the West Roxbury Veteran's Administration Hospital quietly chats with patients. Many are paraplegics or quadraplegics.

To be effective, Dr. Lynch believes she must have direct contact with patients "who are dealing with a new body image." They won't seek her out because in the beginning, "they don't want to be near a shrink."

Yet, if the 'shrink' is accessible, often they will reach out. Thus, Dr. Lynch frequently visits the wards so her presence and caring are known.

As helpful as the contact is for the patient, it is also "necessary for the staff to have support." On one such recent visit, a nurse visibly brightened up at seeing Dr. Lynch and was able to communicate some fears about a patient. To help the staff, there are weekly meetings with the nurses "and they make the agenda."

For the patient who first enters to 100 bed spinal cord injury unity, the first concern is survival. Once it is clear they are going to live, if they will be paralyzed, they must be helped to accept what has happened.

The initial reaction is "disbelief and denial." Dr. Lynch said "they think they will be the one who walks out of here." That thinking helps them "get over the worst." However, if they deny their physical condition too long, "they are not cooperative about participating in rehabilitation."

After World War II, a paraplegic's life expectancy was two years, observed Dr. Lynch. Today, the expectancy of a normal life span has created special problems. For the person facing a lifetime of disability, there are practical financial considerations.

They may be out of work for nearly a year. Also, "it costs money for recreation, and they need a specially built car, bathroom, kitchen and cabinets." The effects of the injury are far reaching. "It affects the family like waves of fallout."

There is great anger and frustration because "they can't get dressed, they must learn to open a toothpaste a different way, they can't get a pack of cigarettes out of the package."

In addition, "many have stereotyped notions about cripples and have commented to Dr. Lynch "I know what people are thinking—I used to think the same thing."

Dr. Kathleen Lynch of Dedham — Photo by TED FITZGERALD

Commenting on the movie "Coming Home," Dr. Lynch said it was excellent but the depiction of a paraplegic's body as perfect is inaccurate. There is a deterioration of the body "because when you do not use muscles, the lower limbs waste and become thin."

"There is a period of mourning for the life you could have had, the people you might have married. Your position in the dating market dropped. The sexual games have different rules. You make love differently. This all requires a partner to be adaptive and many times wives and girlfriends cannot make adaptions."

Just when it seems hopeless, it is Dr. Lynch's job and the staff's job, to help the patient.

"They have to reconstruct a whole new life with new motivations and new values. You must learn to value thinking and quiet. They must have expectation and goals. To accept and create a new life is asked of each and everyone and it is a test of creativity that they can create a life despite compromise and catastrophe."

How does this graduate of the University of Missouri keep herself from becoming emotionally overburdened? She looks for things epxeriences to "renew" herself such as attending professional conferences, conducting research and studying. She has an appointment at Harvard School of Medicine as an instructor in the psychology department.

When she graduated from college, she began to study about brain functions and when she finished her Ph.D., she began working for the U.S. Army as a supervisory psychologist. She visited commands setting up drug and alcohol programs working in much the same fashion as an industrial organization psychologist.

If ever she has doubts, "when you go on grand rounds, the reasons why you went into this profession become clear—these people are hurting."

Once outside the hospital, she works hard at "creating an ordinary life." Recently she bought a home in Dedham and has been busy painting, planting and even moving a fence. But most of that is in the category of a hobby for she has little spare time. Her usual work day ends at 9 or 10 p.m.

What sustains her is "the impact when you see how much you have helped. There are a great many intrinsic rewards."

"I think it's so poignant," she said softly, "because it can happen to anyone."

There is a sense of satisfaction in eating fish—but there is a greater sense of satisfaction when that fish is a shark. Since Monday, the Canton and Norwood Star Markets have been featuring a special on SHARK.

According to Pat Siccone, seafood buyer, "if you haven't tried it, you're in for a pleasant surprise."

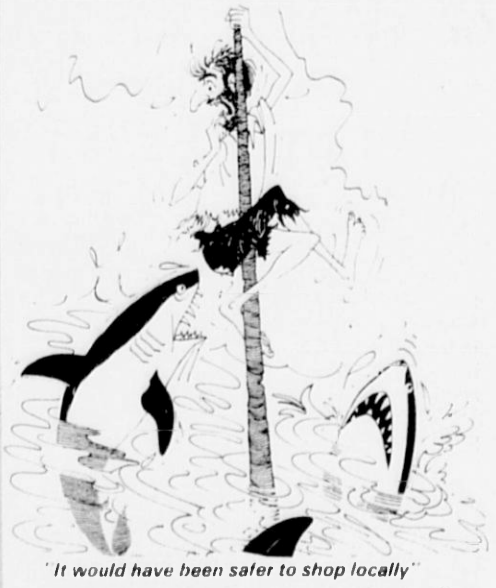

Shark looks and tastes like swordfish. It can be an interesting alternative for a family meal. Or a conversation piece at a barbeque.

If you are wondering where to find recipes for Shark, we are printing two which come from the Universal Studios "JAWS II" cookbook.

Sharks are not more available because they are not easy to catch. It is often offered as a substitute for swordfish at restaurants. Below are two recipes:

JAWS UNIVERSAL

Salt and pepper the steaks. Add two dashes of paprika on each side. Grease grill or broiler pan with a solid shortening like butter or margarine. If possible, charcoal broil steaks. Melt one-quarter pound of butter in saucepan and squeeze in ½ lemon. With a pastry brush, flow lemon butter on top side. After a few minutes, turn and baste the lightly cooked side. Continue basting throughout

"It would have been safer to shop locally"

broiling. The steaks are done when they are opaque all the way through. Just before serving, dot with more butter. Garnish with finely chopped parsley and serve with lemon wedges on the side. For leftovers, makes a great salad the next day.

SHARK AMITY
(Fried shark bits—serves six)

1 tsp. salt
1 cup flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. margarine
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
1 egg beaten with ¾ cup milk
2 lbs. shark steaks with skin and bone removed fat for deep frying

Sift together the flour, baking powder, margarine, salt and pepper. Combine with egg milk mixture to form a batter. Cut steaks into 1½ inch cubes. Season with salt. Dip into batter and fry in deep fat.

KITCHEN CORNER

The big home canning season may be a few months in the future, but this is the time to make sure you have all your utensils and equipment ready to go to avoid last-minute frustration.

Here's a handy checklist from the home economists at the Ball Corporation that should cover your home canning needs.

1. Spoons for stirring, spooning, packing and lifting. Use wooden spoons for stirring and packing; slotted spoons for lifting; measuring spoons are a must.

2. Knives should include a good paring knife, a sharp chopping knife and a vegetable peeler.

3. Food Brushes with stiff bristles are needed for carefully washing produce.

4. Saucepans are needed for jams and jellies, heating lids, etc.

5. Measuring Cups, both dry (metal) and liquid (glass) should be on hand.

6. Jelly Bags and Jelmeter for jelly-making. The bags of thin fabric help strain juice from softened fruit and pulp, while the jelmeter (a graduated glass tube with an opening at each end) measures the jellying power of the juice.

7. Colander or Strainer holds and drains just-washed produce.

8. Scales, with capacity up to 25 pounds (11 kg), are needed for following recipes where ingredients are given by weight.

9. Timer for measuring processing times accurately by the minute.

10. Pressure Canners the right size for your family, with either dial gauges or weighted, to process low acid foods like most vegetables.

11. Boiling Water Bath Canners to process acid foods, like most fruits. Height is important because the jars, when seated on the canner's rack, must be covered by 1-2 inches of water with an extra 1-2 inches of "boiling" space above that.

12. Crocks, clean and free of cracks and chips are needed for pickling foods.

13. Jar Lifter with soft plastic coating and wooden handles keep both hands and jars safe when removing jars from canners.

14. Jar Funnel and Bubble Freer are both handy items. The canning funnel keeps food off sealing surface of jar and accurately measures head space. The bubble freer, a long, smooth plastic implement (or a similar non-metallic utensil) is needed to run down the sides of filled jars to remove air bubbles without damaging the jar as metal objects can do.

15. Lids and Jars are an essential in canning. Standard home canning jars should be bought according to the size appropriate to family needs. Buy lids from a reliable manufacturer, be sure to keep the packaging, and follow instructions carefully.

Here are a few tips:

Can only young, fresh, sound foods that have been thoroughly cleaned.

Can in small amounts to ensure highest quality results.

Pay careful attention to head space recommendations. (This is the amount of space left between the food filling the jar and the top of the jar.)

Examine the tops and edges of the jars you'll be using. Both must be smooth and even for a proper lid seal and to prevent breakage during processing caused by a flaw in a jar.

To prevent lid seal failure, read and follow instructions on the package of caps and lids. Not all caps are alike and are used exactly the same way.

Bacteria, mold and yeast are destroyed at different temperatures in different types of foods. Be sure to use the correct canning method for the food being processed. Low acid foods (most vegetables, meats, fish and poultry require the high heat of a steam-pressure canner. High acid foods (tomatoes, most fruits, pickles) can be processed in a water-bath canner. The open-kettle method is to be used only for jellies.

Cool quickly as recommended in instructions.

Store in dark, dry, cool place so that food will retain proper flavor and color.

Be sure to have a reliable home canning book. If unsure about a good one, contact the home extension agent in your county.

Here are some recipes:

Strawberry Lime Jam

2 quarts strawberries
¼ cup lime juice
1 package powdered pectin
7 cups sugar

1. Crush fruit; measure 4½ cups into large saucepan. Mix lime juice with strawberries.

2. Add powdered pectin to the mixture.

3. Place fruit over high heat and stir until mixture comes to a hard boil. Immediately add sugar.

4. Bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard for 1 minute, stirring constantly.

5. Remove from heat and skim off foam.

6. Ladle into hot jars. Leave ¼ inch head space. Adjust caps.

7. Process 10 minutes in boiling water bath.

8. Yield: about nine 8-ounce jars.

Pickled Carrots

2-3 bunches small carrots (about 3-4 inches)
1 cup sugar
2 teaspoons pickling spices
2 teaspoons dried rosemary
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups vinegar
1½ cups water

1. Cook carrots until just tender. Drain and remove skins. Leave small carrots whole; cut larger ones into pieces.

2. Combine sugar, vinegar, water and salt in a large saucepan. Tie spices in a cheesecloth bag and add to vinegar mixture. Boil 5 minutes.

3. Pack carrots into hot Ball jars, leaving ¼-inch head space.

4. Remove spice bag. Heat syrup to boiling. Pour hot syrup over carrots, leaving ¼ inch head space. Adjust cpas.

5. Process pints and quarts 30 minutes in boiling water bath.

6. Yield about 3 pints.

Everybody's favorite strawberry jam takes on a new taste with addition of lime juice.

Elderly survey finds need for psychological services

In a study of psychological distress among the community elderly reported in the current issue of the quarterly International Journal on Aging and Human Development, it was found that 17 percent of the sample population suffered from psychological maladies including severe depression, suicidal ideation, inability to function, and mental health problems related to alcoholism.

Ruby Abrahams, co-author of the resaarch paper and senior planner with the Health Planning Council of Greater Boston, said that although recognizing the health problems, the elderly were largely unaware of available mental health resources, or unwilling to use them.

"The health resource that the elderly go to is the private physician. But, it was found that very rarely did the physician refer the patient to mental health services in the community when it was needed, and often was unaware of the available mental health services," said Abrahams.

"Essentially, the elderly are getting very little help."

The community surveyed was a predominantly white, lower— middle class town, residentially stable, with 43 percent of the elderly owning their own homes. The elderly made up 12 percent of the town's population (1970 census).

The research, which was supported by a grant of the National Institute for Mental Health and through a fellowship from the Radcliffe Institute Programs in Health Care, is one of merely a handful of similar neighborhood studies conducted since 1940.

Ms. Abrahams, M.A., M.S.W., has eight years experience as a community health researcher at Tufts, Harvard, and Radcliffe where the research was completed.

"A well-established mental health center existed in the community, but it was not well accepted by the elderly," said Abrahams. "In the random sample of 450 elderly people interviewed in their homes, not one had been to the mental health center, and very few had heard of it."

Community support systems and mental health education programs were suggested as possible means to alleviating the psychological problems of the elderly.

Dr. Rocklin appointed chief of allergy services at hospital

Ross Elliot Rocklin, M.D., of Newton Highlands, has been appointed chief of the allergy service in the New England Medical Center Hospital (NEMCH) Department of Medicine.

Rocklin, who will join the faculty of the Tufts University School of Medicine, comes to NEMCH from Harvard Medical School where he had been an associate professor of medicine, and Robert B. Brigham Hospital, where he was an assistant physician.

As chief of the allergy service, Rocklin will head the first such service at the 452-bed teaching hospital, a unit of the Tufts— New England Medical Center.

His premedical studies were at Boston University and he earned his M.D. degree from Howard University. Following medical internship and residency at Boston City Hospital Rocklin joined the U.S. Army Medical Corps as a major.

He held duty as a staff physician in the Department of Allergy, Walter Reed General Hospital, in Washington, D.C., until 1973.

Rocklin is the author of numerous articles in his specialty, and has been on the editorial boards of four publications.

Rocklin is a member of the American Rheumatism Association, American Federation for Clinical Research, American Academy of Allergy, and other associations.

Conservatory announces fall programs

New England Conservatory of Music has announced that registration is currently being held for fall programs offered by the school's extension division.

In the Preparatory School students are offered private lessons in all symphonic instruments and voice, and in such specialized areas as classical guitar, harpsichord, improvisational piano and church organ. In addition to private instruction, classes in nusic theory, history, and analysis are available. Students are encouraged to participate in special workshops and performing ensembles which range from baroque ensemble to percussion and classical guitar ensembles. Classes are held both at the conservatory and at a convenient suburban location. the Park School in Brookline.

The Prep School's programs are geared to meet the needs of students at all stages of musical development. For people as young as 3 there is a pre-instrumental course which teaches rhythm, movement, and singing, as well as Suzuki Violin for beginners.

For those with more advanced musical skills, there are several performing organizations, including the Youth Chamber Orchestra, conducted by Benjamin Zander; the Massachusetts Youth Wind Ensemble and Junior Wind Ensemble, and two choirs. Auditions for all prep—school affiliated ensembles will be held Sept. 9 at the conservatory.

While continuing to offer outstanding music education for children and young adults, NEC has expanded its committment to adult education this year, offering courses and private lessons during convenient evening and Saturday hours. This year's program includes studies in music theory, history, and analysis, ear-training and sight-singing, piano pedagogy (teaching) and technology (building and maintenance) to name a few. Like the Preparatory School, the adult education program offers workshops and performing ensembles such as the opera workshop, musical theater workshop, and the NEC "Alumni Chorus."

Fall semester for both the Preparatory School and the adult education program begins Sept. 11. For information about specific course offerings or registration and auditions, call the New England Conservatory extension division at 262-1120, ext. 366.

Tour of four farms is highlight of State Agriculture Week

Massachusetts is commonly thought of as an urban state. But agriculture is an important industry in the state that generates $200 million in business a year.

To help make people aware of that fact, Governor Michael Dukakis has declared the week of Aug. 21 Massachusetts Agriculture Week.

A highlight of that week will be a farm tour in Bristol county on Aug. 24. The tour will stop at four farming operations in . southeastern Massachusetts: a cranberry bog, dairy farm, vegetable farm, and nursery.

An evening program at Bristol County Agricultural School following the tour will feature a chicken barbecue and speakers discussing agricultural concerns in Massachusetts.

Open to the general public, the farm tour is designed to call the public's attention to the conditions of Massachusetts agriculture. The tour will give legislators, public officials, leaders of industry and others a first-hand look at what is involved in today's farming operations. Although children are welcome, the tour is not intended to be a "family field trip" type outing.

The tour day will begin with registration at 11 a.m. at the Bristol County Agricultural School in Segreganset. Buses will leave the school grounds for tours of the farms beginning at 12:30 p.m. Reservations for the bus tour and chicken dinner should be made early since there is a limited amount of space. There will be a small charge.

The program is conducted by the Massachusetts Cooperative Extension Service, in conjunction with the Massachusetts Department of Food and Agriculture, other state agencies, and private firms.

The tour will take people to the John Egger Cranberry bog in Lakeville where approximately 100,000 pounds of cranberries are harvested on his 7.2 acres of bog every year. That is almost double the average harvest for most other bogs in the state.

At the Rainbow's End Farm in Rehobeth, tour participants will see a dairy operation that has 60 head of purebred Holsteins who produce an average of 15,257 pounds of milk per cow per year, The 90-acre farm is owned by Warren Chace, who was Massachusetts Dairyman of the Year in 1971.

Next on the tour is the Four Town Farm in Seekonk. It is a vegetable farm owned and operated by Frank Clegg, Jr. and his three sons. On 150 acres, 75 of which Clegg owns and 75 of which he rents, they produce at least 35 different kinds of vegetables including butternut squash, cabbage, carrots, rhubarbs, strawberries and tomatoes.

Finally the tour will stop at the Somerset Nursery in Somerset which is a 45-year-old business begun by James Marsden after he graduated from Bristol County Agricultural School. The nursery's services include retailing and wholesaling nursery stock, a garden center, a florist shop, and landscape contracting.

For further information on the tour or registration, contact Susan Mitchell, Cooperative Extension Service, 212D Stockbridge Hall, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, 01375, (413) 545-2715, or your local county Extension Service office.

Top jackpot at Longwood

More than the $200,000 prize money, New England's highest tennis jackpot, is involved in the 51st U.S. Professional Tennis Championships at the Longwood Cricket Club, in Chestnut Hill, August 21 to 28.

Jaime Fillol, the popular Chilean, put it all in perspective the other day while discussing his role as newly-elected president of the Association of Tennis Professionals (ATP).

"The players prefer to play in major tourneys like this historic one at Longwood," Fillol points out, "because it is a high-point tournament. Somebody like myself who's ranked 23rd can move way up the ladder with a good showing here.

All you have to do is look at Tom Okker who moved up 50 places by gaining the semifinals at Wimbledon."

And why are rankings so important?

First and foremost is that you'd like to be seeded to avoid qualifying. "There are so many good youngsters coming along that veterans can very easily be upset if they let up. So the fewer matches you have to play the better your chances for advancing further and picking up higher purses."

The competition for the big names in tennis gets more intense year after year with more and more tournaments so Longwood officials are quite pleased to have attracted 21 of the top 50 players in the world, including four of the top 10 and eight of the top 20. They will be playing before close to 100,000 fans day and evening for 15 sessions, August 21 to 28.

Parent day

A Parent's Day Round Robin Tournament was held July 22 at the Pine Manor Tennis Camp in Chestnut Hill. Established in 1968, the camp has a program broadly designed to fit the needs of many youngsters between the ages of eight and 16.

The July 22 winner of the Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman Award was Geoffrey Crawshaw of Wellesley. Peter Litman of Needham was the winner in Boys I; Erik Dolhman of Weston was the runner-up. The Boys II winner was Alan Mann of Newton Centre; David Saper of Chestnut Hill was the runner-up.

In Girls I, Linda Flaherty of Wellesley was the winner; Tamah Soloman of Newton was the runner-up. Joanne Flaherty of Wellesley was the winner in Girls II; Alissa Paige of Weston was runner-up.

Parent-Child Round Robin winners in Group I were Jed Smith and his mother Judith of Brookline; Group I runners-up were camper Erik Dohlman and his mother Carin of Weston. Group II winners in the Parent-Child Round Robin were Pam Smolar and her brother Brad of Newton; runners-up were camper Wendy Helm and her mother Christine of Weston.

Packers host touch football tourney,

By PAUL PASQUAROSA

If you exit the Mass Pike at Newton Corner, head toward Watertown and look close on the left hand side as you go, you will see the home of the Mass. State Touch Football champs, George's Packers.

From the outside, their home doesn't look like much, tape holds together the front window atop a very unsettled foundation. But once inside and in the hospitable presence of owners Bill and Fran Hanright, one senses a much stronger interior foundation and a feeling of togetherness. Adorning the walls are plaques, pictures, awards and trophies, a 3' by 5' banner hangs on the north wall signifying George's 1976 undefeated season.

Yes, to the Packers, Newton's undisputed tag football dynasty, this is home.

A special treat for any football enthusiast is to sit in earshot of Newton Alderman and team historian, "D" back Terry Morris. I had such a treat. He speaks with a voice full of pride and a gleam in his eye. I nestle into the booth next to his as he expounds the virtues of the Packers to the small group of men who've gathered.

"How did it all begin?" I ask, making my presence rudely known.

"Who started the team and how has it matured to such a level?"

"1969 was our first year, he responds.

"Of the 25 men on the roster now, only a handful were on the original squad."

"Let's see, the Pasquarosas Nick and Paul they were there. Detective Dan Donovan you've probably seen him around. Dick Quigley our offensive lineman who retires every year but is always there when preseason drills begin was on the squad then. Myself, and player coach Kevin Marden. I guess Kevin was the instigator not only for the formation of the Packers but he was the chief catalyst in the organization of a touch football league in Newton."

"Over the nine years we've finished first during the regular season every year. We've compiled an incredible 80-7-1 record during that period of time. Of course when you get so used to winning, losing can be a very traumatic experience. Like in '71, '73 and '74 we lost in the playoffs and those were long winters following the season, believe me. But through it all we've established ourselves as the cream of the crop. Everyone knows it, everyone gets excited to play us."

"What's the key, the main ingredient for your success?" I query. "Is there anything tangible you could attribute it to?"

"Well, see that picture up there on the wall, look at that collection of guys, it tells quite a story. Aside from the originals who are definitely a mature stabilizing influence we've got guys like Colin Clapton, Chuck Pendergast, Jim Uisakis, Joe Marzetti, Brian O'Halloren, Ed Keefe, Peter Manson, Bobby Hare, these guys come up where winning was a tradition not an aspiration. Offensive mop Jim Caruso, Dave Reed, Jodi Iorio, that's one devastating offensive line. Our receivers, they've got to be the biggest and quickest in the league. With the exception of little guy Steve Geary, but that kid has hands like glue, he was all Catholic in high school. But Newton South stand out Pat Pattison, Chris Hoft, he's down in Houston now, got a tryout with the Oilers. And defensively the guys who've kept us in more games by their sheer determination than anything else. Ed Cameron, Jack Pattison, Jimmy Gamble, Gerry Clark, Don Fabrizio and Rappy Pasquarosa."

I can't help but detect a tone of self-respect in Terry's voice as he continues to stare at last year's edition of the Packers.

"Beyond the raw talent and natural ability we have, it's quite a thrill to know that everybody is pulling for everybody on this team and we are more than a team, we're a family. I guess that's the tangible, we love each other."

The Packers have taken their enthusiasm for competitive excellence and made it easily accessible to those who wish to partake.

"We are men who want to help our community. Although football has brought us together and keeps us together, the thought that we are a positive influence and representative of our city makes it that much more worthwhile. In Newton our efforts have not gone unheralded, the Mayor and Board of Aldermen have proclaimed a week in our honor, our supporters have really rallied behind us, they've just been great."

Last Thanksgiving local merchants, families and friends purchased newspaper advertisements to send them to the National Championships in St. Louis. Disappointment and frustration followed; after successfully coming from behind to beat the Champions of Detroit 7-6, we fell victim to a heartbreaking last minute loss at the hands of Indiana's best.

This September 8 to 10 we'll be hosting our own double elimination tournament to benefit the Heart Association. The National Touch Football League sanctioned event will feature the No. 2 team in the U.S., from Toledo, Ohio, the Hungry I.

Rounding out the 8 team round robin will be three out of state New England entries as well as the Springfield Cowboys, Capello Brothers, and the Waltham City Champs, the Train.

Terry Morris slides from his booth, slips into his Packer jacket and heads for his two mile job home. I am impressed by his conviction and enthusiasm. As I'm ready to leave, I take one last look at the future home of the nations No. 1 touch football team. Is it really possible?"

NAA Pop Warner starts Monday

The Newton Athletic Association begins its 10th Pop Warner football season with opening practices for its A and B teams at Newton Highlands Field on Monday at 6 i.m.

All boys ages 11-13 from the Newton South area are invited.

Boys with completed registrations should report first to the NAA Equipment Office at 33R Lincoln St. to receive their football uniforms starting at 4:30 p.m. Uniforms will be issued every day at 4:30 only to those players who have turned in their registrations.

The Lions A team will kick off their season Labor Day weekend vs Framingham in a non-league opener at Newton Highlands. The coaches urge all players to report for practice as soon as possible.

For registration forms and more information about NAA Football contact Nick Pasquarosa 1058 Beacon St., Newton Centre 02159 (244-0637).

Jets trim roster

WEST HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (UPI) — The New York Jets trimmed their roster to 70 players Tuesday by dropping three veterans — cornerback Billy Hardee, defensive end Al Burton and linebacker Al Palewicz.

The Jets also announced the hiring of Joe Haering as strength and special projects coach. Haering was an assistant at Kent State.

Tennis benefits kids

The Stop & Shop Companies Inc. will join with the Longwood Cricket Club and WBZ-TV Channel 4 to aid the Boston Sportsmen's Club, Avram J. Goldberg, president, announced.

The Sportsmen's Tennis Club will benefit from the opening day of the 51st annual U.S. Professional Tennis Championships at Longwood Cricket Club, Aug. 21 through 28.

This marks the fifth year that the sportsmen's Tennis Club, a non-profit community service organization' which provides free tennis instruction for inner-city children, has been a benefitciary of the first day's afternoon and evening sessions' ticket revenues.

Flyers with a mail-in "buy one get one free" coupon are available at Stop & Shop supermarkets, Bradlees department stores, Medi Mart druq stores and Perkins Tobacco Shops.

The championships will bring 64 of the nation's outstanding pros, including Eddie Dibbs, Manuel Orantes, Raul Ramirez, Arthur Ashe, John McEnroe and Dick Stockton, battling for top prize in the $200,000 tournament sponsored by the New England Merchants National Bank.

Additional ticket information can be obtained by writing: Pro Tennis, Longwood Cricket Club, 564 Hammond St., Chestnut Hill, 02167; or calling 731-4500. All seats are reserved with prices ranging from $5 to $8.

Hall of Famer MacPhail

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (UPI) — Baseball and Larry MacPhail have buried the hatchet.

American League President Lee MacPhail, one of the Great Innovator's two sons, made it official Monday during Hall of Fame induction ceremonies at which modern slugger Eddie Mathews, old-time pitcher Addie Joss and radio-TV broadcasters Mel Allen and Red Barber also were honored.

It is 31 years since MacPhail, one of the game's most controversial executives, retired and three since he died at the age of 85. But the wounds of his battles with the baseball traditionalists of his time weren't officially forgotten until Lee MacPhail accepted the plaque on behalf of his father.

"My father often said he wouldn't accept his plaque if he were elected but I'm sure he'd be up here putting in his two cents' worth," said the AL president. "Neither I nor members of my family thought he was unfairly kept out. Even the most deserving must wait their turn."

MacPhail entered baseball with the Cincinnati Reds in 1933 and subsequently was president of the Reds, Brooklyn Dodgers and New York Yankees during a controversial career, which ended with his resignation as Yankee president in 1947.

In addition to pioneering night games in the major leagues over the objections of most other baseball executives, MacPhail helped in the players pension fund, was the first to authorize air travel as a regular means of transportation for his team and popularized season and combination ticket plans.

Along the way MacPhail made many enemies in the baseball establishment and it wasn't until this year that the Hall of Fame's Old Timers Committee finally relented and voted him into the shrine.

"I only wish it could have happened 10 years ago," said Mrs. James Bauer, the former Mrs. Larry MacPhail. "He did more for baseball than almost anyone else."

Nancy Lopez wins European title

Another win for Nancy

SUNNINGDALE, England (UPI) — Nancy Lopez may be a champion golfer but her father still gets the last word.

After winning the $100,000 European LPGA Championship at Sunningdale Sunday for her eighth victory this season, Lopez talked with reporters about how she played one hole.

"Really, I should should have taken an iron off the tee then ...," began the 21-year-old golf sensation, who broke Judy Rankin's 1976 season earnings record with the $15,000 first prize that brought her total to $153,097 in her first full year as a pro.

"No, you don't," interrupted her father Domingo, who was her only teacher when his car repair shop wouldn't pay for professional advice.

"You take the driver from the tee, drive the green, then three-putt for a safety par."

Nancy smiled the smile that won her the nickname "laughing eyes" from the British gallery, ruffled her father's hair then shook her head in silent admiration.

And that was how it was all week — the father cheering from the crowd and the doeeyed daughter supplying a swing that never lost its rhythm.

"You feel more like a champion when you can go out there and stay on top with all the other players pressuring behind you," said the Roswell, N.M., native, whose final-round 73 gave her a 7-under-par 289 total, three strokes ahead of Mary Dwyer, JoAnne Carner and South African Sally Little and four strokes clear of Barbara Barrow, Jerilyn Britz, Pat Bradley and U.S. Open champion Hollis Stacy.

"I just didn't have any chance to blow up at all, even though I felt a lot of pressure. I knew I couldn't make bogey. "JoAnne (Carner) started a charge and Sally (Little) was playing very well. But I was really hitting the ball long over those last few holes and gettying pumped up," said Lopez, who mastered frequent rainstorms which flooded several greens on the 6,174-yard Old Course and held up play for 45 minutes.

Next week, she meets the original "SuperMex" Lee Trevino in an exhibition match at Turnberry, Scotland, before flying home for the Long Island tournament and her next target — Mickey Wright's record 13 tournament wins in a season.

"I'm really excited now. I guess I'll think about that 13th when I hit 12," said Lopez, who also is well within reach of topping the $200,000 earnings barrier.

Despirito race

SALEM, N.H. (UPI) — Tony DeSpirito, former national riding champion who died at age 39 in East Providence, R.I., three years ago, will be memorialized Saturday when a $20,000 handicap race is run in his name at Rockingham Park.

DeSpirito, a native of Lawrence, Mass., rode a record 390 winners in 1952 at age 16. He worked as an official at Narragansett Park and Lincoln Downs in Rhode Island in the last years of his life.

Barbados-warm, hospitable queen of the West Indies

It's a wind-blown autumn afternoon, or a snowy winter day, and like everyone you meet and speak to, you're eager to escape to some unnamed paradise in the West Indies.

Day after day, you find yourself dreaming of luscious palm-clad strips of white sand, clear aqua water washing lazily against the shore. Then, suddenly, fantasy becomes reality, and it's time to begin planning your getaway. But which island?

From the vantage point of a stateside travel office, they may all appear alike. Not so! Each island has its own individual flavor, its own particular features and attractions.

And your mission, as a canny vacationer, is to choose the one that will offer you the most in all ways, one that is large enough to have all the facilities you are looking for, but not so large and busy that you will become just another person in an immense crowd of tourists. Your own personal Eden, the island of your dreams, may well be Barbados!

Barbados, lapped by the trade winds, and blessed with a marvellous climate (the temperature averages between 75 deg. and 85 deg. year-round) has long been a host to travelers from all over. As far back as the 17th century, in fact, businessmen from England and other parts of the world visited the island George Washington was one of Barbados' most distinguished guests, and the house where he is said to have stayed, in 1751, may still be seen in Barbados capital city, Bridgetown.

The attractions of the island are many and varied. One of its features is its distinctly British flavor, it's old world grace and courtesy.

In Bridgetown one may see Trafalgar Square, named in honor of Lord Nelson after his death, with a fountain at its center, and flanked by the Barbados Houses of Parliament.

One of the great pleasures in Bridgetown is shopping, walking the length of Broad St., and in and out of the adjacent side streets which are lined with stores. These shops are brimming with fine merchandise, which is available at incredibly low prices, because so much of it is imported duty-free.

Choose from a wide selection of English tweeds, Irish linens. Madras cottons, Liberty silks, cashmere sweaters. English and Continental glassware and tableware, high quality watches, cameras and binoculars, and a vast selection of French perfumes.

Also, readily available are West Indian handicrafts; straw goods, shell and bead necklaces, wooden figures, and of course, Barbados own rum, originally known as "Rumbullion" or "Kill-Devil." Barbardos has been producing this liquor since the 17th century, and has truly gotten its manufacture down to a fine art.

One should make an effort to visit Pelican Village, just outside Bridgetown, a center of the island's handicraft industry. There, one many purchase Bajan arts and crafts, and other locally produced items.

Barbados offers the finest opportunities for water sports of all kinds. There are facilities available for fishing, yachting, water skiing, and scuba diving the latter amid either the eerie seascape of the coral reefs, or a host of old shipwrecks in Carlisle Bay.

For those who prefer to keep their feet solidly on land, there are first-rate golf and tennis facilities available, as well as horseback riding along the beach on the wild Bathsheba coast.

And for those who prefer watching to participating, cricket matches are played from June through January, polo is played in season, and horse races are organized by the Barbados Turf Club in March, May, August and November.

At night, the musically-inclined tourist can visit night clubs to enjoy the unique sound of the steel drum band, or to watch incredibly lithe performers execute the limbo.

From morning through night, there is always something exciting to do in Barbados!

Merit Matches Flavor Giants!

—New National Smoker Study

High tar smokers report: low tar MERIT delivers flavor of leading high tar brands.

Read how 'Enriched Flavor'™ MERIT has been endorsed by the results of a new national smoker study.

Results Confirm MERIT Breakthrough

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers rate MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading high tar cigarettes tested! Cigarettes having up to twice the tar.

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers confirm taste satisfaction of low tar MERIT.

Detailed interviews were also conducted with current MERIT smokers.

Confirmed: 85% of MERIT smokers say it was an "easy switch" from high tar brands.

Confirmed: Overwhelming majority of MERIT smokers say their former high tar brands weren't missed!

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 MERIT smokers not considering other brands.

First Major Alternative To High Tar Smoking

MERIT has proven conclusively that it not only delivers the flavor of high tar brands—but continues to satisfy! This is perhaps the most important evidence to date that MERIT is the first major alternative for high tar smokers.

Plugging into new rates can mean savings

By ELEANOR SIEGEL
In Focus Editor

The penny-wise consumer should begin to pay attention to electric bills. This fall, Boston Edison, acting upon instructions from the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities, will offer a financial incentive to conserve electricity.

Until recently, electricity has been so cheap it has almost been available for nothing and most consumers are unaware of use or costs.

"Electricity will never get cheap again," said Walter E. Salvi, manager of the information services for Boston Edison. Thus rate restructuring is the beginning of a long range attempt to flatten out the demand for electricity during the day, between the hours of 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

If this were successful, the utilities would be able to make the most efficient use of its generating equipment. It would also mean saving fuel and reducing the need to construct new generating stations.

Presently, as electrical demand during peak hourse increases, utilities are required to use generating equipment which is less efficient and requires more fuel oil per unit of electricity.

Salvi said that Boston Edison is approaching the rate restructing "cautiously," since to save money, the consumer "will have to change their lifestyel — but we don't want them to expect much."

However, DPU Commissioner Paul F. Levy said a similar experiment run by Connecticut Light & Power and the U.S. Department of Energy "reduced peak demands and overall energy consumption—the rate made people aware of how they used energy—and they became more frugal."

The current rates will not change. For the consumer who elects this option to save money, the rate 'off peak' will be lower than present rates.

To participate in the plan, the consumer will have to invest in necessary metering equipment which will cost roughly $2.40 a month. That will monitor the time of day electricity is used. Electricity then used at peak hours will be more expensive than current rates.

Right now, the residential consumer pays about 5.3 cents per kilowatt hour, including the cost of fuel. Under the new optional rates, bills will be broken down into charges based on time of use during summer months, mid-June to mid-October and winter months, mid-October to mid-June.

During the eight month winter period, rates will be lower than during the four month summer period. These rates will be offered to the residential, commercial or industrial consumers through a mass mailing containing applications.

Applicants will be asked to fill in information listing all electrical appliances, how you use them, when you use them, the amount of electricity you normally use and some questions about lifestyle such as when you dry cloths and watch T.V. According to Salvi, that information will be analyzed to decide "if you can benefit from the time of use rate."

Those who do sign up must commit themselves for one year.

At the DPU hearings on this matter, no one disagreed about what direction to head in. According to the DPU report, the disagreement was over "what benefits and problems might be reasonably be expected." Concerns also centered on "the methods of pricing at peak, the means of implementing the new pricing at peak, and the potential threats to what was perceived as an already fragile state economy."

For industrial and commercial users will face their own unique problems. Boston Edison will begin calling in these users in groups of 50 for seminars to discuss the intricacies of their rates under this option.

DPU Commissioner Levy pointed out that facing these problems is "not just a Massachusetts phenomena, but a national one," adding "fuel shortages and high prices will persist."

In the past, cheap electricity did not stimulate new appliance technology or motivate users to search for ways to conserve fuel. Now the trend is to make this cost effective.

Live a lot.

There are condominiums where people keep to themselves. And there are condominiums where people get together and do things. Knollsbrook Village is one of the latter. Chances are, twenty of the most active people you know already live here. And you'll be able to meet a lot more of them the first month you're here. Because Knollsbrook makes it easy for everyone to get together. With one of the largest clubhouses around. Indoor swimming pool. Three tennis courts. Plus pine woods, brook and pond. All the things that make condominium life worth living. With people who live life to the fullest.

Prices start at as little as $42,500 for a two bedroom, two bath home with screened-in porch. And one of the lowest mortgage rates in Boston.

Come. Live a lot. Instead of a little.

ASTROLOGY

By Oscar Weber

"Copyright (c) 1978"
All Rights Reserved

Question: I was born in Boston, MA, on a Friday, Aug. 21, 1953, at 5:53 p.m. Will you please tell me something about my Zodiac Sign since I was born at the end of the Leo Sign?

P.H.

Answer: Actually the Sun at the moment of your birth was in the Third Decanate (section) of Leo, which is called the Aries Decanate, but that in itself is not a horoscope. As you surely know all Leo Sun Signs are not alike.

Your chart shows that Mercury, Mars and Pluto were also in Leo; Neptune and Saturn were in Libra; the Moon was in Capricorn; Jupiter in Gemini; Venus and Uranus in Cancer; and Capricorn was on the Ascendent and all of Aquarius was in the First House.

These indicate one who is likely to be fully aware of her objectives and be inclined to let nothing nor anyone stop her. There appears to be excellent organizing and administrating ability and a tendency, expecially as you grow older, to dominate.

You are capable of very intense feelings and can be ardent in love; but, also, at times give the impression of being cold and withdrawn. This makes for a rather complex emotional nature. You may alternate between suppressing your feelings and at other times be somewhat hasty and do the unexpected.

There are indications of a tendency to have your own theories about love, human relationships and sex. You can be very idealistic and will need to be careful not to be gullible. You may be deceived which may give you an inferiority complex for a short time.

Despite complications, marriage to a dynamic, demonstrative self-confident, aggressive individual is possible providing you take your time and don't rush or be rushed.

For questions to be answered through this column, mail the year, month, day of the month, city of birth, time of day if known and questions to Ask Oscar, Box 114, Canton, MA, 02021. Please sign your name which will not be published. Selected questions can only be answered in this column.

Dr. Stearns named professor at Tufts medical school

Norman S. Stearns, M.D., of West Newton, has been promoted to professor of medicine on the faculty of Tufts University School of Medicine (TUSM).

Stearns, who also holds the title of TUSM associate dean for continuing education, had been an associate professor of medicine since 1971, at which time he was director of the Tufts Medical Services at Boston City Hospital.

Three other academic positions held by Stearns are those of director of the program in medicine at Tufts dental school, adjunct associate professor of sociology, Tufts University; and visiting professor of health management, Alfred P. Sloan School of Management, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

For the past two years, Stearns also has held the Sara Murray Jordon Professorship of Medicine, awarded by the trustees of Tufts University in recognition of academic distinction.

Stearns first came to Tufts in 1955 as an assistant in medicine and has been a permanent member of the faculty since 1971.

He is immediate past president of the Association for Hospital Medical Education and secretary-treasurer of the Society of Medical College Directors of Continuing Medical Education.

Stearns is a long-time member of the staffs of Newton— Wellesley and L.F. Quigley Memorial hospitals, in both of which he served formerly as director of medical education.

Kurt Waldheim (left), secretary general of the United Nations played host to the Boston University Alumni Association in New York where he met Herbert A. Abramson (right) of Newton Centre, a BU trustee.

Dr. Minter named

Faulkner Hospital has named a Newton physician to head a new medical subspecialty in rheumatology (diseases of the joints and connective tissue).

Dr. Michael F. Miniter was named Chief of Rheumatology.

Miniter, a native of Ireland, received his M.D. from the National University of Ireland, Dublin.

He recently completed a clinical fellowship in rheumatology and a research fellowship in immunology at Tufts-New England Medical Center.

Two get DAV posts

Two Newton men have been appointed to the staff of the newly elected state commancer of the Disabled American Veterans, John Coyne of Holbrook.

Stanley E. Fields, of 11 Suban Pl., Newton Highlands, has been named assistant sergeant at arms, and Benjamin Oriel of 95 Larchmont Ave., Waban, was named aide to the commander.

Registration for new North High students

Students planning to attend Newton North High School for the first time in September should contact the Guidance Department immediately to make an appointment for the week of Aug. 28.

The number to call for information and appointments is 552-7422, 7423, 7424, 7425.

Mayflower BBW to sponsor yard sale

Mayflower Chapter, B'nai B'rith Women, will sponsor a Mammoth Yard Sale on Sunday, Sept. 10, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Purity Supreme parking lot on Harvard Street, Brookline.

Admission is free. Booths are available for a $10 donation; bring your own tables and chairs. Refreshments and home baked goods will be on sale.

For further information please call evenings: 325-1393, 965-9647, 332-2075.

Curiosity pays off in the form of two crisp $100 bills for Raymond A. Grinnell Jr. (left) of Rsosxbury, whose report of men carrying cartons from a nearby housing development led to arrests. Associated General Contractors of Massachusetts (AGC), via its crime prevention committee chairman, Edumund H. White Jr. of West Newton, paid the reward to the man. ACG AGC posts singns singns at cnonstruction sites offering up to $5000 reward for informatinion leading to arrests of persons stealing form or from or vandalizing the jsites.

Hundred Club donates $188,000 to families of deceased police, firefighters

A total of $188,386 was given in benefits to dependents of deceased law enforcement officers and firefighters who died during the first six months of 1978 by The Hundred Club of Massachusetts, according to Norman Knight, Weston, president.

The Club is a non-profit organization whose membership consists of more than 2,000 leading business, professional and civic men and women in the state who assist bereaved families of law enforcement officers and firefighters.

Of the 25 deaths during the initial six nonths of 1978, seven were in the line of duty. In a line of duty death, $2,500 is given to the family immediately, and subsequently, debts including mortgage are paid up to $10,000. Each child receives a $100 U.S. Savings Bond each Christmas till the 18th birthday, educational assistance, and summer camp vacations.

Fifty-one youngsters are being assisted through college by the Club's George Swartz Scholarship Aid Program, and 50 children are sponsored at summer camps by the Club's Sheriff Howard W. Fitzpatrick Camp Fund.

The Club, whose credo is: "We care for those who care for us," was founded in 1959 to provide financial assistance to the dependents of law enforcement officers and firefighters who lose their lives. Since its inception, the club has distributed more than $2 million to dependents.

Families of about 50,000 enforcement officers and firefighters throughout the Commonwealth are covered for club benefits. Included are families of state, metropolitan district, registry, capitol, MBTA and local police officers, Middlesex County sheriffs, members of division of law enforcement of Department of Natural Resources, and all firegighters.

Glee club travels to Cathedral of the Pines

The Highland Glee Club will be on hand this weekend for services at the Cathedral of the Pines, Rindge, N.H.

Cathedral of the Pines will host the Rebekahs and Odd Fellows of Massachsusetts for their annual memorial service Saturday, Aug. 12, at 2:30 p.m.

Review

'Man of La Mancha' a treat for everyone

By CYNTHIA BLACK
of the Graphic staff

The instant last Friday's performance of "Man of La Mancha" ended and the stage cleared of performers, the audience of 4000 rose to its feet for a standing ovation.

That's entertainment.

The story of the whimsical visionary, Don Quixote, has been on a record-breaking tour since last summer, and was a sellout the minute it got to Boston. The run has been extended.

The speed with which $20 tickets disappeared says something about the desires in Greater Boston for good musical theater, which is fast becoming a thing of relics and revivals.

Exercising artistic license, the stage is set by sending Miguel de Cervantes, the author of Don Quixote, to the dungeon during the Spanish Inquisition.

It is there, with his full of theatrical costumes and his servant, that he entertains his fellow inmates with an enactment of his manuscript, "Don Quxiote."

With few props and few costumes, the dungeon becomes the Spanish countryside where the "Knight of the Woeful Countenance" has his adventures. The servant, of course , plays Sancho Panza, one of famous sidekicks in history, and the inmates take the other roles.

Quixote is really based on the age-old theme of the conflict of imagination and reality. It is a drab man transforming a drab world into a land of dragons and castles and beautiful maidens.

It provides an evening of deft humor that ends powerfully with the shattering of the whimsical knight's dream and his ultimate death.

The plot simply uses the stories Cervantes invented in his book—the tilting with the windmill, the arrival at the "castle" to be knighted by the local royalty, and, of course, every knight's obligation to go on a "quest."

Setting this to music is a problem, and although the program lists 18 songs, there are really only three. However, those three, "Man of La Mancha," "The Impossible Dreamn," and "Dulcinea," are reprised several times and at least that sustains the illusion that this is a musical.

Choreography is limited and involves really one very athletic, well-staged number in which Aldonza, the kitchen maid Don Quixote sees as his fair maiden Dulcinea, is attacked by a group of muleteers.

Since the production is done with no intermission and no stage curtain, the lighting and scene changing deserve some mention.

This is all skillfully handled and quickly executed as the bare dungeon changes into a Quixote location and prisioners appear costumed, only to disappear below the stage and return as prisioners.

Finally, it is well worth your $20 to see Richard Kiley create his Don Quixote, a man he endows with wonder, vigor, humor and great gaping gestures of incredulity the marvelous world his mind has given him.

Tony Martinez is the essence of Sancho Panza, the tolerant, bemused sidekick who spends his days picking his master up of the ground after he's been bested by windmills or marauding strangers.

Martinez has a good, strong voice.

Bernice Massi, in the somewhat demanding role of the Aldonza turned Dulcinea sings in a lusty soprano as she gradually is caught up in the Quixote vision and rescues him in the touching death scene at the end.

Actually, all of the supporting players are good and move skillfully through the story with all the little nuances of individual character in place.

It's also nice to hear a musical with a Spanish touch, providing the composers with rhythms and sounds not normally found in a musical.

All in all, a great evening of entertainment and a tour de force for Kiley.

Richard Kiley and Tony Martinez

Artwork circulates among adult library cardholders

Original works of art, including oils, watercolors, graphics and silk screen prints as well as sculpture, photographs and art reproductions can be borrowed from the second floor gallery at the Newton Free Library, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner.

The Main Library maintains a free circulating art collection where reproductions of famous sculpture and works of art, lent to the library by both professional and nonprofessional artists, may be borrowed for one month free of charge, and are then renewable for a second month.

Adult holders of a Newton library card may select a painting, sculpture or photograph and sign for it at the reference desk on the second floor of the Main Library. One piece of art may be borrowed at a time on one card.

In inclement weather borrowers should bring adequate covering to protect the art work.

The oils, collages, silk screens, acrylics, photographs and mixed media, most of which are valued under $100, may be purchased from the artist. The sculpture and framed reproductions may be borrowed though they are not for sale.

Main Library hours are Monday through Friday 9 a.m.-9 p.m. through Sept. 9.

Pride of Bookbuilders on display at library

Books about collecting; books for amusement, entertainment and study; and books for children and adults are among the 35 books of the New England Book Show on view at the Newton Free Library, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner, through Aug. 25.

Sponsored by the Bookbuilders of Boston, the show is divided into three categories: educational, general trade, and other.

The 35 books, selected as the outstanding books produced in 1977, represent a juried exhibit of the best of New England book design and manufacturing as well as a selection of publishers' choice books.

The Bookbuilders of Boston is an organization composed of representatives of the publishing industry of New England, their suppliers of materials, manufacturers, and individuals in related fields such as design, library work, and education.

In making its selection, the jury considered total design quality, manufacturing quality, limitations, and the publisher's objective for each title.

Summer hours at the Main Library are 9-9 Monday through Friday, through Sept. 12. The Newtonville Branch, 345 Walnut St., in addition to its weekday hours, is open Saturdays 11-4.

Going Nine Rounds At Rita's Place

Volume 1/Number 40 • August 10/16, 1978

The cheapest way to Europe from Boston.

$279 round trip.

This is the lowest scheduled transatlantic fare from Boston to Amsterdam and back. And Pan Am, who's introduced more low fares than any other airline, is the only one offering it.

The $279 round trip fare is available from now until September 14 on Pan Am's daily nonstop from Boston to Amsterdam. The entire flight will be filled on a standby basis only. No reservations can be accepted.

Open tickets may be purchased from your travel agent or Pan Am, entitling you to stand by any day.

Once you have a ticket, you can obtain boarding passes on a first come, first go basis, from 9:00 a.m., at the Pan Am counter at Logan International.

The flight will leave every day at 7:30 p.m.

To take full advantage of the $279 fare ($155 over and $124 back), your return must be no later than September 14.

This fare is even $14 cheaper than the Standby Fare from Boston to London. Plus our fare takes you to the continent with convenient air and land connections to almost anywhere you want to go in Europe.

Arrival in Amsterdam will be at 8:15 a.m. the following morning.

For more information, we've set up a special number in Boston for you to call: (617) 338-9383.

But don't wait to call. These low fares won't be around forever.

Revival Movie Houses Where To Find Them

For two or three dollars plunked down at an art/revival theatre, the movie-goer can see a proven winner — a classic, an interesting oddity, an undeservedly neglected gem — and sometimes two.

By Sam Lasoff

All theatres look the same in the dark. What separates the good from the bad from the ugly is the film on the reels: what is the newest, glossiest, and flossiest is not always the best. Most theatres play first-run movies, and it is all too easy to pay top dollar to be bitten, bored, burnt, drowned and stung. Mostly stung. One alternative is to lock oneself in the closet until Jon Peters goes back to cutting hair, but a more practical suggestion is to investigate the phenomenon of the art/revival house, a theatre which shows foreign films, both old and new, and vintage American ones.

This is not to say that every movie made in this country before 1958 is Citizen Kane, or that every one made afterwards is Kentucky Fried Movie. But oldies have a charm of their own, sometimes because they are old friends, sometimes because they are a window on another world, without the cool cant of Nostalgia, and sometimes (O Rare!) because they are well-written, well-acted, and well-directed, by folks who were thinking about film before television gave everyone a six-minute, 24-inch (measured diagonally) attention span.

Charm is also an economy. For two or three dollars plunked down at an art/revival theatre, the movie-goer can see a proven winner — a classic, an interesting oddity, an undeservedly neglected gem — and sometimes two. The repertory of the art/revival theatres is enormous: just about every movie ever made finds its way into the art/revival projectors.

Only a decade ago, audiences who yearned for the latest Truffaut or stylish Hitchcock had to make an agonizing trek into the concrete jungle. Big cities were the only places one could see an older or foreign film. But no more. In the last few years art/revival theatres have been spreading throughout the country: in small suburban, rural, college and resort towns. Finally, the mountain has come to Mohammed.

Here is a survey of some of the more interesting art/revival theatres in Massachusetts:

WEST

The Images Cinema, 50 Spring Street, Williamstown (413-458-5612), has recently become an art/revival theatre. The Images began screening first-run films for local residents in the Thirties and luckily has never closed its doors. In 1976 it was bought by Boston film booker George Mansour and had its programming format changed from the drab second-run (slightly older new American films like Rocky or Annie Hall) to art/revival. "Our films are geared to a college (Williams) and the 'sophisticated' market," explains the perceptive Mansour. "The theatre was dying a slow death with new films. It was time for a change. And since we are the only theatre in town, we can mix our films with current foreign films like Cat and Mouse and Dear Inspector (films currently playing first-run engagements in Boston) and better American films like An Unmarried Woman and Blume in Love." The Images certainly keeps pace with the best of New York and Boston theatres, and provides a good range of films for the Williamstown community to chose from. Films coming to The Images in August include The Duellists, The Harder They Come, and The Music Lovers, which will coincide with Richard Chamberlain's performance in The Shadow Box at the Williamstown Summer Theatres. Admission is $2.50 at all times and $1 for children and those over 65.

The Lee and Lenox areas nestled in the Berkshires might be considered by many to belong to music lovers of Tanglewood. But the magic of the movies can be seen and heard at night, also. The Holliston Art Theater, 45 West Street, Lenox (413-637-0534), provides just that respite from the sounds of the Boston Symphony. Recently opened this spring by the Orson Welles's film booker Mark Diamond, the Holliston's programming is similar to the Welles's. It's almost exclusively current foreign films. Well, not that current. Actually, most theatres show 35 mm, which is the standard theatrical gauge. It's two times as large and clear as 16 mm, which is mainly for educational and private use. But many film prints are available only in 16 mm, for one reason or another. The Holliston, a maverick, has only 16 mm projecting equipment; subsequently, its films are usually at least a year old. In the past months, the Holliston has screened Providence, Cria, The Clockmaker and Stroszek. If it's contemporary foreign films you want, the Holliston Art Theatre has it. Also, Diamond expressed the hope that he might keep the theatre open all year. Admission is $2 at all times.

The college towns of Northampton and Amherst are surrounded by five universities, if not as many movie theatres. The oldest of them is The Academy of Music, 274 Main Street, Northampton (413-584-8435). In fact, it's the sixth-oldest existing theatre in the United States. The Academy is an impressive Italinate structure full of architectural and cultural history. Built in 1870, The Academy's majestic leaded fan light in the lobby was not only made by Tiffany of New York, but Mr. Tiffany himself donated it. Originally planned as an opera house, the 850-seat theatre will soon be designated a National Historic Landmark. It has seen such performers as Sarah Bernhardt, The Great Houdini, and the first repertory theatre company in America. The theatre manager, Duane Robertson, isn't certain when The Academy first screened motion pictures: "I'm not sure we had silent films but I do know that there were films here in the early thirties." Today The Academy plays a fine combination of art and revival films, as well as local opera and ballet throughout the year. Most of the good foreign films playing in the big city make it to The Academy, in addition to some of the more interesting American samplings. August sees an interesting double-bill, at The Academy, of two Liza Minnelli films: Cabaret and New York, New York. Admission is $2.50 and $1 for children and elders at all times.

The other art/revival theatre in Northampton is The Pleasant Street Theatre, 27 Pleasant Street (413-586-0935). Behind its small but striking art-deco storefront facade is a tiny 125 seat theatre. But the films that play at The Pleasant Street are large on quality. Last month the theatre's films included Frederick Wiseman's Canal Zone, Madame Rosa (which is still playing at Cambridge's Orson Welles), and the 1977 Cannes Film Festival Winner Padre, Padrone. "We actually do a little better during the summer months when the colleges are on vacation," points out the theatre's manager, Richard Pini. "Films like Madame Rosa have brought an older audience to the theatre. And that's nice to see." The Pleasant Street Theatre specializes in double-bills — a fading favorite of movie theatres in the Forties. And its combinations of films are intelligent and well planned. Next month it will have the American theatrical debut of Off The Wall (a San Franciscan underground film about the last of the hippies) and Robert Altman's Images; two from Italian filmmaker Luchino Visconti, Senso and Ossessione; and some Bogart — The Treasure of the Sierra Madre and Dark Passages. Admission is $2.50 with half price for children and those over 65. Midnight shows on Friday and Saturday.

CENTRAL MASS

A few short miles from Concord and Lexington, The Fine Arts Nickelodeon, 21 Summer Street, Maynard (897-2100), caters to film enthusiasts that come from as far away as the Worcester area. Built in the Forties, The Fine Arts was a second-run neighborhood theatre until 1976 when Joel Tranum and Murro Van Meter bought it and restored its programming and appearance. These days it looks like a Californian art-deco theatre. The Fine Arts offers many films year round, since it specializes in split-week screenings — two films a week instead of the customary one. This theatre has one of the most eclectic programming schedules in the state. At any given time audiences can view a Cagney or other such "classic," a "new-wave" foreign film or a good Hollywood movie. The Fine Arts has two screens — so if audiences don't like what's playing in one theatre, they have another to choose from. Admission is $3, but discount books are available.

NORTH

The Cabot Street Cinema Theatre, 286 Cabot Street, Beverly, is one of the strangest theatres in Massachusetts. At the lobby doors,

Boston Revives Itself.

Boston has been without an art/revival movie theatre since the summer of 1977, when within a few short weeks the Park Square Cinema, The Kenmore Square Cinema and The Back Bay Screening Room closed their doors. The only place to catch a repertory movie since that time, has been across the city line in Cambridge, Brookline or elsewhere.

But no longer. Soon The Abbey Cinemas (two separate screens), vacant for over three years and located just west of Kenmore Square on Commonwealth Avenue, will once again light up — with an art/revival format.

The new operators of The Abbey are the owners of the Nickelodeon Maynard and North Falmouth theatres, Joel Tranum and Murro Van Meter. They plan to reopen The Abbey's doors on August 16 and rename the theatre The Nickelodeon Boston. The Nickelodeon Boston will present the same repertory films that the other Nickelodeon theatres screen. "The only difference is this theatre from our others," said owner Tranum, "is that we would like to be a little more esoteric in our choice of films. After all, we will have the colleges' film programs to compete with."

The Nickelodeon "group" will now have the greatest number of art/revival screens in Massachusetts (6), with the addition of the Nickelodeon Boston's two screens. The films opening Boston's newest art/revival theatre are, at the time of this writing, yet to be confirmed. But Boston film booker George Mansour (who books the films for the other Nickelodeons) has some idea of what films he would like to open with: "I definitely think we will go with Joseph Andrews. It has been doing very well in Providence and New Haven." Also being considered are the New England premiers of Claude Lelouch's The Good and The Bad and Joseph Losey's adaptation of Ibsen's The Doll's House with Jane Fonda.

It's about time Boston once again had its very own art/revival theatre, and we wish it good luck.

Food | Rita's Place

As course upon course comes to the table, you begin to feel like a participant in some sort of gustatory boxing match.

By Steve Raichlen

Some restaurants lure dinner guests by their location; some draw crowds with their decor or ambience. Some restaurants — alas, all too few — attract clients with the superb fare they offer. And some keep binging the people in because they're such good fun.

Rita's Place, in Chelsea, is one of the latter. From a culinary point of view, there are doubtless better Italian restaurants in Boston. But no other Italian restaurant in the area offers quite the evening's entertainment.

In the strictest sense, what Rita's offers is a nine-course, prix-fixe Italian banquet, prepared with the extravagance of a Federico Fellini film production and served with the persistence of a Jewish grandmother. This spares dinner guests the trouble of poring over the menu. It also makes for very leisurely dining. (Young children would be miserably bored here.) Rita's is the kind of place where you linger at the table for three or four hours, quaffing cold red wine from a bottomless decanter, growing red-faced and roly-poly as the evening advances. It's like some gastronomic purgatory, where each successive course burdens the belly, but uplifts the soul to a paradise of satiety. It's a restaurant for gluttons, gourmandizing, and gaiety, not for mere mortals or dull occasions.

Yet to glance at the place in the daytime, you'd never suspect that such excesses took place here in the evenings. By day, Rita's Place is an unassuming neighborhood carry-out, offering nothing more controversial than spaghetti or a meat-ball sub. The dinner guest is indeed in for a pleasant surprise.

Dinner begins auspiciously with a stroll through the kitchen to the dining rooms. The chefs look up from their saute pans and chopping blocks and nod aimiably; much of the food is in the oven already, so a pleasant calm prevails. We next pass into one of the dining rooms, which is small and cozy, with five or six tables — more like a parlor in a private home. Since everyone is eating the same meal, and everyone digs in at about the same time, you're almost bound to strike up conversation with your neighbors. Indeed, the place veritably roars with laughter by the time the evening is in full swing.

The service is prompt, down to earth and even a little saucy. The waitresses obviously enjoy their work. They are the accomplices in the food orgy which takes place all around them. Ask for seconds of a particular dish and you'll invariably get it, though as often with a good-natured scowl as with a wink. The kitchen staff is also very obliging. For example, a member of our party eats no meat, and when she politely declined the chicken, the chef fixed her up with a dish of spaghetti and pesto.

The food is perhaps the only disappointment, and even then it's fully adequate, just not inspired. Quantity more than makes up for quality at Rita's Place. I suspect that very few people leave dissatisfied.

As course upon course comes to the table, you begin to feel like a participant in some sort of gustatory boxing match. Here's the blow by blow description of the bout:

Round I: We arrive and are warmly welcomed by the hostess and the dinner guests at the next table. Somewhere in the room a surreptitious champagne bottle opens with a resounding pop. I have a hunch we're in for a festive meal. The waitress brings a litre of cheap red wine — cold, but somehow delicious — and our appetizer: "Little Nothings." These consist of freshly fried, delicate dough triangles, filled with cheese, ground beef and spinach. Each triangle is lightly drizzled with honey, which gives the impression of something Middle Eastern or even medieval. We're off to a great start.

Round II: In comes what must be the best garlic bread in Boston. It's buttery, very crispy, but not very garlicy. Instead, the bread is topped with parsley, freshly grated Romano cheese, and infinitesimal bits of bacon. Irresistible! Against our better judgement (after all, we're only on the second course), we ask for seconds.

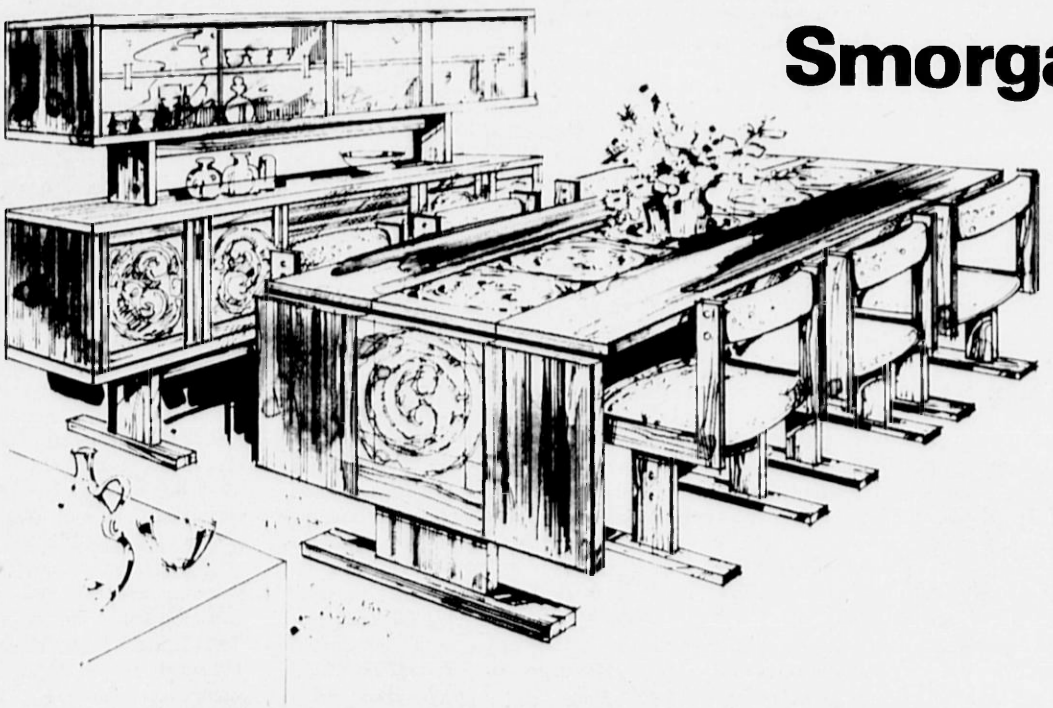

Round III: At this point the kitchen flounders, though not irretrievably. We receive a plateful of stuffed mushrooms, six per person, stuffed with breadcrumbs, oregano, and cheese. Alas, they are too doughy. We've lost the last vestiges of hunger and, what do you know, the waitress has already brought us a second litre of wine. Onwards.

Round IV: In comes our fish course — scampi with white wine sauce. The dish is nicely flavored, with plenty of pepper and a hint of garlic. The shrimp are probably frozen, but not, as is so often the case, overcooked. An hour has passed since we first came here. Appetite still holding.

Round V: Just what we were longing for: salad. Actually, it's more of an antipasto, being generously garnished with slices of mortadella, Genoa salami, and provolone. The salad has lots of lettuce, albeit iceberg; lots of tomatoes, though they're cello-packed. The dressing has a cheesy tang — like bottled Caesar, but better.

Round VI: Take a deep breath, my friends, we're in for it now. We're done with the appetizers and tongue-ticklers. The next three courses are real food. A tasty eggplant parmesan strikes the first blow. The eggplant has been fried

Theatre | The Wiz

The Wiz
Starring Renee Harris, Ken Prymus, Charles Valentino and Clyde-Jacques Barrett. Book by William F. Brown, music and lyrics by Charlie Smalls. Directed and costumes designed by Geoffrey Holder. Set design by Tom H. John. Choreography and musical numbers staged by George Faison. Lighting designed by Tharon Musser. At the Shubert Theatre.

By Vivian Noble

L. Frank Baum's The Wonderful Wizard of Oz has seen many incarnations, from a book to a turn-of-the-century musical to the favorite MGM movie made in 1939. At present it's The Wiz, the boisterous black musical that won seven Tony Awards on Broadway.

Now, with a different cast, the show has come to Boston, and is as well-acted, -directed, -choreographed and -sung a visitor as can be. It's a journey into an Oz quite divorced from the one we're used to — where the Good Witch of the North, Addaperle, sums up the disasters of a soporific poppy field to Dorothy with a simple "Child, it's terrible waking up and finding your clothes all out of style"; and where the Scarecrow greets the Kansas refugee with a hearty cry of "Hey, honey, you got any spare change?" This is a musical endowed with a vaudeville soul and

The Wiz is, in fact, a Star Wars *of the stage, a spaced-out fantasy replete with flowing costumes, spectacular sets, lots of color and movement, and a vigorous score, one minute gospel, the next fervent rock 'n' roll.

22 dances and songs, all of them glitter and light and exhilaration. The Wiz is, in fact, a Star Wars of the stage, a spaced-out fantasy replete with flowing costumes, spectacular sets, lots of color and movement, and a vigorous score, one minute gospel, the next fervent rock 'n' roll.

Unlike the movie, however, The Wiz relies not on special effects but on the talents of its cast, which are many. 18-year-old Renee Harris, as Dorothy, surely brings back a faint echo of Judy Garland in her Oz days — a diminutive, lively figure with a voice so big that it shakes her when she sings. Ken Prymus is the blustery Lion, Charles Valentino provides a Scarecrow who hangs very loose indeed and Claude-Jacques Barrett brings lots of heart to the Tinman. All are notably fleet of foot and strong of voice, but none more so than the Wiz himself, a silvery, commanding personage played by the versatile and white-platform-shoed Kamal. All other casting is also right on target. One wishes only that the entire show were not so miked up, and that the obvious abilities of the cast were displayed to fuller, and not such electronic, advantage.

The Wiz continues at the Shubert until September 3, and makes for a resplendent night on the town.

Revival Theatres

audiences are greated by tuxedo-and-cape-clad ushers. The entire staff is formally attired as well. I haven't seen the projectionists, but I wouldn't be surprised if they too wore "monkey suits." It seems the Cabot Theatre is a throwback to the hey-day of the great "Broadway movie palaces." And the films at the Cabot also seem right out of the Twenties and Thirties. "We don't show any 'X' or 'R' rated films here," said the Cabot's David Fidelman. "Only wholesome family entertainment." Every Sunday the normal program of films like Lawrence of Arabia, Camelot, Three Coins in a Fountain and Close Encounters is suspended for a live magic show. "We try to duplicate the spirit of the old vaudeville shows," says Fidelman. This turn to "family entertainment" and the recreation of nostalgia for a by-gone era hasn't hurt the Cabot's business. Since the theatre opened two years ago, it has already established itself as one of the North Shore's more interesting tourist attractions. Admission for films is $2. The Sunday afternoon Magic Show at 3 pm is $2 for adults, $1 for children, but the evening Sunday Magic Show at 8:15 pm is $4.50 for adults and $3 for children under 12.

CAPE COD

Provincetown, a popular resort town that hugs the sands at the tip of Cape Cod, swells to 30,000 or 40,000 residents during the summer months. Besides the sunlight, a healthy night life is a main priority for Provincetown vacationing inhabitants. And the town's two art/revival theatres help provide the added escape from reality, if only for a few short hours. The Movies, at 237 Commercial Street (487-3630), and The Metro Cinema, across the street at 256 Commercial (487-3466), are managed by the same person, Monte Rome. He runs back and forth every night. Rome is a "film buff" par excellance, and the choice of movies at his theatres are reflections of his cinematic experience. "We look for things that are really different," pipes Rome. "Since we don't have a big population in Provincetown, we try to provide a good range of films."

The Movies plays what Rome calls "classic-ier" bills. The theatre is really the top half of an old movie bijou that was built in 1919, but completely redone by Rome when he acquired the theatre three years ago. Walkabout, Women in Love, and 1900 have been presented at The Movies along with the better American and foreign films.

At The Metro Cinema, which is a converted church, the programs have tended to the esoteric. The American premiere of Outrageous, with Craig Russell, played for two weeks last year, and that's a long time for a Cape Cod theatre. But "trendy" isn't the only thing this theatre caters to. Early silent films have graced it, for example, as well. And one film which has been collecting large cult audiences in Boston, is doing the same thing at The Metro. The Rocky Horror Picture Show plays every Friday and Saturday at midnight. Audiences have been coming to the theatre dressed in outrageous costumes, parodying the film's outlandish screen characters. Who says it happens only in the city? If the movie isn't to everyone's liking, the sidewalk show is certainly worth a gander. Admission is $2.75. Half price for kids and older folks.

The Cape Cinema, Route 6A, Dennis (385-2503), is also managed by Rome, so the films here are similar to those at The Movies. But the most fascinating feature at this theatre is that there is no fixed seating. Fear not. Patrons do not have to stand. Instead, they are seated in lushly-padded armchairs. This makes going to the movies at The Cape Cinema a comfortable experience, to say the least. Admission is $2.75, half price for under 12 and over 65.

In Buzzards Bay area there's The Nickelodeon, Route 151, North Falmouth (563-2208), which is owned by the same people (Joel Tranum and Murro Van Meter) who own The Fine Arts Nickelodeon in Maynard. So, the same intelligent and creative choice of films makes it on the marquee. Here and at Maynard the over-looked seldom get the short end of the bill. Handle With Care, Inserts, and 92 in the Shade are just some of the fine films the Nickelodeon will screen at any given time. This brand new twin-screened theatre will also play the better films from abroad. It's nice to see new theatres built to show art/revival films. It's a refreshing change and hopefully a new trend. Admission here is $3, with discount books available.

Kids' Trips | Sailing The India Star

This "voyage" is a palatable means for kids to get themselves interested in history.

By Harriet Webster

Now you can relive the loneliness, excitement and danger of life aboard a 19th century merchant ship out of the port of Salem, by visiting the city's marketplace, her waterfront, and the homes of her crew.

The Voyage of the India Star is a spanking new multimedia production held at the Theatre at Pickering Wharf, which was especially built to accommodate it. You enter a round, empty auditorium and take a seat on the carpeted floor. As the production begins, the lights are cut and you hear the first of many voices piercing the darkness. The words spoken are extracted from the diaries, memoirs and letters of the men and women who lived in early Salem, as well as from the ships' logs.

As the voices become stronger, they take on a physical presence in the form of mannequins representing characters typical of 19th century maritime Salem. A ship owner instructs the captain of his vessel as to his responsibilities. A young man and his wife speak of their loneliness, in anticipation of a separation that will last well over a year. A teenager, about to make his first voyage as a cabin boy, fantasizes about the adventures that lie ahead.

Deborah Taylor

"A fellow's got to hang on by his eyelids"... "Bodies floated up from the deep"... "This Coast of Sumatra is a vile place"... "Here the Federalists and the Republicans can openly fight with each other, in the holiday spirit of course"... The voices are enhanced by the background sounds like thunder, lightning and an almost continuous medley of sea tunes typical of the day.

One highpoint of the presentation occurs when life aboard the India Star is juxtaposed with a scenario of a Fourth of July celebration ashore. The decks of the ship are piled with bodies and ring with the clashing of swords as pirates threaten the crew. But back in Salem, there is much making merry. The wheel of fortune spins as the barker encourages customers to risk their money. We hear that "fish fights abound" and that loaded dice are suspected. First one scene is illuminated and then the other. Sometimes the two appear simultaneously. But all the excitement is brought to a solemn conclusion as we hear the voice of the India Star's captain announce from the darkness, "The good sailor Mr. Barnes is dead, having been stabbed in the back and side."

The kids in the audience are totally caught up in the romance of the voyage, and yet it is to the credit of the producers that they have not overly sweetened the picture. Death and loneliness, seasickness and fear are as vivid as the glory of the sea and the prospect of great riches. Surely this is a palatable means for kids to get themselves interested in history. They can even take home a little something to remember the "trip" by. The theatre lobby houses the India Star Trading Company, which offers merchandise similar to that traded during the China Trade era. The shop is more a museum shop than a typical souvenier store.

If you are hungry after the show, move to either side of the theatre entrance for a belt bursting treat. The Cookie Cottage has regular, giant and super size cookies, all homemade on the premises. On the other side, there is an ice cream emporium featuring a smorgasbord where you concoct your own immoral delight. A real opportunity for kids to do some creating.

The Voyage of the India Star will be complimented this week by Salem's Heritage Days celebration. Boat parades and beer gardens, theatre events especially geared for kids, and loads of live music will predominate. Some of the special times and dates to plan around include: two days of circus acts on the mall, August 14 and 15 from noon to 4 pm and noon to 4:30 pm respectively; a Kennel Ration pet show on the common the afternoon of the 15th; and the Rag-A-Muffin Theatre Group, giving forth on the mall with Through the Looking Glass at 11 am, and The Fantasticks at 8:30 pm. Everything's free.

Notes:

The Voyage of the India Star is shown continuously on the half hour and hour. Summer hours are 9:30 am to 8:30 pm, daily. Admission is $1.75 for adults, $1.25 for children 18 and under. Under 6 get in free. Additional information is at 745-8694.

It is often said that dolphins are like people. It would be more appropriate to say that dolphins are like children.

Like children, dolphins are what they seem. They are free from pretense. Like children, they all have individual personalities. Like children, they love to have fun. (In fact, play is a necessity for dolphins.) And like children, they can be difficult. A dolphin trainer, like a parent, is always looking for the right balance of sensitive empathy and firmness.

Dolphins are one of many unique forms of life to learn about at the Aquarium. They are a good example of what we mean when we say that learning about other forms of life directly from life is the most exciting, fun way to learn of all.

Bring your children to see them soon. They'll love it, and you'll love it. After all, what could be more fun than kids entertaining kids?

NEPTUNE. A follower. Lacks initiative.

The Boy with the Bloody Teeth

It's hard to keep track of the many Draculas lurking on the stage these days. At any rate, another one, in the form of Jose Greco, in a vehicle called The Passion of Dracula, has flown into the Spingold Theatre at Brandeis University in Waltham, and will hang around until August 27. Performances are Tuesday through Friday at 8 pm, Saturday at 5 and 9 pm, and Sunday at 2 and 7 pm. Ranging from $6.50 to $10.50, tickets will take a moderate bite out of your pocket. For reservations and all information call the box office at 893-2200.

Machismo

Still aspiring to the title of macho men, the Village People come tonight for a very brief stint (through tomorrow) at the Chateau de Ville, Route 9 in Framingham. Shows are 9:30 tonight, ($5.50) 9:30 and 11:30 tomorrow night ($6.50). The People are also making a stop at the Randolph Chateau on Saturday and Sunday, but shows there are just about sold out. All tickets available at Ticketron, or can be charged by calling 1-800-982-5970. For all details, call the Framingham reservations desk at 965-2200.

A Cry Out of Egypt

Based on the tales of Harriet Beecher Stowe, the play A Cry Out of Egypt opens tonight at, of all places, Old Sturbridge Village, on Route 20 in Sturbridge. Also running tomorrow, August 18, 19, 25 and 26, the play is preceded by dinner, each day at 6:30 pm. The complete fee is $11.95. For reservations and information, call the Village at 347-3362.

Bach is Back

An all-Bach weekend begins tonight at Castle Hill, the Crane estate on Argilla Road in Ipswich. Tonight and tomorrow night at 8:30, the Festival Orchestra plays the Third and Fifth Brandenburg Concerti, the Cantata No. 51 for Trumpet, Soprano, and Orchestra, and the C Minor Concerto for Oboe and Violin. The tickets are $6. Sunday, at 5:30, the program is one of orchestral and chamber music, including the Sixth Brandenberg and the B Minor Overture for Flute and Orchestra. Sunday night tickets are $4. For reservations and information, call 356-4070.

Marian McPartland

Winter in Summer

Johnny Winter, the pale rock and roller, is at the Paradise, 967 Commonwealth Avenue in Boston, tonight and tomorrow night at 9. Tickets are $8.50. For more information, call the box office, 254-2052.

Bike Hike

Take a bicycle tour today along serene country roads — and get a chance to check out some of the state's more historic towns — with the Lincoln Guide Service, Lincoln Road in Lincoln. The tour starts at 1:30 pm; to register, just call the Service this morning at 259-9204 and let them know you're coming. The cost is $2, and rentals are available.

Van Ronk

Dave Van Ronk, who used to play the college circuit, is now playing the club circuit. Down-home folk music and guitar playing is the order of the day, tonight at 8 and 10:30 at Jonathan Swift's, 30 Boylston Street in Harvard Square. Van Ronk's guest is George Gritzback. Tickets are $4.50, and you may call 661-9887 for more information.

14• mon.

Sergio Franchi

Sergio Franchi, the crooner, and Dana Valery, who is his sister, and Billy Baxter, are all at the Cape Cod Melody Tent, tonight through Sunday, August 20. Now through Friday, the show is at 8:30; there are two shows Saturday, at 6 and 9:30, and one on Sunday, at 8. All the tickets are $10.75. Tickets are available at Ticketron and at the box office, 775-9100. The Melody Tent is at the West Main Street rotary in Hyannis.

Como

The perpetually vital Perry Como opens an engagement tonight at the South Shore Music Circus, Sohier Street in Cohasset. Shows, through August 20, are tonight through Friday at 8 pm, Saturday at 5:30 and 9 pm, with a Sunday matinee at 3. Tickets are an impressive $15. For information and reservations, call the box office at 383-1400.

15• tues.

Duo Debut

The playwright who brought us American Buffalo, David Mamet, is at it again, this time with two comedies, Sexual Perversity in Chicago and Duck Variations. The duo previews tonight at 7:30 at the Charles Playhouse, 76 Warrenton Street in Boston. The subsequent schedule of performances is Tuesday through Thursday at 8 pm, Friday and Saturday at 7:30 and 9:30 pm, and Sunday at 7:30 pm. Tickets range from $5.95 to $7.95 weekdays and Sundays, $6.95 to $8.95 weekends. For all details, call the box office at 426-6912.

Danny Grossman

From Toronto, the Danny Grossman Dance Company prances into the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival in Lee, tonight through Saturday. The show tonight is at 7:30, tomorrow through Saturday evenings at 8:40, with matinees Thursday and Saturday at 3. Tickets are $8 and $6; for reservations and further information, call (413) 243-0745.

The First Lady

Marian McPartland, who plays jazz on the piano so elegantly, moves into Sandy's, at 54 Cabot Street in Beverly, tonight for a six-day visit. Assisting her is Jimmy McPartland on trumpet and the combination is proof that one and one can add up to one Very Big Deal. Three sets nightly start at 8, and the tickets are $4. For more information, call 922-7515.

16• wed.

The Moving Pictures

Go to the movies at a museum today. At 2, the Danforth Museum, 123 Union Avenue in Framingham shows films by Robert McCloskey, the creator of the ever-charming Make Way For Ducklings, through August 19. Admission is free, and 620-0050 is the number to call for more information. At 8:45, tonight only, Casablanca will be shown at the De Cordova Museum, on Sandy Pond Road in Lincoln, and if there is man, woman, or child who has never seen this, the apotheosis of Bogart and Bergman, now is the chance. Admission is $150 for members, $2 for all others. For more information, call 259-8355.

Movies | Short Subjects

Feature Attraction
Corvette Summer

Ever since the Beach Boys crooned about the joys of cruising in a deuce coupe or a 409, a boy's love affair with his car has been a natural for Hollywood's filmmakers. Last year there was The Van; this year, the not-so-obscure object of desire is a shiny, red, souped-up Stingray.

Corvette Summer isn't your ordinary Boy meets Car movie. It's a little bit more complicated than that: Boy makes Car. Boy loses Car. Boy finds Girl. Boy forgets about Car and goes after Girl. Mark Hamill (Star Wars) stars as the Boy; Annie Potts is the Girl; the Car turns in a purring performance as itself.

The script, by Hal Barwood and Matthew Robbins (who also wrote Steven Spielberg's Sugarland Express) transforms a typical junky "B" movie plot into a well-tuned chronicle about coming of age — with emphasis on story development, continuity, and frivolity rather than on Hidden Meaning.

The direction by Robbins helps propell the narrative without too many sagging pitstops. And with engrossing photography by Frank Stanley, Corvette Summer looks like the Gone With The Wind of hot-rod movies.

—Sam Lasoff

Animal House

Until recently, the folks at the National Lampoon have been content to satisfy their creative urges by liberating scatological prose and making dirty words safe to print. They have now broadened their horizons and expanded onto the big screen. Animal House is nothing more than a springboard for the kind of jokes Johnny Carson sometimes likes to tell on national television: sex, sexist, and more sexist. The plot, which involves two college frats at war with each other, is as exciting as watching the grass grow. Not even John Belushi and Donald Sutherland can make Animal House habitable. Braintree Cinema, Brockton Cinema, Chestnut Hill Cinema, Framingham Cinema, Lawrence Showcase, Woburn Showcase.

The Eyes of Laura Mars

A modern, overdone murder-mystery, Eyes features Faye Dunaway as Laura Mars, a successful fashion photographer noted for her very chic and very macabre portraits. She is also in telepathic communication with someone who is murdering her colleagues. To complicate matters still further, the intrepid cop in charge of the case (Tommy Lee Jones) becomes her lover. Oddly the two of them, as well as everyone else in the cast, don't seem particularly fearful — it's more as if they have stomach cramps throughout. Still, the culprit is not exposed until the very end, and the movie is never boring. Irvin Kershner directed, Jon Peters produced.

Heaven Can Wait

Heaven Can Wait should have been a good film. It's based on the romantic fantasy comedy Here Comes Mr. Jordan, a story about a man who dies before he's supposed to and is brought back to life as a different person. But this is entirely Warren Beatty's film: he not only took the starring role but also wrote the script with Elaine May, directed the film with Buck Henry, and produced the project as well. He has overextended himself. Although Henry, James Mason, Julie Christie, and Dyan Cannon turn in fine supporting performances, the direction lacks the charm and sophistication to pull off a complex tale. Still, Heaven Can Wait has flashes of good comedy and fine action. It's close, but no heavenly encounter. Burlington Cinema, Circle, Dedham Showcase, Framingham Cinema, Hanover Mall.

Revenge of the Pink Panther

All the Pink Panther films are pretty much the same. Peter Sellers again (for the 5th time) turns in a funny performance as Inspector Clousseau. This time, he's after a drug syndicate, which has tried to assassinate him 16 times. In the course of the plot, which at times is nonsensical and confusing, Sellers craftily disguises himself as a midget artist (Toulouse Lautrec), a Swedish peg-legged sailor, a priest, a transvestite, a Chinese coolie, and an Italian gangster. For Blake Edwards, the director and original creator of the Pink Panther series, making this film was more like sleep walking.

But with stellar performances by Sellers and Dyan Cannon (as his sexy ally) the film moves swiftly from pitfall to pratfall, and The Revenge of the Pink Panther is good for a few laughs. Braintree Cinema, Framingham Cinema, Hanover Mall, Lawrence Showcase, Woburn Showcase.

Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band

Turning rock albums into movies has become the vocation of music promoter — and now movie mogul — Robert Stigwood. He's done it before with Tommy and Jesus Christ Superstar. His latest transformation is the Beatles' album Sgt. Pepper and as in the previous Stigwood attempts, Sgt. Pepper is nothing more than a silent movie with musical accompaniment. The BeeGees are the Sgt. Pepper's Band and Peter Frampton is Billy Shears, their leader. Somehow, Henry Edwards has managed to construct a story (for lack of a better word) by taking the album's lyrics and translating them into images. The result: a punk-rock, drug-oriented, romantic-fantasy. There's not one word of spoken dialogue in the entire film except for the narration by George Burns. It's painfully obvious that this film is geared to the 13- to 18-year old market which has only heard of The Beatles in reference to "classical" music. It's a good thing Hollywood no longer uses the "M" rating, because Sgt. Pepper is not for mature audiences. Braintree Cinema, Brockton Cinema, Circle, Framingham Cinema, Lawrence Showcase, Woburn Showcase.

to perfection; the tomato sauce is ever so slightly sweet. We're very full at this point. We start on our third carafe of wine.

Round VII: The redoubtable pasta course — lasagna — strikes the next blow. There's plenty of meat and cheese to the dish, but the noodles are hopelessly overcooked. We eat it all, hoping never to have to eat again. The sound level in the room has trebled; a man to our left is singing. We begin our fourth carafe of wine.

Round VIII: "You mean there's more?" we cry to the waitress. "God help us." Yes, there's more: chicken in wine sauce, a whole half chicken braised in wine with potatoes. It's not very good, but who cares at this point? Three of us mindlessly gnaw at drumsticks; the fourth, our vegetarian friend, pales before a plateful of spaghetti with pesto sauce. The spaghetti is overcooked, but the pesto — a potent blend of basil, Romano cheese, and olive oil — is wonderfully aromatic. "Are you done?" queries the waitress. We look up and groan. We've been at the table for three hours.

Round IX: Fortunately, a lengthy and strategically placed pause ensues, during which we regain our senses. Lucky for us, too, because both desserts prove sensational. The first, and we never did quite get the name, is a multi-layered sponge cake, with a caramelly-tasting custard filling; chocolate glaze tops the cake; rum soaks it through and through. The second dessert, Italian cheese cake, is exquisite, but heavy — layers of sponge cake and fresh ricotta cheese, the whole liberally doused with Amaretto, that almond-flavored liqueur. Follow these with three cups of coffee, and follow these with a strong cigar. We sigh deeply and leave the restaurant and stagger to the waterfront to admire the Boston skyline across the harbor. We feel like we've just won a battle. Rita, you're miraculous.

Notes: Rita's Place is located at 88 Winnisimmit Road in Chelsea. Ask for directions when you call. The nine-course banquet takes place on Friday and Saturday evenings, and sometimes on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings, starting between 7 and 8 pm. Reservations, especially for Saturday night, must be made in advance (call 884-9010). The meal lasts three and a half hours and costs $18.50. Try to let the chef know about any special requests two or three days ahead of time.

OPENINGS

As You Like It-A free, outdoor, special performances of the Shakespeare comedy, by the Boston Shakespeare Company, at 8

The best walking tour of Boston is 740 feet above the ground.

That's because our whole tour of Boston begins and ends in the Hancock Tower Observatory on the 60th floor, atop the tallest building in New England.

See the most spectacular view of Boston there is, with 60 miles of breathtaking scenery. Then experience the Boston of 200 years ago through our unique multi-media exhibits. Like a photorama of Massachusetts' rich historical heritage. A show about Boston in 1775, featuring a 20-foot scale model. And a lot more.

The Observatory is open Monday through Saturday from 9am to 11pm, and Sundays from 10am till 11pm, every day except Thanksgiving and Christmas. Admission is $1.50 for adults, 75¢ for children 5 through 15. Group and Convention rates are available: call 247-1976. Our ticket office is located on St. James Avenue opposite Copley Square.

Visit the Hancock Tower Observatory. It's a walking tour of Boston that's pleasing to the eye—and easy on the feet.

DATING

UNITED SINGLES is an alternate way of meeting people. It's designed for those whose work does not allow them the time to meet people, and, who are tired of the results they have gotten from their own style of meeting people.
Our purpose is to determine your basic attitudes and refer you to people who match them. For each match selected for you, we provide a referral sheet which includes a photo and vital statistics, eliminating the cold, blind date approach. FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL 337-5608 or 426-2400.

LIMITED HAIR?

If you have a bald spot that bothers you, we can make it disappear. Permanently.

Sleight of hand? No. It's our exciting concept of creating a hair transplant specifically for you. We're Hair Unlimited. And, thanks to a pioneer in the field, we're one of the largest and oldest hair replacement companies in the country.

We call our technique artistic transplanting. Our customers call it magic. Either way, you get the most natural, carefree results possible. So good, in fact, even your mirror won't know for sure.

At Hair Unlimited, transplanting isn't the only answer, either. It's just one of a whole range of options you can choose from when selecting the solution you want to live with. In other words, we want you to be vain. We want you to know everything there is to know about hair replacement. And then we want you to consider very carefully which method is going to complement the man you are. Because it's your life, and you should have a big say in how you want to look in it.

Which brings us to a key point. All our work is done by experts. No fly-by-nights or novices for us. We employ only licensed specialists who do the most professional work done in hair replacement today. And still manage to treat you like the individual you are.

We've got a booklet that will tell you how we do it. All the tricks of our trade. Let us send it to you. Because, face it, 70 percent of our customers are men between the ages of 21-45. And, at that age, who needs bald spots?

HAIR UNLIMITED

HUB

Benihana-201 Stuart St, Boston, 542-1166. Japanese cooked at the table by knife-wielding chefs. Hibachi steaks and chicken. Full bar, moderately expensive. Hours: Daily, noon-2 and 5:30-10:30 pm; Sun 4:30-9 pm. AE, BA/V, CB, DC, MC.

Bob the Chef-604 Columbus Ave, Boston, 247-9773. Soul food eating at soul-pleasing prices. Arrive before 2 pm for eggs and grits, otherwise, settle for steaks in gravy, black-eyed peas, turnips. Don't miss out on the sweet-potato pie. Open Tues-Sat, 11 am-9 pm. No credit cards, and no liquor, but reservations are accepted.

Cafe Cybele-South Market Building, Quincy Market, Boston, 367-1324. Downstairs in the South Market, Cafe Cybele is an intimate escape from the hubbub of Faneuil Hall. The kitchen is a combination of French and North Italian: spinach turnovers, pâtés, chicken Anastasia. Prices are moderate, and the place is very small, so reservations are a good idea. Full bar. Hours: Mon-Wed, 11 am-9 pm; Thurs-Sat, 11 am-11 pm; Sun, noon-8 pm. AE, BA/V, MC.

The Chart House-Long Wharf, (next to the NE Aquarium) Boston 227-1576. Lodged in the former Gardiner Building, which was put up in the late 18th century, the Chart House has a good old American menu: beef, lobster, shrimp, with teriyaki touches. Prices are on the steep end of moderate. Hours: Mon-Fri, 4-11 pm; Sat, 4-midnight; Sun, 3-midnight. Full bar. AE, BA/V, DC, MC.

Durgin Park-30 North Market St, Boston, 227-2038. Durgin Park is an institution. Be prepared to stand in line (unless you can dine before 6), to share a table, and match wits with the grouchy waitresses, who are part of the tradition. A generous seafood plate, roast duck, and roast beef are among the specialties. Prices are moderate. Hours: Mon-Sat, 11:30-9 pm. Full bar. No credit cards, no reservations.

Harvest-44 Brattle St, Cambridge, 492-1115. The crop is continental and international, an extensive and ambitious menu, with prices to match. Duckling, tournedos au Roquefort. Full bar. Hours: Daily, 11:30 am-3 pm, and 6 pm-midnight (no dinner after 10:30 pm). Reservations are a good idea in general, although they are not accepted for dinner Fri-Sat. AE, BA/V, MC.

India Restaurant-1780 Mass. Ave, Cambridge, 354-0949. A flurry of curries: lamb, chicken, beef, seafood, and vegetarian. Full-course dinners at reasonable prices. No liquor. Hours: Daily, 5 pm-10:30 pm. AE, BA/V, MC.

Joe Tecce's-53 North Washington St, Boston, at the corner of Washington and Cooper, 523-8975. There is no sign, the upstairs bar-cum-waiting room is dimly-lit and intimate, the restaurant proper is noisy and gaudily baroque. Spaghetti aglio ed olio is for true lovers of garlic; veal scaloppini a la marsala and an unusual fettucine alfredo are other specialties. There is a full bar and homemade house wine. Hours: Mon-Sat, 5-11 pm. No credit cards, no reservations.

Joseph's-279 Dartmouth St, Boston, 266-1502. Under the aegis of the estimable Locke-Ober, Joseph's offers an elegant setting and a continental kitchen: Rack of Lamb, Sole Marguery. Expensive. Joseph's is closed on Sun, other days the hours are 11:45 am-11:00 pm. Reservations accepted. AE, BA/V, MC.

Locke-Ober-3 Winter Pl, Boston, 542-1340. For more than a century, Locke-Ober has been a bastion for local politicians and businessmen. Even today, ladies may feel more comfortable upstairs. Continental cuisine: everything is a la carte; impeccable service, expensive but not extravagant. Hours: 11 am-10 pm, daily except Suns. Full bar, reservations. AE, BA/V, MC.

Stella of Boston-74 East India Row, Boston, 227-3559. Parlate Italiano? Never mind, the menu is subtitled. Veal is a specialty: Scaloppine di vitello al Marsala, alla Zingarella, al Limone, al Francese . . . you get the idea. Hours: 11:30-midnight, every day. Full bar, moderate prices. AE/ BA/V, CB, DC, MC.

NORTH

Cahoots-815 Turnpike St, (Rte 114) No Andover, 685-2732. Steaks, seafood, and spinach salad are specialties. It's all lively and casual. Full bar. No reservations. Hours: Mon-Sat, 11:30 am-1 am; Sun, 5 pm-midnight. AE, BA/V, DC, MC.

Captain Courageous-25 Rogers St, Gloucester, 283-0007. Eat fish, while you look out across the boats they arrived in. Also steaks and chops. Fully licensed. Hours: Daily until 10, until 11 weekends. Reservations are accepted. AE, BA/V, DC, MC.

Century House-235 Andover St, (Rte 114), Peabody, 531-1410. American cooking: Lobster pie, roast duckling Cumberland, twin lobster dinner. Full liquor license. Hours: Mon-Sat, 11:30 am-10 pm; Sun, noon-9 pm. AE, BA/V, CB, DC, MC.

The Easterly Restaurant-87 Atlantic Rd, Gloucester. American and Continental cuisine, with New England specialties, and food for your eyes, too: a terrific ocean view. Full bar. Hours: Sun-Thurs, 11:30 am-10 pm; Fri-Sat, until 11 pm. AE, BA/V, MC.

Herdcover-15A Newbury St, Danvers, 774-1223. American favorites like sirloin and shrimp, accented with French touches like crepes. Moderate prices. Full bar. No reservations Fri-Sat. Hours: Mon-Thurs, 5 pm-10 pm; Fri-Sat, until 11 pm; Sun, 4 pm-9 pm (5-10 in the summer). AE, MC.

Labadini's-165 State St, Newburyport, 465-9842. Small and informal, this family-owned eatery offers steaks, chops seafood, and Italian specialities, at moderate prices. Full bar. Hours: Mon-Sat, 11:30 am-10 pm; Suns and holidays, 4 pm-10. No credit cards.

The Lyceum Restaurant-43 Church St, Salem, 745-7665. The Lyceum is housed in the building in which Alexander Graham Bell made the first public demonstration of the Telephone. The menu is extensive and continental: cuisses de grenouille Provencal, veal Zurichoise, duckling a la Montmorency flambe. The prices are moderate, and there is a full bar. Hours: Daily, from 11 am until after 10 pm. Reservations are recommended Fri-Sat evenings, and for Sun brunch. BA/V, MC, house charge.

Proctor House-373 Lowell St, Peabody, 531-1598. In 18th-century surroundings, the menu is Yankee con brio, American and Italian specialties. Moderate prices, full bar. Hours: 11:30 am-10 pm, til 11 Fri-Sat AE, BA/V, CB, DC, MC.

Rosalie's-18 Seward St, Marblehead, 631-9888. The cucina here is North Italian, the surroundings warmly Victorian. Veal Sorrentino, shrimp Luciana. Open daily, 11:45-2:30, and 5:30-10 pm. Reservations are advised for dinner. Fully licensed, no credit cards.

Woodman's-121 Main St, Essex, 768-6451. Highly informal, this place is seafood city. Clams, scallops, sole, shrimp, lobster: an ocean of fish. It's inexpensive, and crowded. Full bar, but no credit cards, and no reservations. Hours: Daily, 11 am-10 pm.

WEST

Cafe l'Orange-Thoreau St, Concord, 369-8700. Upstairs in the Concord Depot, the Cafe is low-key, contemporary, and the cuisine is French: boneless rack of lamb, coquilles St. Jacques, duckling. Prices are moderate, reservations are accepted. Fully licensed. Hours: Mon-Sat, 11:30 am-2:30 pm, and 6-9. ('til 10 pm Fri-Sat), closed Suns. AE, MC.

The Every Day Gourmet-Mill & Speen Sts, Natick, 653-8011. Not quite everyday, actually, it's only open on weekends. The menu from this teaching kitchen changes all the time. Make reservations, and bring your own things to drink. Hours: Fri-Sat, noon-3 pm, Sun, 10 am-2 pm. No credit cards.

Legal Seafoods-Rte 9, in the Chestnut Hill Shopping Centre, 277-7300. Legal's outpost on the western front is sometimes less hectic than the Cambridge branch, especially if you are willing to eat early or late. Otherwise, the set-up is pretty much the same: the crowds, crowds, crowds are offset by the fish, fish, fish. Reservations for large parties. Full bar. Hours: Mon-Sat, 11 am-9 pm; Sun, 1-9 pm. AE, and personal checks.

Longfellow's Wayside Inn-Rte 20, S. Sudbury, 443-8846. Both the Inn and its kitchen are faithfully and sturdily Yankee. Hot corn muffins are a stand-by. Among the other favorites: Massachusetts duckling, lobster, baked stuffed shrimp. Open every day, 11:30-3:30, and 5:30-9. Suns, 12 noon-8 pm. The premises are fully licensed and reservations are strongly advised. AE, BA/V, DC, MC.

Old Mill-Rte 2A, Westminster, 874-5941. Down by the old mill stream, and waterfall, a traditional setting for traditional dining. Duckling, prime rib, baked stuffed shrimp. Full bar. Open daily, 8:30 am-10 pm. AE, BA/V, CB, DC, MC.

Peking Garden-27 Waltham St, Lexington, 862-1051. Sino-American egg rolls and chow mein for the bashful, and a host of Szechuan, Mandarin, and Shanghai specialties for the initiate. A range of prices: House Special Duck tops the bill at $9. Full bar. Reservations are accepted for parties of eight or more. Open Sun-Thurs, 11:30 am-10 pm; Fri-Sat, 'til 11 pm. AE, DC, MC.

La Petite Auberge-4 Waltham St, Maynard, 897-2850. Hearty French country cooking. Some of the features of the menu are snails in garlic, cassoulet, filet mignon. There is a full bar and an exceptional wine card. Open daily, 11:30 am-9 pm, 'til 10 pm Sat-Sun, when reservations are a must. No credit cards, but personal checks are accepted.

The William Paul House-Reservoir St (Rte 31) Holden, 829-6666. The specialty of the House is seafood, with a continental accent: baked stuffed filet of sole, seafood Mornay. Moderate prices, full bar. Hours: Tues-Sat, 5-10 pm, Sun, noon-8 pm. AE, BA/V, MC.

Yangtze River Restaurant-25 Depot Sq, Lexington Center, 861-6031. Mandarin-Szechuan with Polynesian things as well: Gai-Har-Lo-Mein, Shrimp Almond Ding, Blessed Family Happiness. More happiness: everything is nicely explained on the menu, which is long. Full bar. Hours: Sun-Thurs, 11:30 am-9:30 pm; Fri-Sat, until 10:30 pm. AE, BA/V, MC.

SOUTH

Barnside Tavern-Assinippi Corners, Rte 3, Hanover, 878-9814. Sprawling and always crowded, it's Americana from the word go: prime rib and shrimp are among the favorites. Salad and dessert bars. Fully licensed. Open daily from 11:30 am-10 pm, 1 pm-9 pm on Sun. AE, BA/V, DC, MC.

Ben White's-31 Providence Highway (Rte 1), Norwood, 762-6740. Elegantly continental, with a greenhouse to enjoy along with things like chicken Jerusalem, veal Viennoise, and a full range of potables. Hours: Mon-Fri, 11:30 am-9:45 pm; Sat, 5:30 pm-10:45 pm, Sun, noon-9 pm. AE, BA/V, MC.

Casa Berrini-Main St, Marshfield, 834-8765. Continental embellishments on a traditional menu: veal, prime rib, seafood, and Salad Gazebo. Moderate prices, full bar. Open daily except Mon, 11 am-1 am. AE, BA/V, CB, DC, MC.

Christo's-782 Crescent St, Brockton, 588-4200. Huge and crowded and Greco-American: Moussaka and kebabs accent steaks and chops. Efficient service, inexpensive. Full bar. No reservations or credit cards. Hours: Mon-Sat 11 am-12:30, Sun from 12:30 pm-12:30 am.

The Country Fare-1217 Main St, Hingham, 749-2260. Wildlife from land and sea among the entrees. King Crab casserole, roast duck. Moderately expensive. The premises are fully licensed, and reservations are recommended. Hours: Tues-Sat, 11:30 am-9 pm; Sun, 11:30 am-8 pm. AE, BA/V, DC, MC.

Inn For All Seasons-32 Barker Rd, Scituate Harbor, 545-6699. Imaginative continental menu, topped off with special desserts, like three-layer chocolate cake and Linzertorte. Entrees include chicken Kiev, veal Oscar, and individual beef Wellington. Moderately expensive. Fully licensed. Closed on Mons, otherwise, the hours are noon-2 pm, and 5-10 pm. Sun brunch 11 am-2 pm. Reservations. MC.

Ronnie's Kosher Restaurant-1179 N Main, Randolph, 986-6743. Strictly Kosher, all the food is made on the premises under rabbinical supervision. Roast brisket, kreplach soup, and stuffed chicken are a few of the favorites. No liquor. Hours: Sun-Thurs, 8 am-11 am, noon-4 pm, and 5-9 pm. Fri: 8 am-5 pm. Sat: 5-9 pm. BA/V, MC.

Tinker's Dam-Rte 139, Pembroke, 826-5748. Cozy, candlelit dining in the upstairs dining room. A glowing pine bar provides a full range of drinks to complement a menu that is basically Continental: veal Oscar, beef Wellington. The prices are moderate. Open 11:30-2:30, Mon-Fri, and 6-10 pm Tues-Sun. Reservations for large groups only, eight or more. BA/V, DC, MC.

So It Is Written
By Don Rubin

Several weeks ago, we dispatched one of our ace reporters to cover the events now taking place in the Middle East.

"Write us a letter when you get there," we said, "and let us know if there's anything you'll need (besides additional money) to make the job easier."

Well, we got the letter all right. And, while no one at the office doubts for a minute that it's beautifully written, none of us has the foggiest idea of what it says.

People who read this language claim it's nothing but gibberish — perfectly typewritten, perhaps, but entirely incomprehensible. Our correspondent doesn't speak a word of Hebrew. We leave the deciphering up to you.

DO YOU HAVE THE YEN FOR A NEW STEREO?

The majority of hi-fi components, especially receivers and turntables, are manufactured in Japan. Unfortunately, the value of the American dollar versus the Japanese yen has been rapidly decreasing. Substantial price hikes are expected shortly from most of the Japanese manufacturers. Many of these price increases will occur immediately without the usual 30 day price change notice. In the interest of saving you money, the K&L Bomber strongly recommends that you purchase your equipment NOW . . . before the price increases get out of hand.

Expect taxes to go up $6

By ELIZABETH McKINNON
of the Graphic staff

On the basis of the state debits and credits for Newton, preliminary estimates of the tax rate increase to be expected for fiscal year 1979 hover around the $6 -per-thousand mark.

The tax rate now is $166.20.

Before the8tax new rate can be set, the city must know how much to set aside for collective bargaining and other expenses that could not be included in the budget. The tax rate will be set in early September.

The state "cherry sheet," issued last week, puts Newton's ledger in the black again this year, with a net increase in money coming from the state of $759,8460 last year.

The total in black ink for fiscal 1979 will be $1,144,921, resulting from a total bill for services from the state of $8,060,885 and state reimbursements and funds distributions amounting to $9,205,806.

The major change in state assessments against the city was state assumption of court costs, which spreads the expense over the entire state. That action knocked off more than $1 million from Newton's assessment for Middlesex County government.

State aid to education gave Newton $321,000 more this year than last year, but there was a cut in Metco funding from $851,163 to $786,772.

The total cost to Newton for being a part of Massachusetts has risen 6.3 percent.

The cherry sheet figures are only an estimate and may change over the next year. Last year Newton seemed to owe the state $146,8580 when the cherry sheet was issued, but later adjustments wiped out the deficit and put Newton $385,461 to the good. Chief Assessor Leonard Aronson estimates that new construction and equalization of commercial and industrial properties' real estate taxes over the past year have added $9.7 million to the tax base.

At the current tax rate the new assessment means about $4.50 on the tax rate that does not have to be raised by present homeowners.

Underwood gears up for public hearing

By RICHARD WILLIAMS
of the Graphic staff

Underwood School supporters are preparing for a public hearing set Aug. 28 to convince the Board of Aldermen to pass a $1 million bond issue to renovate the school.

The aldermen appeared to have enough votes Monday night to approve the renovation, but Ald. Donald Budge objected to voting that night and used the "charter objection" provision in the City Charter to delay it until the next Board meeting.

Ald. Richard McGrath, chairman of the Public Facilities Committee, told the aldermen they had already the bond issue when they approved the $50,000 for architectural fees in April.

Ald. Budge said he "chartered" the bond issue to allow for the public hearing requested by members of Newton Citizens for Neighborhood Schools.

Budge is from Newton Lower Falls where Hamilton School was closed by the School Committee due to declin ing enrollment. He supports the citizen petition which asks the aldermen to delay a vote on Underwood until the School Committee explains how the spending of $1.05 million for Underwood relates to the expected $300,000 a year savings by closing two neighborhood schools.

Aldermanic Finance Committee Chairman Edward Richmond said if the final contracts for the renovation are not signed by Nov. 10, the project will be delayed six month at a cost of $50,000.

The history of the Underwood School renovation goes back 10 years, when it was considered for improvement with the Davis and Lincoln-Eliot schools.

It was separated from those plans, and while new plans were continually being revised, it was not included in the Nine Schools Study that spelled out the needs of the older schools.

After each year of delay, the addition to the school shrunk as the enrollment did, and now plans call for only renovation and site improvement.

Ald. Rodney Barker said he started out skeptical of whether these improvements were needed, and whether the school could be closed in the future.

After speaking with members of the School Department and School Committee, and after visiting the school, he is convinced that the neighborhood has a stable school-age population, that the improvements are needed, and that the students could not fit into adjacent schools.

The Board of Aldermen will vote on the $1.05 million bond issue at its next regular meeting Sept. 5, unless seven aldermen petition for an earlier special meeting, possibly immediately after the public hearing.

Thompsonville wants general area clean-up

By LINDA FRITZ
Graphic Correspondent

Unable to muster a quorum, the Thompsonville Advisory Committee discussed public improvement projects, narrowing its list for its community development program to four areas of top priority.

One area labeled as "most important" is landscaping the Thompsonville commercial district at Langley Road and Route 9. Improvements in this area will include the traffic island known as Veterans' Park.

Although the park is now being cared for by the city, committee member Kenneth Temkin said it is important to improve it. If the village does not fix it up, it will be taken from the village by the state, which owns Route 9, he said.

Sidewalks and curbing for Jackson Street, Langley Road, and for Cypress Street to the Bowen School rated a high priority mark. A one-lane road for Beecher Terrace and street

Sidney Hill townhouse plan unveiled

By LINDA FRITZ
Graphic Correspondent

Will Spezzano Farm, adjacent to the Sidney Hill property, become a town complex? house

If any one of the prelimary plans presented by Development Group to the Conservation Commission last week is approved, the property will become a multifamily complex. One plan being considered is a mid-rise apartment of four to eight stories. More serious consideration is being given to developing a townhouse complex of either 118 or 122 units, that is 55 to 60 buildings.

The Massachusetts Department of Food and Agriculture (MDFA) would like the property remain as a farm, said MDFA respresentative Matt Barron said. Currently MDFA is working on rules and regulations to preserve farmlands in the state through a financial assistance program, he said.

The program would pay a farm owner the difference between a developer's purchase offer and the worth of the property as farmland Barron said. If the owner wishes to sell the property, the board running the program would also find a farmer to buy the land, he said.

Off to the races

Absence of incumbent creates interesting rep race

By CYNTHIA BLACK
of the Graphic staff

Absence of an incumbent often makes for a more interesting race, and the 11th Middlesex District Democratic primary is no exception.

The new district, encompassing Newton Corner, the eastern portions of Newtonville, Newton Centre, Chestnut Hill and Waban, is giving Democrats something to think about as primary day approaches.

The seat vacated by Lois Pines has attracted a Newton alderman, a Chestnut Hill environmental attorney, and a former legislative and congressional aide.

The fourth candidate in the race ran against Rep. Pines and has also been an unsuccessful candidate for alderman.

The candidates are: Ald. David Cohen, Ward 7 ward alderman serving his fourth term; R. Lisle Baker of Chestnut Hill, an attorney who teaches environmental law at Suffolk University; Paul Kelley of Newton Centre, a recent law school graduate and former aide to Congressman Ed Markey; and Letitia Angelone of Thompsonville, a candidate in a succession of recent local elections.

Spreading the gospel of a candidacy requires a round of parties, handshaking at bus stops, and door-to-door appearances, all with one goal in mind, name recognition.

It will surprise no one to learn that taxes rank first among voter concerns. Has there ever been an election when they haven't been?

But other interests emerge when candidates are questioned by district residents in the well-educated, upper-crust 11th Middlesex District.

They are civil service reform, nuclear power, the safety of the environment and human and social issues.

The candidates themselves are generating interest in reform of the House rules that, if passed, would divest the speaker of the house of some of his power.

Each man, while addressing the same issues and taking quite similar positions, has some ideas unique to him.

Speaking at a house party in Waban before a group of about 25 people, including two area aldermen, Rodney Barker and Susan Schur, Baker threw out some ideas on reform of the state budget and, when asked, gave an intelligent, well-informed response to his position on nuclear power.

Originally from Kentucky, Baker discussed the concept of a biennial budget, common in Midwestern states. It was presented as an idea, not as a campaign position, but he said he feels too much of the State Legislature's time is taken up each year bogged down in the state budget.

He mentioned the "eleventh hour" marathon sessions legislators find themselves in trying to get the budget

Conservation Commission in favor of acquisition of country club land

By LINDA FRITZ
Graphic Correspondent

With some reservations, the Conservation Commission supported last week a neighborhood effort to urge the city to apply for state self help funding for purchasing the Chestnut Hill Country Club.

The country club has already signed a purchase and sales agreement with Carabetta Enterprises, which intends to build 420 apartment units and 30 townhouse units on a portion of the land. The remaining acreage is planned for a nine-hole golf course. The final sale of the club is contingent on the developer obtaining a special permit and the necessary zone change.

Although Carabetta only plans to develop 10 of the 81.5 acres, the neighborhood residents are dissatisfied. "We want to preserve the open space in Newton, said Beatrice Garber from the neighborhood's Newton Commonwealth Association. "We have a lot invested in our beautiful . homes," she added.

The residents of the neighborhood want to help the city apply this September for state funds from the Urban Self Help Program, said Sarah Peskin, planning consultant for the association. Now is the best time to apply, she said. Area residents are willing to raise the money for the appraisal fee, Ms. Peskin said.

The application must be prepared by the Planning Department, commission Secretary Helen Heyn said. The department is already overburdened working on the open space plan, which must also be completed in September, she said. It is not too early to begin working on the application for the next round of funding in the Self Help Program, Mrs. Heyn said.

There is a backlog of other property that the commission has had on its acquisition list for a long time, Commissioner Thelma Fleishman said. These must have first priority to purchasing the club, she said.

The commission supports the city's purchasing the land with help from state funds' Chairman Dennis L. Ditelberg said. Only as a last resort would it support the city buying it without this financial assistance, he added. Before that decision is made, Ditelberg said, the city must explore Carabetta's plans.

Carabetta is willing to discuss placing some kind of restrictions on the acres he will not use in his development project, the developer's attorney Howard Levine said. "He (Carabetta) is amenable to all types of restrictions and and preservation of the rest of the land," he said.

The developer is still have his traffic engineering work done to solve the entrance and exit problems from the project, Levine said. As part of the work, a study is being made to determine what would be the traffic impact if the land were to be made a park or a public playground, Levine said. Both types of facilities have been mentioned as possible uses for the land if the city were to purchase the club.

420 apartments, 30 houses proposed for country club land

Carabetta Enterprises, developers of a 428-unit apartment complex at Hammond Pond Parkway and Route 9, has made public its plans for 420 apartments and 30 townhouses on the site of the Chestnut Hill Country Club on Algonquin Road.

Carabetta has entered into a purchase agreement. to buy the 81.5-acre property. Carabetta says that he will use only 10 acres of the property, which now is occupied by the clubhouse, a pool, tennis courts an 18-hole golf course' and a parking lot.

The club and a nine-hole golf course would be allowed to continue for 15 years, after which time the golf course would be permanent open space along with some other sections of the property that would be kept as permanent open space.

The apartment building will be Y-shaped, with two segments of the building 12 stories high and the other 14. The building is to be located at the eastern end of the land, near the Boston line.

The8townhouses, to be marketed as condominiums, are to be located south of the apartment building, close to Commonwealth Avenue.

New roads to be constructed include one over the city-owned Cochituate Aqueduct leading to Commonwealth Avenue, one leading to Kenrick Street, and possibly one leading to Undine Road, Brighton.

Howard Levine, lawyer for Carabetta, said the organization is prepared to deed some of the land to the city as conservation land, including the area around Strong's Pond.

The property needs a zone change by the Board of Aldermen as well as a special permit. The land is now in Residence B district, which is limited to single-family houses on 15,000 square feet of land.

If the entire parcel were to be developed, more than 150 single-family houses could be built without permission.

A neighborhood association has hired former alderman Eliot Cohen to represent residents of the area in their dealings with Carabetta. He was chairman of the Land Use Committee.

Levine was until early this year Newton's city solicitor who looked after the city's legal interests.

Halfway house gets Board OK

Ald. Joseph McDonnell Monday night accused the state Department of Mental Health of trying to "circumvent local zoning laws" in its effort to establish halfway houses for mental patients under the guise of educational purposes.

Despite McDonnell's charge and further argument that halfway houses should require a special permit (permissive use) instead of site plan approval, the Board approved Alternative Home Inc.'s proposal for a residence for nine persons at 459 Auburn St., Auburndale.

Questions as to the educational purpose of the house, to be occupied by eight persons returning to society after hospitalization and one live-in counselor , were apparently answered to the satisfaction of the Land Use Committee within the past two weeks.

McDonnell disputed the claims of the state Department of Mental Health that the primary purpose of the halfway houses being established is educational.

He said that according to his information, some of the residents are chronically depressed or schizophrenic and all are in the custody of the DMH and receiving treatment.

The halfway houses are designed to "normalize" formerly hospitalized persons, Land Use Committee Chairman Terry Morris explained. In some cases normalization entails re-teaching of everyday skills. in a homelike community setting.

McDonnell believes that the DMH is designating these halfway houses as "educational" because local governing bodies would not readily grant special permits for such residences. Educational uses are exempt from zoning laws and may be controlled only by site plan approval, which usually is applied to parking, lights, noise, and so on, that might disturb the neighborhood.

An effort to have the petition returned to the Land Use Committee brought on a defense of the committee by Ald. Cynthia Creem.

"You're saying we didn't do our job," Creem said. "We did a good job. Stop sending things back to committee!"

The recommittal failed on a 5-14 vote.

Site plan approval for the house passed on a 23-1 vote, with Ald. Wendell Bauckman opposed.

Adults may again enroll in high school courses

The opening of school on Sept. 7, mark the second year in which the Newton public schools will be offering adult Newton residents the opportunity to enroll in courses offered during the first semester at Newton North and Newton South high schools.

Last year 23 adults at North and 13 at South enrolled in courses that ranged from languages to the sciences, from typing and shorthand to music appreciation, from fabrics and ceramics to counseling skills.

Brochures describing specific courses and containing application forms will be available in mid-August at the Education Center, 100 Walnut St., Newtonville; the Community School office, City Hall; and at each of the branch libraries.

Brochures will also be available in late August at the principal's office at South High, and soon after Sept. 1 from Gail Stein's office in Barry House at Newton North High School.

Adults who enroll are expected to attend all classes as regular class members, provide any expendable materials required (textbooks will be loaned by the school), and dress appropriately for any physical education courses.

There will be no tuition charge for these courses, and adults will be admitted as long as space remains available.

5% raise for city workers

Newton's labor force Monday ratified a two-year contract giving workers a 5 percent increase each year and a substantial boost in benefits. The vote was 216-61.

The settlement of a new contract came only slightly more than two months after the expiration of the old contract. In other years negotiations have taken as long as a full to year to conclude8. and once resulted in a strike.

The agreement with Local 800 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, which represents the labor forces of the Public Works, Water & Sewer, and Recreation departments, will set the standard for bargaining units for other city employees.

The salary and benefits package is estimated to cost the city $300,000 the first year.

The 5 percent increase will mean $503.75 more a year in the pocket of the lowest-grade laborer, who now makes $10,075 annually.

For those employees who have stuck with the city for 20 years, in addition to the salary increase there will be longevity pay of $500; for 10 years' service the bonus will be $275.

ClOthing allowanceS will increase from $55 a year to $80 this year and $100 in 1979.

Night-shift differential goes up from the current 15 cents an hour for the 4 p.m. to midnight shift to 25 cents ; in the second year of the contract, the differential will be 30 cents an hour.

A new provision gives workers three days' leave for a death in the family. This funeral leave will no longer be taken from their 15 days sick leave.

Register for Weeks

Students new to Weeks Junior High School who have not registered are asked to call the guidance office, 552-7582, for an appointment.

Registration will take place Tuesday through Friday, Sept. 5-8. The student, accompanied by his or her parents, should bring a transfer card and a transcript from the previous school.

Gasoline, carpeting, and riding saddle missing

Ninety-two gallons of gasoline, 24 square yards of carpeting, and an English riding saddle were among things reported stolen to police during the week.

A Boston man reported to police Friday that while his car was parked at the Chestnut Hill Mall that afternoon, an English riding saddle worth $250, black boots, a leather gag, and assorted jewelry worth $1800 was taken from his car.

Sometime over the weekend 92 gallons of gasoline were siphoned from three trucks parked at the National Bisquit Co., 241 Riverview Ave., Auburndale. The gas was worth $65.

Monday night employees of the Oakley Spa, 977 Washington St., Newtonville, reported the theft of 24 square yards of gold nylon carpeting that was beside the building ready to be installed, police said.

In Auburndale on Monday night a woman from Marlborough had her purse and bag taken while staying at a house on Melrose Avenue. Police said the woman's canvas bag with $120 in it was taken by someone who raised a window and pulled it off a table.

A man from Intervale Road, Chestnut Hill, had a $350 stereo set, a cassette player, assorted jewelry, and silverware taken from his house between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. Monday.

Intruders took two television sets and a silver serving set from a home on Hobart Road, Newton Centre, police found out Saturday. Some silverware was found next to the house.

Charges against father for kidnapping son dropped

Albert Levitt, 54, of Oak Hill Park had kidnapping charges against him dropped Tuesday in Newton District Court after his son asked Judge Monte Basbas to dismiss the charges.

After the brief hearing Tuesday morning Kenneth Levitt, 25, immediately embraced his mother in the courtroom, and then left the courthouse holding hands with his wife.

Kenneth Levitt pressed charges against his father on June 5 shortly after he escaped from a two-week deprogramming episode that took him to a Jewish camp in New York State.

The young Levitt was the only person to take the stand in the probable cause hearing.

He said there had been an agreement reached that included an acknowledgment of the facts, and that he did not wish to testify and press charges.

Lawyer Richard Steinberg, representing the father, said an agreement was reached Tuesday morning.

"The differences in the family have been resolved, and they will be reconciled after this," Steinberg said.

Herman Tarnow, a New York City lawyer who came up with the son Monday night, said after the dismissal that Kenneth still believes in Jews for Jesus, a religious sect that involves a ministry but not church buildings or communal living.

Tarnow, who has served as counsel for other cases involving Jews for Jesus, said this is the first time he has seen a resolution "coming from love."

Tarnow said the agreement to drop charges was reached with the cooperation of Assistant District Attorney Elizabeth Fahey and Steinberg.

Steinberg said in court that both parties acknowledged that "this was not a fantasy or a thing which he made up," referring to the two weeks after Levitt was kidnapped on May 18.

Kenneth Levitt told police after he escaped from Camp Emunah in Greenfield, N.Y., that he had been harassed and deprived sleep and food while being told to change his religious beliefs.

Levitt was also tied up in a house believed to be in Brookline, and transported to New York City before being taken to the camp.

According to Tarnow, Levitt will return to his present address on Haight Street, San Francisco, for a while, and then he hopes to attend trade school.

Kenneth Levitt was first reported missing to Newton police by his fiance, Christine Cox, on May 19, the day they were supposed to be married.

Police investigated and found out that Levitt's car was parked at Logan Airport, and the parents said they had heard from him.

It was not until Levitt escaped that police knew of the kidnapping.

Levitt and Cox were married the day after his escape in New York.

Earlier there was speculation Levitt's parents objected to him marrying a Christian, but Tarnow said the family incident was not set off by the marriage intentions.

Probable cause found in horse death case

An out-of-district judge found sufficient cause to issue a complaint of beating a horse against Newton Police Officer Edward Woloski in Newton District Court last week.

Woloski did not enter a plea after the closed show-cause hearing Thursday before Judge Andrew Meyer, who is assigned to Newburyport District Court.

Woloski's arraignment and trial is scheduled for Sept. 8 at 11 a.m. in Newton District Court.

Two officers from the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (MSPCA), Lt. Charles Contos and Officer Frank Martin, were apparently the main witnesses in the hour-long hearing regarding the horse that died on River Street, West Newton.

The only other person called in to testify was Luis Domingo Rodriguez of Newton, who stayed in the courtroom about 15 minutes.

According to Capt. John Bartinelli, head of the Operations Bureau, the Police Department's own investigation has revealed that Officer Woloski did take the horse he rented on July 9 into the guard room at the station before it collapsed on River Street in West Newton. . Chief William Quinn said after the hearing that "We see some violations of the rules" of the department, but said he has turned the case over to the City Solictor Daniel Funk for advice before taking any disciplinary action.

Funk said Tuesday he would probably recommend no action until the court case is complete.

Woloski and four other persons rented five horses on July 9 that were delivered to his home by Ellendale Stables in Sherborn.

Dale Pearman, owner of the stables, was in the second-floor courtroom hallway waiting to testify, but never was called.

Pearman said he has horses in Newton almost every day, and never in his 17 years at the stables has anything like this happened.

The other four horses rented during the 90-degree heat of July 9 were returned in good health.

Mrs. Heckler's steady diet

Congresswoman Margaret M. Heckler spends a substantial portion of her time working for the passage of the Equal Rights Amendment and trying to persuade Americans to eat what is good for them even though many of her constituents prefer to eat what they like, not what Mrs. Heckler things is best for them.

To a degree Mrs. Heckler is a woman's congresswoman despite her efforts to play no favorites and to provide equal service for her male constituents, most of whom indicate they have no complaints.

But Mrs. Heckler is a woman — the only woman member of the Massachusetts delegation in Congress. She also is a member of the congressional subcommittee on nutrition, and she expends a good deal of energy in her efforts to make that subcommittee an effective working group.

Mrs. Heckler says that too many Americans shorten their lives by their eating habits. She would like to show them how to live long, something many Americans would just as soon not have shown to them. They would prefer to go on eating themselves to death. Margaret Heckler is trying to save them from themselves. That is not always and easy or rewarding undertaking.

Mrs. Heckler recognizes that the lobbies for food producers such as the cattlemen, in many instances, are working at cross purposes with her. Their objective is to sell their products and make as much money as possible, not make Americans live longer.

Many Americans believe that beef is the most nutritious food available to them and eat as much of it as they can afford to buy. Mrs. Heckler declares that some beef on a diet is good but that too much is not.

She asserts that the lobbyists and press agents for the cattlemen, who want to sell their herds for high prices, go to great lengths to conceal the fat content of beef.

Millions of American believe the way to start the day is with a hearty breakfast of ham and eggs or bacon and eggs or sausaqes and eggs. Congresswoman Heckler is not one of them.

She says that an occasional egg is a good thing on most diets, but that a couple of eggs a day are not healthy. Disillusioning as it may be, it seems that the poultry and egg industry spend millions of dollars every year promoting their products and concealing the high cholesterol contents of eggs.

Congressmen from the cattle-raising states support bills designed to help their wealthy constituents sell more steers. Congressmen from the poultry-raising, egg-producing states sponsor and back bills intended to help their constituents sell more eggs.

Congresswoman Margaret Heckler is a lonely voice crying out for the average American who is eating the wrong things.

New Board of Aldermen one of shifting moods

By Edward Richmond

"Board watching" is the favorite parlor game of the Newton politicalcogniscenti. But those who have watched the new 1978-1979 Board, now one-quarter through its term, are having difficulty in following its shifting moods.

This Board's chief identifying characteristic is that eight aldermen, a full one-third of its membership, are freshmen. While the committee chairpersons are experienced, many of the key decisions are being voted by inexperienced aldermen due to factors such as committee alignment and membership. This is to be expected, given the large number of new members, but this factor alone has led to some floor fights and challenges of committee reports.

A second factor influencing the character of this Board is the amendment of the Rules of the Board, the principal change being the assignment of financial items to both the "substantive" committee and the Finance Committee. This change originated during the last Board and was an attempt to clip the wings of Sid Small, the former chairman of Finance who, it was believed by some, held political power out of proportion to that of the other committee chairpersons.

On balance, I believe that the new system is good for the Board, and is working well. The substantive committees, in dealing with both the substance and the financing of every item, tend to be more deliberative in their work, and the freshmen aldermen are learning their craft more swiftly then they might in past Boards. The Finance Committee has generally followed the votes of the substantive committees, but has exercised independent judgment in a number of controversial areas.

During the budget hearings, it anticipated by some aldermen that there would be a major clash between the Finance Committee and the substantive committee reports. This never developed, and the final budget reflected a composite of the views of all committees.

A third characteristic of this Board is the lack of a clear majority or voting block representing any one distinctive ideology. This is not a "liberal," "conservative" or "moderate" Board, although individual aldermen may label themselves as such. The reality is that there is perhaps a "liberal" block of some seven or eight votes, and the remaining votes are divided upon such issues as party, business orientation, ethnicity, neighborhood or local orientation, and any number of special viewpoints.

The result of this lack of clear ideology is a shifting voting pattern; many issues are in doubt until the final vote, and there have been several tie votes. It had been thought by some that the eight new Aldermen would vote as a block, but that has not been the case.

The final characteristic of this Board is the absence of the "giants" of past years. There is heated debate and the issues are thoroughly explored, but the level of eloquence, of knowledge and of passion present in the debates of prior years has been diminished.

There are those aldermen who aspire to the maycralty, but none of the aspirants has yet generated a following of any substance.

Matt Jefferson's leadership style has been steady and low key. He has been helped by the absence of any major controversial issues. The school closing issue, perhaps the most emotional issue of the year, did not directly effect the Board of Aldermen, although 11 aldermen signed a political advertisement opposed to the closing. This issue will concern the Board in the future, as decisions must be made on the ultimate use and reuse of the buildings.

In conclusion one might say that the aldermanic ship of state has completed its six month shakedown cruise relatively uneventfully, that it has not yet been tested, and that the shoals and major battles lie ahead.

Ald. Richmond is the chairman of the aldermanic Finance Committee.

Carter will regret rift with Ted, Tip

Commentary by J. J. Smith state columnist

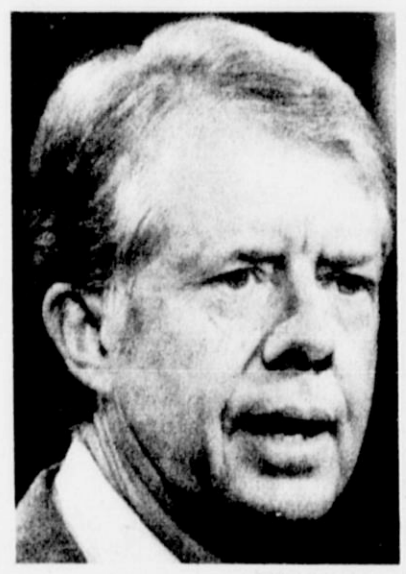

The Peanut Man decided his Numero Uno rating at the box office was in jeopardy so decided to fire a few salvos across the bow of a fast-closing competitor, The Tip & Ted Show — thereby possibly launching the final unravelling of his presidency.

In what must be the prelude to a new tough guy, I'm-my-own boss stance, Jimmy Carter authored the unprecedented, and dangerous, feat of provoking angry attacks from Tip O'Neill and Teddy Kennedy in a single day. The fact he gave the back of his hand to his top supporters in each branch of government was not lost upon the Bay State lawmakers, their friends and supporters, or, indeed, those who watch the shift and sway of power brokership at the nation's capitol.

President Carter may be an inept leader on the record, but he is not a stupid man when it comes to politics, as his single-minded and successful drive to the presidency attests for any doubters. He had to be fully aware he was venturing into political quicksand when he fired Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill's pal from the General Services Administration and rejected the national health insurance program pushed by Massachusetts senior U.S. senator.

Carter himself and some of his senior aides apparently decided the time was ripe to picture the Georgia peanut man as The Man in Washington; a time to indicate to one and all that Carter was in charge. What was overlooked, or ignored, was the fact he was dealing with two national figures powerful in their own right, who, not so incidentally, were reared and nurtured in the hurly burly of Massachusetts politics where a basic tenet is "Don't get mad, get even." Each probably will.

Rather than depicting Carter as a man marching to his own ideas of "Hail to the Chief," his latest boo-boo was classically illustrative of the political ineptitude and naivete which has characterized the Carter Administration almost from its inception. The firing of Robert Griffin as deputy GSA administrator was a gratuitous insult to O'Neill, the president's strong right arm in the House and a man who stood staunchly loyal in the face of oft-cited Carter failings in his political dealings with fellow Democrats. All of this at a critical time in the legislative year.

Carter . . . inept

Kennedy . . . not trivial

O'Neill . . . get even

Similarly, Kennedy's break with Carter cannot be regarded as trivial. It, too, erodes if not breaks support from a not inconsiderable voice in the United States Senate, and further emphasizes Carter's negativism on a subject, national health insurance, which has considerable appeal to the masses reeling under the escalating cost of health coverage.

The puzzlement to most observers is that Carter chose to act so cavalierly against two friends like O'Neill and Kennedy, at a point in time when he still appears unable to end his protracted on-the-job training in the presidency and with his administration reeling from the unfunny pratfalls of aides like Andy Young, Ham Jordan and the unlamented Midge Costanza.

It may be argued that Carter's embarrassingly low standing in the polls demanded action, ANY action, but the sceptics feel the course taken more reflective of hari-kari desperation than political statesmanship. How Carter expects to salvage his sagging fortunes by alienating a Tip O'Neill and a Ted Kennedy defies comprehension.

While Carter has tendered the olive branch to O'Neill in the form of a new job for the ousted Griffin he has little in the realm of political coin to tempt an upset Teddy Kennedy. And in the O'Neill case the job offer probably is a case of too little, too late—too little advance consideration given the Griffin ouster in the first place, and too late awareness of the bruising of O'Neill's personal trust in the president.

The bottom line remains that the inept Carter presidency managed to alienate the two most powerful men on Capitol Hill virtually in a single devastating day. If any one day conceivably could cost Carter the 1980 presidential nomination then this was it.

As a result, there are many willing to predict that the Ted & Tip Show will be a stellar box office attraction in Washington well after the Carter Follies are long gone, and unlamented.

Cherry sheet makes me 'see red'

By RICHARD BULLWINKLE

What really turns up the burners highest under my own sense of outrage is the arrogance with which certain public officials treat unsuspecting citizens.

The most recent "con game" was the highly publicized mass media event staged by Gov. Mike Dukakis in handing over large amounts of state aid to assist beleaguered Massachusetts taxpayers.

A funny thing happened in Newton though when the tax present was opened. The $2 million increase in aid rapidly melted to something over $700,000 net, which represents a potential tax reduction of about $2 on the tax rate.

The governor forgot to tell the gathering of happy municipal types that the assessments to MDC, the MBTA, county government and state hospitals had to be netted against those total revenues.

Newton is the eighth largest city in the Commonwealth, but the return to Newton of state aid puts it somewhere at the bottom of the 39 cities in the state.

Newton next year will get the lowest category of state aid because the formulas treat Newton taxpayers as well off.

What about Newton's elderly, retired and those treading water to hang on?

What about Newton's nonaffluent working people who are struggling to maintain some kind of equilibrium in the face of inflation, working two jobs, and what about increased taxation on all levels?

It seems to me that the less wealthy in Newton should be treated no less fairly than those in Boston (which received an additional $62 million) or anywhere else for that matter.

I suspect that these formulas are unconstitutional and would not be surprised if a class action suit were brought.

BULL'S-EYE

But the biggest ripoff is who is or isn't paying taxes. When a state representative has to go to court to force the governor's representative to release public tax records, the millenium has arrived.

After wading through the chaff of recently paid bills, contested collections and differences of what or how much is taxable, the bottom line says the restaurant business kept citizens' taxes from the state and utilized them for its own purposes.

And this is only one of 20 taxes.

I do not believe the governor has faced this issue squarely yet..

If the above were not distressing enough, the state Senate, with abdicated "King" Kevin at the controls, does a final act of plunder that takes the cake for sheer effrontery. They do not believe anyone will notice nor complain and they proceed apace.

Each of the aides, counsels and staff of the Senate have received substantial raises in an action still before the Senate ways and means committee (still chaired by the soon-to-depart Sen. Kelly).

The problem is that there are some very deserving individuals along with some not so deserving, but in this budget item they are all treated the same.

It seems that whenever city workers, firefighters or police come to the bargaining table for their 4 percent to 7 percent raises at lower levels, municipal managers scowl, force arbitration procedures and use a press attack to explain how they are trying to save citizens tax money.

Yet these same penurious individuals find nothing amiss when they approve 9-12 percent raises in the $25,000 range for upper level administrators and appointees.

I wonder if Kevin Harrington's sister's job at $21,000-plus rates with a state policeman's job the governor doesn't believe is worth $16,000. We pay for both.

Traffic light needed

To the Editor:

Before someone gets hurt or killed, a traffic light should be at the intersection of Dedham and Parker streets.

Some two years ago, I wrote to the Traffic Department at City Hall and the reply was a post card telling me of a meeting. Except for the postal department, I don't know what else was helped by that answer.

Last week I was at City Hall, so I went to the Planning Department to get some facts and figures.

I have at home a copy of the information now at City Hall. In August, 1962 (note the date) a report to the Newton Traffic Commission about installation of a fixed time signal at the intersection of Parker and Dedham streets was sent to that Traffic Commission.

The report noted three accidents, two of which may have been prevented by signals. Although a fixed time signal wis not warranted, it said, a semi-actuated traffic signal should be installed at this location.

I don't know what held up this action. At that time a signal was advised for the intersection. Today, with so many more autos using the area for a short shortcut from West Roxbury to wherever, or reverse, I would imagine a signal would now be more sorely needed than at that in 1962.

I was told the aldermen held up action 15 years ago. I don't know who the aldermen were then, and I don't know who they are today. But these men should certainly be of a mind to help prevent trouble at this intersection.

For my part, I intend to pursue this until maybe we can get some adequate attention paid to this area. It would be a small amount to pay for a life or a limb.

I have prepared a petition which I shall bring around to get signatures to send to the aldermen so they can see who is in favor of erecting a light there.

Last winter, during that terrible snowstorm, the plows put the snow on the little island in the intersection. They also put snow on the walks on either side of the intersection.

Why they didn't put the snow on the other side of the street, which is empty land, I'll never figure out. It is tough enough to try to cross this spot, but with the snow to foul you up, it was a feat to get through. Ask the people in the area who had to do this daily.

Press taking pot shots at CETA

To the Editor:

Taking pot shots at the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) and its failings is becoming the common subject of the press from local papers, to the Boston dailies , to such prominient periodicals as Business Week and Reader's Digest.

To deny that CETA has its share of failures would be foolish. Any program that expands from an already overworked system serving 300,000 people nationally to a program serving 700,000 in eight and a half months must surely have its faults.

Why do these failures occur?

Because the federal government, which provides the guidelines, as well as the funds, is notoriously late in handing down either, putting all CETA consortiums in the position . of having to produce sophisticated programs to serve people with severe and long-standing unemployment problems on a crash basis.

One case in point occurred last summer when Newton Area CETA was required to choose all of its public service employment projects and to hire at least 70 percent of the employees in five months.

In all, about 65 projects were funded totaling close to $10 million, 90 percent of which went for wages. To date, only two of these projects have received adverse publicity.

In addition to the projects, the 10 communities in the Newton consortium have used many CETA people in individual positions. On Feb. 28, Newton Area CETA was congratulated by the Office of Economic Affairs for having on board a total of 1241 people in both individual and project public service positions.

Since the beginning of the fiscal year, Oct. 1, 162 adults and 239 youths have also received work experiences through CETA, 271 have participated in training programs, 101 in special youth programs, and 700 young people are presently enrolled in the summer program. Ninety percent of the people served are economically disadvantaged. Each week CETA processes an average of 85 new applicants.

It should also be noted that a substantial number of CETA clients have significant problems that make getting and keeping a job difficult. Forty-five percent of all CETA clients do not have a high school education. Some do not speak or understand English. Of those who are working in public service jobs, 9 percent are handicapped in some way and many are recovered alcoholics or drug addicts. A slightly smaller percentage are law offenders. A significant number of the high school dropouts are under 22.

These are difficult propulations to work with, but given an opportunity to do a real job, most rise to the occasion. All cities and towns have benefited from their efforts.

CETA participants aid the economy as well. Because they are employed, the state and employers (who also contribute to this fund) save almost $2.4 million a year in unemployment insurance payments. Welfare payments are reduced by about $1.8 million. In addition participants pay income taxes amounting to $1.5 million.

CETA's purpose of preparing people for entrance or re-entrance into non-subsidized employment has been difficult to achieve. The economy is feeling the effects of the 1947-57 baby boom as these adults move into the work force.

In spite of this, since Oct. 1, 222 CETA participants have obtained unsubsidized jobs. One handicapped participant secured a computer programming position at a starting salary of $15,500.

A graduate of another training program is working for a trucking firm at a similar salary. Over 2000 participants are still on the CETA rolls.

CETA does not work for everyone.

Some clients do return to CETA after the required unemployment time. Some are not good workers. But we must ask these questions: Would they be better off without the opportunities provided by CETA? Would our communities be better off without the work that has been performed by these people?

..Richard V. Moynihan,
..CETA director

Chattering joggers

To the Editor:

I have not yet decided which is a more discouraging pursuit: being an organic gardener and hand-picking Japanese beetles, or living on Commonwealth Avenue and trying to sleep past 6 a.m.

Joggers have become my bete noir, my cause celebre, my Chinese water torture all rolled into one. I have a feeling that my first amendment freedom to sleep right is being abridged—and at 6 a.m. that is more important to me than the right to redress grievances or bear arms.

I'm sure all you devotees out there in joggerland are not aware how stridently your voices carry through open windows on (otherwise) quiet early summer mornings. Take my word for it, somebody up there hears you.

Maybe it's latent guilt on my part for snuggling in a soft, comfy bed while the rest of the world beats a path past my door. Nevertheless, I have made my choice—and I'd like to be allowed to lie in it—at least until 7 a.m., maybe?

Please, as you pass in daily review before 615 Commonwealth Ave., could you can the chatter and merely smile as you go by?

Pssst—pass the word.

Good fences

..To the Editor:

Change of the Leash Law is now a dead issue, thank goodness, but since I am constantly annoyed by the wandering dogs of neighbors who feel they have the right to disobey the Leash Law because they don't like it, I would like to make a few points.

—Everyone has a right to have a dog, but he has a duty too not to create a nuisance for others.

—A wandering dog, regardless of the time of day or night, is a nuisance for other property owners who have a right to enjoy their yards free of dog messes, free of overturned tarash barrels and free of being barked at by a wandering dog in one's own back yard or street.

—Users of public streets and sidewalks have a right to walk without being barked at or lunged at by someone's unleashed dog. To the owner of the dog, he may be a "darling," but to the walker, he is an unknown quantity and a dangerous nuisance.

—Let the dog owners fence in their own beautiful yards. Then their dogs can protect their own property, mess up their own grass and shrubs, turn over their own trash barrels and get their needed exercise at the same time.

Our dog lived for 13 years under this regime. We loved her too much to chance her being killed by a car, and we respected the right of our neighbors to be free of her messes.

Three men arrested after incidents on Union Street

Three men were arrested in Newton Centre following separate incidents on Union Street Saturday morning, Saturday night, and Sunday night.

At about 2 a.m. Saturday William B. Irving, 18, of 9 Acacia Ave., Chestnut Hill, was charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon.

Police allege Irving threw a beer bottle at a Newton man and hit him in the head while near the rear of the Backyard Restaurant.

At about 11 p.m. Saturday Frederick Stohlman III, 19, of 175 Highland St., West Newton, was charged with malicious damage to property.

Police allege that Stohlman threw a chair through a . window at the Modern Gourmet Restaurant, and later kicked in two windows at the Travel School of America on Union Street.

Police arrested Stohlman on Central Avenue, Newtonville.

Sunday night a Randolph man was charged with assault and battery on a police officer and disorderly conduct after an incident outside the Backyard Restaurant.

Police responded to a complaint of loud music there at 10:30 p.m. and found a group of youths standing around and blocking the front door.

Officer Paul Allen asked them to step aside, and one became loud and abusie, according to police.

When he allegedly refused to be quiet, Officer Allen arrested him for disorderly conduct. While walking the suspect to the cruiser, the suspect allegedly struck the officer in the shoulder.

Arrested was Harry B. Wolf, 27, of 1 Decuta Dr., Randolph.

More emergency aid to elderly added to this year's state budget

Although it's summertime and the Great Blizzard is largely just a memory, Rep. David J. Mofenson hasn't forgotten and took steps recently to take care of some unfinished business.

House chairman of the Committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs, Mofenson inserted in the state budget an additional $45,000 to the account for emergency needs of the elderly. This raised the amount appropriated for this year's deficiency budget to $450,000.

It covers flood, fire and other emergency assistance for low-income elderly.

"This additional money was needed due to a higher caseload and higher bills than had previously been expected," Mofenson said. "The Blizzard of 1978 took its toll on the elderly and there were many additional requests for food, shelter, food orders and blankets during the storm and its aftermath than was originally planned for."

According to Barbara Stolarow, budget director of Welfare, the need for this money became apparent after Governor Dukakis had filed his deficiency recommendations. Mofenson offered the amendment on the House Floor and his recommendation was accepted.

34 acres of Novitiate land sold to CJP

The Xaverian Brothers Novitiate buildings and some of the land will be bought by Combined Jewish Philanthropies for community use and offices and facilities for several Jewish service agencies, according to Norman Leventhal, chairman of the CJP facilities planning committee.

The land fronts on Winchester Street, Newton Highlands, and has extensive frontage on the Charles River.

CJP will buy 34 acres of the 60-acre property, which has been the subject of a drive by the Newton Conservators, a private group, which wants the city to buy the whole property. The Conservation Commission has also been asking Mayor Theodore Mann to acquire 45 of the 60 acres.

The CJP land will comprise all the frontage on Winchester Street for about 700 feet back from the street, Planning Director Charles Thomas said. There will be an easement for the CJP providing access through the rest of the land to the river.•

Thomas said this week he feels confident that the mayor will go ahead with efforts to purchase the remaining land for the city.

CJP has agreed to buy the 34 acres from the Xaverian Brothers.

The Newton Conservators mounted a citywide campaign to collect signatures on petitions to the mayor urging him to buy the property for use as a major recreational area.

The mayor would not authorize purchase of the entire property. Thomas said some months ago that he was waiting and hoping for someone to buy some of the land so that the city could buy the rest.

CJP will renovate the existing old buildings and build some supplementary buildings, according to Leventhal.

Helen Heyn, secretary of the Newton Conservation Commission, said this week that although the commission had wanted 45 acres, she thinks it "will not be unhappy" with the solution offered by the CJP purchase.

"It's very fortunate to have the buildings reused," she said, and went on to list the important features of the land that will be left — the woods, the pond, the football fields, a plateau, and all the river frontage.

If the city buys the land, there will public access from Nahanton Street and possibly through adjacent land to the north of the Novitiate, owned by the city.

CJP plans to locate such agencies as the Bureau of Jewish Education, Jewish Family and Children's Services, Jewish Vocational Services, Jewish Big Brother, and the Associated Jewish Community Centers at the site.

Hebrew College and the Beth Israel Hospital have shown an interest in using the new facility for suburban outreach programs, Leventhal said.

If the mayor decides to acquire the remainder of the land, the city could apply for 80 percent reimbursement from the state under the Urban Self-Help Program, Heyn said, if the Oct. 1 deadline for application could be met.

Acquisition of the land would make public ownership of the banks of the Charles River in Newton almost complete, she said' a goal in which the state is very interested.

Thomas said he feels that the solution to the problem of the use of the land will make the chances better for aldermanic approval of Nahanton Woods, a 125-unit condominium planned for Nahanton Street at Winchester Street, which got some neighborhood opposition because of fear of increased traffic.

Private funds needed for Houghton Gardens lot

By LINDA FRITZ
Graphic Correspondent

Reversing an earlier decision, the Conservation Commission voted last week in executive session to ask the city to buy the lot adjacent to Houghton Gardens, if private funds are contributed to help pay the cost.

The lot—a pie-shaped wedge of about 32,000 square feet—is located on Suffolk Road in Chestnut Hill. The present owner, John A. Kernochan, wanted to build a house on the property, but was unable to obtain the necessary approval from the Conservation Commission. Kernochan's plans were rejected this spring because the developer failed to provide the requested information.

Kernochan is now trying to sell the lot. The prospective buyer has been informed of the commission's decision, commission Secretary Helen Heyn said.

The commission wants the city to purchase the lot primarily because it is an important access route for both the public and for maintenance workers. Subsidary reasons for recommending the purchase are the quality of vegetation on the property and the slope of a portion of the land toward the stream. The stream is located in the gardens.

If private funds are not contributed, the city will not buy the property, commissioner Richard Staley said. Previously, area residents had offered to pay the part of the purchase price, but at that time the commission refused the offer.

In other matters, the commission is advising the state's Department of Enviornmental Quality Engineering to set aside an abutters appeal. The appeal was made by Jacob Rubin in protest over the commission approval of to build a single-family house on Brierfield Road, Newton Highlands.

The request to set aside the appeal is being made because Rubin failed to notify the lot owner, Zegarelli, and the commission, Mrs. Heyn said. Such notification is required by the state law, she said.

Zegarelli obtained his building permit on July 28, after the appeal was filed. But notification was only given indirectly on Aug. 7, Mrs. Heyn said. The Rubins and other area residents voiced their objections to Zegarelli's plans at the commission's public hearing. They claimed Zegarelli's property is swampy and building on it would increase the flooding potential of their homes.

Day registration

New students may register at F.A. Day Junior High School any time from Monday, Aug. 28, through Wednesday, Sept. 6, between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. at the school office, Minot Place, Newtonville.

Board of Aldermen

New rules passed for secondhand dealers

A new ordinance regulating the business of dealers in secondhand articles and junk was passed by the Board of Aldermen on an 18-3 vote Monday night.

Antique dealers, jewelers who buy old jewelry, consignment shops, and used-furniture stores are governed by the law. Exempt are stores dealing exclusively in books, coins, stamps and clothing, except furs.

A controversial section of the ordinance allowing what Ald. Mark White termed "warrantless search" of stores by the police was softened somewhat by a change requiring that shopkeepers show articles to the police upon "reasonable demand."

Under the ordinance, which supersedes one already in existence but little known, dealers have to report to the police at least weekly all articles bought. They may not sell any article until five days after the report to the police. Police may order an article not to be sold for seven days if it is thought8to have been stolen.

Copies of the ordinance are available from the office of the City Clerk at City Hall.

Of the many dealers who opposed some provisions of the new ordinance as too restrictive and making too much paperwork and said they would have to go out of business, at least one has decided to discontinue dealing in secondhand articles.

Emanuel Goldman, who owns Fare Exchange on Union Street, Newton Centre, has advertised a sale to clean out his business. He will limit it to the sale and purchase of exempt articles.

Ald. Mark White objected consistently to the provision allowing police search rights during the months-long work on the ordinance.

In other business the Board denied without debate a measure to cut aldermanic pay from $1800 annually to $900. One of the proponents of the measure, Ald. Robert Sandman, filed a motion for reconsideration at the next Board meeting.

A proposed amendment to the dog leash law was denied. The amendment would have allowed dogs to run loose between 10 p.m. and 6 a.m.

The Board gave the Finance Committee the go-ahead to solicit bids for "adaptive reuse" of the old Peabody School in Oak Hill. The building is to be converted to dwelling units.

Sidda Yoga petition sent back for more work

A technical flaw in wording of notices to abutters and a question about dormitories sent a petition for use of a house at 301 Waverley Ave., as a residence for an "association of persons" back to the Land Use Committee Monday night.

Siddha Yoga Dham, Inc., a Hindu sect, was given a favorable vote July 19 by the Land Use Committee for its use of the house as a residence for 28 persons.

A public hearing had been held earlier, called for the purpose of eliciting neighborhood opinion on "site plan approval." "Permissive use" was not mentioned.

Ald. David Cohen asked for an amendment to the proposed Board order to remove references to 8permissive use, which gives more control to the Board but in this case cannot be debated because Siddha Yoga Dham is a religious organization and therefore exempt from zoning regulations.

According to City Solicitor Daniel Funk, the Board is obliged to grant permissive use, but can, through site plan approval, control certain exterior aspects of the the use of the house.

Since permissive use must be granted, the hearing was called only on the site plan approval, the granting of the permissive use being assumed as automatic.

Cohen tried, by his amendment, to bring the Board order into line with what had actually taken place, and Ald. Joseph McDonnell argued that the petitioners could not be given what they had never asked for.

McDonnell also pointed out that the housing of over 20 people may well make the house a dormitory under city ordinances, which brings other regulations into play.

McDonnell questioned a Law Department ruling that the petition should not be considered under the new state zoning laws. The ruling had been made several weeks ago on the basis of the date of filing of the petition, which was before the new law became mandatory on all communities.

Ald. Donald Budge asked how site plan approval without permissive use can be used to limit the number of people to 28 occupants and said he thinks a court challenge will not stand up.

SYD's lawyer, Robert Freeto, has already said he will take the Board of Aldermen to court if it limits the number of occupants to 28 and maintains its denial of the use of the carriage house for occupancy. SYD wants to house 10 more people in the carriage house' which has been used previously as living quarters.

The next Land Use Committee meeting is Sept. 6.

Negrotti promoted to fire lieutenant

Lt. Robert Negrotti

Firefighter Robert J. Negrotti of the Newton Fire Department has been promoted to lieutenant by Fire Chief Harvey Preble.

Negrotti is a 16-year veteran in fire service, having joined the department following a three-year tour of duty with the U.S. Navy. He was discharged as a Petty Officer.

He is a Newton native, graduated from Newton High School, and is presently studying fire science at Mass. Bay Community College.

Lt. Negrotti is a long distance track runner and a member of the North Medford Track Club. He has participated in 13 marathons including six B.A.A. marathons.

In 1978 he finished in 2 hours, 44 minutes, and 28 seconds. In the marathon he represented the Newton Fire Department, Station 3, Engine 6, which is his present assignment.

Passman Republican candidate in 11th district

Howard Passman, 89 Dorcar Rd., Newton Centre, is a candidate for state representative from the 11th Middlesex District. The 11th district includes Chestnut Hill, Newton Centre, Waban and Newton Corner.

Passman said that his objective would be to limit taxes.

Passman, a Republican, is a founder of Citizens for Limited Taxation and has spent the past several years working to give voters an opportunity to limit state spending by amending the state constitution.

Passman is Newton's coordinator for Proposition 2 ½. By enacting Proposition 2 ½, Passman believes the tax burden of the voters can be reduced.

This places more spendable dollars in consumer pockets, he said.

Passman said, "The fiscal issues confronting local and state government today are too important to be mismanaged." If elected Passman stated, "I will lead efforts in the General Court to make Massachusetts government more efficient and responsive to the citizens, while reducing the tax burden of both individuals and business."

Passman is an alumnus of the University of Maine and Kansas State University. He served with the 1st Infantry Division. He is a member of, Realty Lodge, B'nai B'rith, the Jewish Community Center, the New England Aquarium, Rehabilitation Center, Childrens Hospital and Newton Taxpayers Association.

In the community he has been active in Newton East Little League, and NAA Basketball. Howard and Barbara Passman with their children are members of Temple Beth Avodah.

Bloomingdale's will open with existing parking

By LINDA FRITZ
Graphic Correspondent

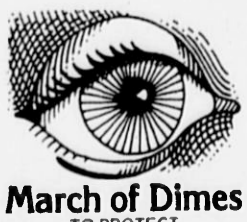

Scheduled to open Sept. 7, Bloomingdale's clothing store has tabled its plans to sink foundation pillars for a parking deck adjacent to Hammond Pond.

Instead the parking lot will be readied for the opening without the pillars, said Howard Levine, one of the attorneys representing Bloomingdale's. In June, Federated Department Stores, which owns Bloomingdale's, met with the Conservation Commission to present its plans for the deck supports. The plans called for eight of them to be sunk close enough to Hammond Pond to come under the commission's purview.

It would be financially better for Bloomingdale's to sink the supports while the lot is being resurfaced for the opening, said Richard Lovell, another attorney representing Bloomingdale's. At that meeting, Lovell stressed that Bloomingdale's plans for a parking deck were still tentative.

Chestnut Hill residents felt approval of the pillars would be tacit approval for the deck, they argued. A deck would be unsightly at that location, they said.

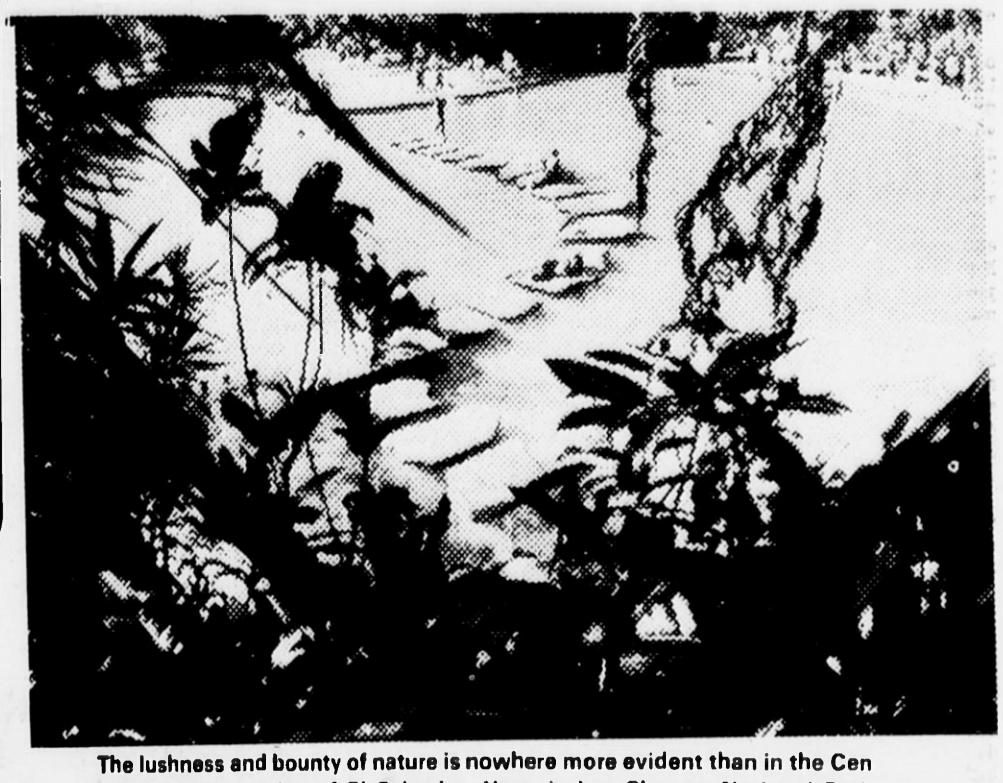

Although Bloomingdale's will not sink the pillars before opening, it has not abandoned its plans for a deck, Levine said. It intends to come back with plans next spring, he said.

The lushness and bounty of nature is nowhere more evident than in the Central American nation of El Salvador. Here, in Los Chorros National Park, one can swim in a natural pool surrounded by tropical greenery.

El Salvador: exotic nature, rich history

Are you looking for a vacation spot which is relaxing and at the same time exciting, a potpourri of nature and exotic culture, a blend of the modern and the ancient?

Are you thrilled by the thought of over 200 miles of seacoast, dotted with unspoiled beaches, just waiting for you to discover them?

What about the opportunity to visit six volcanic lakes, a scattering of fascinating Pre-Columbian ruins, and extensive, lushly scenic coffee plantations?

If all of this is food for fantasy, why not turn it into a reality, and consider the very real possibility of visiting El Salvador, a tiny country on the Pacific coast of Central America, blessed with spectacular scenery, and only three hours by plane from Miami, five hours from either New York or Los Angeles.

San Salvador, the country's capital, is a sophisticated city of nearly a million inhabitants. It boasts a lively night life, which runs the gamut from traditional Mariachi bands who perform in the old sections of the city, LaPraviana, to the upbeat of discos.

El Salvador is famous, not surprisingly, for its seafood: saucer-sized oysters, six-inch shrimps, lobster, red snapper, even turtle eggs. Try the "Sinfonia le mar" ("sea symphony"), a chili-flavored seafood stew, for a true taste of the best the Pacific has to offer.

The national snack, available from street vendors, is "pupusa," a crisp corn cake rolled up and stuffed with either meat or cheese.

The capital is dotted with markets and shopping centers, labyrinths of shops and stalls which offer everything imaginable from the mundane to the exotic. One, Feria, is a permanent handicradt exhibition, where one can buy artifacts from all over the country.

No one should miss a visit to at least one of the country's volcanic lakes. The largest, Ilopango, towers 2,000 feet above sea level and is quite close to the city of San Salvador. The lake has excellent facilities for swimming, boating and fishing.

The largest coffee beneficio (processing station) in Central America, El Molina, is not far away, either. During harvest time, visitors may tour the facility and learn first-hand about the various stages the coffee bean must go through, before it reaches their pot back home.

European opera is booming but subsidies pay the way

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — Queen Victoria loved opera but always came late which meant the singers had to stop in full flight while the orchestra played "God Save the Queen." Faced with the choice of arriving on time or disrupting a performance, Her Majesty took the easy way out — she gave the Royal Opera House in Covent Garden a dispensation against having to play the national anthem when she appeared.

While she was at it the queen complained that the extras sent on to fill up the stage as pilgrims, prisoners or whatever in Beethoven's Fidelio and other crowd scene operas were so slovenly they ought to be replaced by, say, her own welldrilled soldiery. Ever since then soldiers of the London barracks have been drafted for whatever human background the opera libretto required.

No one thinks this odd, possibly because it would take a lot to bemuse devotees of an art form which demands $20 a seat — and suspension of belief — to hear a statue sing a stirring aria by Mozart.

If the music is glorious enough, and in grand opera it often is, anything seems possible except, of course, making a profit.

An opera house that can balance the ledgers is so rare, tears spring to the eyes of impresarios when they talk of the 1877 season in Covent Garden which wound up in the black .

In these artistically enlightened days no one really expects the great national opera theaters to cover their enormous costs, even with seats at the highest average prices in show business. They can prpvide the greatest singers, support symphony-sized orchestras and corps de ballet, and maintain the lush palaces which are their homes only with the aid of subsidies running into the millions of dollars.

In Russia, Germany, France and Austria these sums are provided gladly. Vienna has a permanent staff of 1,000 people and blithely winds up the season some $25 million in the red. But its performances are the glory and the pride of the nation — as well as a chance for Viennese society to preen in public.

Britain, which maintains two national opera houses — Covent Garden for opera in its original language, where possible, and the English National Opera at the Coliseum for performances in English — is a bit more grudging. But commercial firms have stepped in where government feared to tread to help with sponsorship of individual operas and ballets.

On Nov. 13, for example, Prince Charles, the Heir to the Throne and Patron of the Royal Opera, will attend the first revival of Meyerbeer's "L'Africaine" since 1888 — courtesy of the Imperial Tobacco Company.

Sainsbury, a grocery chain, is sponsoring a tour by one of the royal ballet companies. The Commercial Union Assurance Company has underwritten a new production of "Parsifal." IBM is the money behind the three-act ballet "Mayerling."

Britain is deepest into commercial sponsorship because so much of the allocation from the Arts Council and other official bodies is needed for renovation of the artistic slum backstage which the audience in the beautiful amphitheater never sees.

Britain is thus changing, but it is a slow process and operagoers look longingly at the open-handed attitude toward the art in other countries. The Bolshoi in Moscow is so well supported that the best seats are only $5, most of them reserved for tourists who take away an impression of a theater in the classical European tradition distinctive only in the hammer and sickle on its curtain.

Opera generally means a dressy night out, but not in Moscow where Bolshoi audiences must rate as the shabbiest in the operas-going world. The opera itself is usually very well done, but the repertoire as a whole is ossified. There are very few new productions, an adherence to tradition that stems from the reluctance to possibly offend officials with something new. The great Russian operas, eminently "Boris Godunov," are splendidly mounted and marvellously sung.

The Bolshoi's status is unchallenged. When President Leonid Brezhnev emerged this year after his long illness, it was the scene of his first public appearance.

One thing the Bolshoi is guaranteed is a season untroubled by finance or politics. This emphatically is not the case with the most famous of all the opera houses, La Scala of Milan, where boxoffice sales cover only about 10 percent of the cost and the government chips in the rest. There, as is common in Italy these days, the tumultuous background is often as dramatic as the stuff on the stage.

This year it was a last minute cliffhanger on opening night with riots and demonstrations by leftist youths arguing the government should not support so elitist an entertainment. In addition, police arrested a total of 40 opera officials, including La Scala's former artistic adviser, on charges which included taking kickbacks to guaranteeing roles to singers.

Nothing as dramatic as the Milan mob scenes, or the threatened chorus strike that forced the English National Opera to cancel a new production of "Aida," took place in Paris, now flourishing on its 200th birthday after years of financial and labor problems. A policy of cultural independence by its new Viennese director, Rolf Lieberman, has attracted a government handout of about $30 million.

Opera has had three centuries of ups and downs in France and this season seems definitely up with full houses for a mixture of old and new operas.

The most recent of the Paris sensations was Lieberman's rejection of a Soviet proposal to replace a planned production of Tchaikovsky's "Queen of Spades" with one of their own. The Russians claimed Yuri Luybimov, a sort of artistic dissident, was trying to destroy a Soviet cultural monument. Lieberman dropped the "Queen of Spades" and replaced it with a La Scala production of "Madame Butterly."

More money awaits Newton people

A third list of more than 600 people whose last known residence was Newton and who have unclaimed money was released this week by the state treasurer's office.

A fourth list will be published in the Aug. 24 Graphic.

"Returning more than $7.9 million to 293,000 people is an enormous project, but we are making headway," State Treasurer Robert Crane commented.

He said claim forms have been sent to 10,000 people in the past month who were able to be located due to the "public service announcements" that the newspapers published.

The office continues to receive calls at the rate of 2000 a day.

The lists represent people due money from lost or forgotten checking and savings accounts, unclaimed dividend checks or uncashed wage checks.

If your name appears on the list, the easiest way to claim your money is to write: State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane, 12th Floor, McCormack Building, Ashburton Place, Boston, Mass. 02108.

You can also call 727-5192 or 727-1157.

When writing, Crane requests you include your name, address, phone number and name as listed in the newspaper.

The third list is as follows:

First school day shouldn't surprise

HENLO PARK, Calif. (UPI) — The golden rule ft sending children to sihool for the first time is to make sure they k tw what to expect, says a nationally recognized authority on early childhood education.

"Children often have a very real fear that their mothers won't be coming back to pick them up after their first day of school," says Edith M. Dowley, professor emeritus of psychology and education at Stanford University and former director of the university's Bing Nursery School.

Miss Dowley says parents should "explain to the child the relationship between the home and the school.

"Tell him that school is part of the neighborhood and a predictable part of life.

"Tell him what you will be doing, tell him where you will be, so he can visualize your day and get a sense of the time element involved.

"Tell him what he will be doing so he will understand the amount of time involved for him."

She suggests taking children to school beforehand, and identifying landmarks along the way so they don't get the feeling they are being sent some place far away.

"It's important to introduce the child to the teacher," she says. "The parent should smile and look comfortable with the teacher, so that the child will have someone to model himself after. The parent and teacher should discuss such topics as where the child should sit, the location of the bathroom, and where coats should be hung."

Now a special consultant to Hallmark Cards, Miss Dowley reviews the company's children's books.

Her other tips for the first day of school:

—A child will feel more secure in a new neighborhood if he has his name, address and telephone number in his pocket. If one or both parents work, the child would get additional comfort from having their business phone numbers, too.

—Wearing a T-shirt or jacket with the child's name on it also gives a positive feeling.

—If the teacher permits, it also helps to bring a favorite book or toy from home.

"Mothers should try to learn the names of her child's schoolmates and some of the equipment used," Miss Dowley says. "Often a child doesn't know what to say about school because he doesn't know the right words."

Sometimes children don't want to talk about school simply because they have something else on their minds, she adds, "So don't be too curious."

Astronomers claim . flu linked to meteors

LONDON (UPI) — The announcement, concerning the influenza epidemic that hit Britain last winter, came from two prominent astronomers, but it sounded more like the title of a sci-fi flick. They said, "It came from outer space."

The Daily Telegraph Tuesday quoted Prof. Fred Hoyle and Prof. Chandra Wickramasinghe at a conference on cosmic chemistry at Gregynog, Wales, as saying statistical breakdowns of absenteeism from Welsh boarding schools during the epidemic showed the pupils caught the flu last year while in the open air and not in dormitories.

They said it was possible to correlate the onslaught of flu outbreaks with thunderstorms and atmospheric disturbances and argued the flu virus arrives in meteoric dust and in certain weather conditions will fall soon after the earth has passed through the orbit of a comet in space.

passed each year, adding that the Ways & Means committees of the State House have virtual total control of the package as its now handled.

Using a biennial system, more committee work could go into a state budget and legislators would have a better chance to be well-informed when the final product reached the floor.

Asked about the concept of "zero budgeting," Baker said that while supporting the concept, "In practice it's very hard to do because there are so many institutional barriers."

This concept means that instead of adding to a departmental budget every year, the whole budget process starts from scratch.

Baker, who has been active in the Chestnut Hill community on issues concerning the environment, responded to a question on nuclear power by describing the building of a nuclear power plant as a "heavily capital-intensive use with a degree of uncertainty on how well it will function."

He said he's "uneasy" with it.

He went on to explain that the $200-million-dollar price tag for one nuclear power plant to serve one small area might not be the best way to get the most for the money.

Baker also mentioned that it's "time to start thinking of energy conservation as an source of energy."

Experience counts

Or do we want a state representative with "experience?"

That was the theme song at a coffee this week for David Cohen's candidacy at the home of former state senator Irving Fishman in Waban.

Cohen, whose credentials in the areas of conservation, ecology and environment are just as solid as Baker's, spoke before a gathering of about 20 people.

No other aldermen were present, but Monday was a Board of Aldermen night and even Cohen had to leave early to go to that meeting.

Cohen was the sponsor of Newton's recycling program, which he said now has "15 percent participation."

"We're not making a profit," he said, "but it does cost us less to recycle than to have the trash hauled away."

Cohen is an advocate of the "sunset law" when it comes to discussing the state budget. Under that system, programs are created for a certain period of time and then are reviewed periodically to see if they should be continued.

Where Baker currently supports the property tax classification amendment, Cohen, when asked, spoke in favor of California's Proposition 13.

"Something had to be done to ease the burden," he commented. "Proposition 13 as a means of tax redistribution is fine; it is not a panacea."

He stressed that money raised by property taxes, when that burden is removed from the backs of the homeowners, has to be raised via other taxes.

"That would be meaningful tax reform."

Cohen's audience was interested in the blue laws.

On that subject, the candidate worries about the actual economic impact on Massachusetts businesses. He discussed at length the impact on businesses in terms of being forced to stay open on Sunday if the blue laws were repealed even though revenues might not justify it.

"We have to be careful repeal that would not have an adverse impact on Massachusetts businesses."

Out in the hallway

Ed Markey was the state legislator, you may recall, who defied the speaker of the house on the issue of requiring judges to serve full time, and wound up with his desk out of the in the hallway after being thrown off the Judiciary Committee.

Paul Kelley recalls that fondly as he thinks about being a legislator himself and supporting reform of the House rules.

Kelley has decided not to use the "coffee" as a campaign device; he prefers to go door to door.

He considers himself the true "unknown" in the race, and says that while "95 out of 100" people he contacts ask about taxes, he's also frequently asked to state his position on abortion.

"That's the litmus test," he explains.

Kelley tells voters he favors state funding for abortions, then chides them for not "not asking the right question."

"The real question is birth control and sex education."

Kelley is also an advocate of the abolition of county government and vows to be a full-time legislator.

"The days of the gentleman legislator are over," he said, "when the Legislature considers over 10,000 bills a year."

"When I worked at the State House, I used to see many state representatives come in8to their offices in the morning and start calling their clients. They were not working on legislation or researching bills."

Miss Angelone, who could not be reached in time for this story, is back in the Democratic party after some time in the American party.

She is a fiscal conservative and is concerned about the preservation of Newton neighborhoods.

Thompsonville

repairs for Carlisle Street are also on the agenda.

Improving the water pressure was the final priority item. It should be checked for the entire village, said co-chairman Pamala Taglienti, who noted it is especially low on Beecher Terrace. If it is below normal for all of Thompsonville, it should be improved, she said.

The committee believes other projects can perhaps be accomplished without using federally funded community development money, which in the next three years will amount to $110,000 for Thompsonville. Of prime concern in this area is requiring DiCarlo Brothers to clean up their lot on Hamlet Street.

"The DiCarlo Brothers property is the most unsightly in all of Thompsonville," John Rodman said. The committee intends to lobby for imposing a clean-up of the lot.

The parking violations in Thompsonville square are another concern of the committee. Several members noted the one hour limit on Jackson Street and the no parking around the "jug handle" are not enforced.

The police are frequently called in, Ms. Taglienti said. Unless a resident is supervising the ticketing, nothing is done, she added.

Off street parking in Thompsonville square and improvements of Bowen playground were viewed as poor ideas. The parking would just bring in more traffic, Temkin said. Similarly improvements at Bowen would make the recreation area a city park rather than a neighborhood playground, he said.

Temple singles group will hear art lecture

Selma H. Stone, artist and lecturer, will give an illustrated talk on "Modern Art and the Single Person" at the first event of the new single adults group of Temple Shalom of Newton. The meeting will be held in a French cafe setting at the temple, 175 Temple St., West Newton, on Sunday, August 27, at 7:45 p.m. Refreshments will be served.

The fee is $2 at the door and admission is by reservation only. Call 969-3518.

Townhouses

The final rules and regulations will hopefully be drawn by September, Barron said. The board will be appointed soon after, he said. It will then begin to accept applications for a pilot program, Barron said.

Even with this close schedule, time may have run out for Spezzano Farm. David Zussman of Develop Group said an affiliate of his company now holds a 99 year lease on the property.

Development Group had not yet determined if the depth of the muck and peat soil would prohibit building their multi-family complex. Their preliminary plans, however, were developed enough to show locations the of the town houses and the proposed recreation area. The townhouses would be luxuary units, each with a dropped living room, three bedrooms, two baths, and a sundeck.

Although Development Group has not abandoned the possibility of building a mid-rise apartment or series of apartments. it has found greater neighborhood appeal for the town house development' Zussman said. Such an apartment complex, he added, would allow for a buffer area between the building and Florence Street.

Whichever project Development Group undertakes, the commission would like the brook running through the property to remain as is, said commission Secretary Helen Heyn. It does not want a culvert used to channel the water under roads . or driveways, she said.

If the mid-rise project is chosen, the Board of Aldermen would have to rezone the land. The land is currently zoned for private residences, including two families. This zone would allow for townhouses with the special permission of the board Zussman said.

Pines bash next week

"A United Newton for Lois Pines" is the theme of a reception Wednesday, Aug. 23, at Max on the Waterfront, 101 New Atlantic Ave., Boston, to aid the campaign of Rep. Lois Pines for secretary of state of Massachusetts.

Admission to the reception, which will run from 6 to 8 p.m., is $15 per person.

According to State Sen. Jack Backman, one of the sponsors of the reception: "As a representative from Newton these past six years, Lois Pines has given her constituents, as well as all the citizens of our Commonwealth, superb legislative leadership. Her outstanding record of achievement, along with her integrity, honesty and competence, have earned her the respect of all her colleagues.

In addition to Backman, sponsors of the reception include State Reps. Peter Harrington and David Mofenson; Beverly Carmen, Peg Hannigan, Matthew Jefferson, Nancy and Alan Korman and Emily and Michael Lipof.

Two programs teach safety, theft prevention

Newton's bicycle safety program is gearing up for the start of school with the addition of the RegiCycle theft prevention campaign.

According to Lt. Charles Feeley, head of the Police Department's Community Service Bureau, the RegiCycle program provides bicycle owners with an adhesive backed photo identification sticker that makes it easy for police to might be determine if the cycle stolen.

Lt. Feeley said the regular in-school bicycle safety training will also continue at the invitation of school principals.

Students are taught rules of the bicycle safety, especially the importance of looking over the left shoulder when passing a parked car.

Lt. Feeley stressed the importance of children learning when to ride in the street and when to ride on the sidewalk.

It is clearly against state and local law to ride a bicycle on the sidewalk in business districts. Bikes there "are a threat to our senior citizens," Feeley said. .

Riding on sidewalks is also forbidden in front of churches and schools, he said.

It is allowed in residential districts, but not recommended by the safety officer who has been teaching bicycle safety to Newton children for decades.

Riding in the street on the right side allows bicyclists and drivers more time to see each other when a car is backing out of a driveway lined with foliage.

Children on tricycles should always remain on the sidewalks, Feeley said, and residents should know when the tricyclists are likely to be active, so they can be watched for when backing out of driveways.

The RegiCycle program, which also includes tips on bicycle safety' will be starting up again Sept. 16 at the Police Headquarters in West Newton. It may also be set up at a firehouse south of Commonwealth Avenue.

Sponsored by the Community Services Bureau and the Newton Police Explorer Post, the program includes engraving of the owner's name on the bicycle in three places' a book of discount coupons for area museums, and two photo identification cards.

One photo ID card is encased in plastic and put on the hub of a wheel shortly after the picture is taken, and the second picutre picture arrives in the mail. It is a metal plate with a strong adhesive backing that is put on the bike frame.

RegiCycle club membership costs $3 for bikes up to 24 inches high, $4 for 26-inch and 28-inch frame bikes, and $15 for mopeds and motorcycles.

The program is endorsed by the Masachusetts secretary of public safety, the Massachusetts Police Chiefs Association, and Medical Alert International.

Religious sects at war with the Government

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In January 1963, agents from the Food and Drug Administration raided the fledgling Church of Scientology, seizing the church's controversial counseling device, the E-meter.

It was the start of a bitter struggle between the government and the church that still exists.

In 1965, Col. Bo Pak Hi, top aide to the Rev. Sun Myung Moon, founder of the Unification Church, arrived in Washington to establish the Korean Cultural Leadership Foundation.

Since then, the Unification church has also been involved in a long and bitter struggle with various government agencies, the courts and now Congress over its role in the United States — a struggle Moon promises to take to the Supreme Court.

And the Scientologists, object of a massive 134-agent raid by the FBI in July 1977 in Washington and Los Angeles, are reportedly the target of a grand jury investigation that church officials believe will result in the indictment of several of their top leaders in the United States.

Although the Scientologists and the Moonies are completely different religions and the controversies surrounding them touch on different issues, there are similarities.

Both underline how difficult it is for a new religion, especially with unconventional belief systems, to be accepted in the United States.

And both emerged as forces with influence beyond their numbers in the counter-culture milieu of the mid-1960s and early 1970s.

The Church of Scientology

Scientology is the brainchild of a one-time science fiction writer and amateur mental health theorist, L. Ron Hubbard. In 1950, Hubbard published a book, "Dianetics: The Modern Science of Mental Health" which outlined his philosophy of happy and healthful living. He evolved Scientology out of dianetics and in 1954 the first Church of Scientology was founded in Washington.

Since its beginning, Scientology's claim to be a religion — and therefore its tax exemp status — has been strongly challenged. Many of its first confrontations with Internal Revenue Service were over certification as a religious organization.

Estimates of its membership vary — from 5.4 million to 4.1 million worldwide with 3.2 million in the United States and a hardcore of approximately 600,000.

Scientologists aggressively solicit people on the streets to take their courses and counseling, known as auditing — for fees running into the hundreds and thousands of dollars. The expressed purpose is to free people of negative memories and bring them to a state of "clear."

It was the counseling techniques, using the lie detector-like device known as the Emeter, which brought the Food and Drug Administration's raid on the Scientology's Washington church.

The FDA claimed that the Emeter was being used in a false and misleading way and that Scientologists were making medical claims for the device. The raid resulted in 10 years of litigation before the Scientologists finally won a court decision ordering a return of the E-meters and other seized books and materials from the FDA.

According to the Scientologists, much of the group's troubles are the result of "false reports" about the church by various government and international agencies and organizations.

That belief has led Scientology into a major confrontation with the government, including several multi-million dollar law suits charging harassment and violation of First Amendment rights against federal agencies ranging from the State Department to the IRS and some 60 Freedom of Information suits seeking to "clean up" government files on the church.

Government officials believe the church has used less orthodox methods than the Freedom of Information Act to gain documents. After the FBI raid, in which tens of thousands of documents were seized from the church, officials said some of the seized material appeared to have been stolen from government agencies.

An inventory of the documents, leaked to reporters, indicated that the Scientologists themselves maintained extensive files on government agencies and officials. There were also indications that the Scientologists also used "dirty tricks" against their "enemies."

In response, the organization announced its own campaign against the government, American Citizens for Honesty in Government, one of a host of groups spawned by the church, to spy on the government and ferret out government wrongdoing.

The Unification Church

The Unification Church of Sun Myung Moon has had an equally controversial but different past than the Scientologists.

Founded in Korea in 1954 by Sun Myung Moon, the church's activities in the United States concerned only parents and other religions until the Korean scandal broke on Capitol Hill. The church claims only some 37,000 members in the United States with perhaps 7,000 of them as full-time members.

It became controversial when the unhappy parents of some members charged that their sons and daughters were being brainwashed by the sect and then exploited by being forced to solicit contributions by selling peanuts and flowers for 10 and 12 hours a day.

Some of these parents hired professional deprogrammers to snatch their children from the group and through a kind of reverse brainwashing break the hold of Moon's religious doctrines on the young adults.

The deprogramming resulted in a number of court cases around the country and the jailing of some professional deprogrammers on kidnapping charges.

For many, the Unification Church became known for its support of former President Nixon during the last days of the Vietnam war and Watergate scandal.

In addition, the church has engaged in a battle with the Immigration and Naturalization Service over use of foreign nationals as part of a missionary training program.

The church's biggest confrontation has come with a three year investigation by Rep. Donald Fraser, D-Minn., into an alleged relationship between the church and the Korean Central Intelligence Agency.

A year ago, Fraser's House subcommittee reported that it had found "reliable information" showing that Moon and the Unification church had "operational ties" with the KCIA.

Moon's top aide, Pak, denied Moon received money from the KCIA, calling the charge "so ridiculous that it does not require a rebuttal."

Pak said Moon "will not cooperate" with the investigation but denied that the religious leader had left the United States to avoid a subcommittee subpoena, issued for an appearance June 13. Pak said Moon had left the country a month earlier to officiate at a mass wedding ceremony and to conduct an evangelistic tour of Europe.

Moon's aides also promised that the Korean religious leader would fight the subcommittee subpoena "all the way to the Supreme Court, if necessary" and that they, in turn, were filing a $30 million damage suit against Fraser and two subcommittee investigators for violating Pak's and the church's constitutional rights.

According to Pak, Fraser "is determined to destroy Rev. Moon and the Unification church and undermine KoreanAmerican relations."

Science fiction flick has fine musical score

"The War of the Worlds" is a story about something that never happened almost a century ago, but it has had a lasting effect.

H. G. Wells wrote the tale about a Martian invasion of London and the English countryside and it put him alongside Jules Verne as a pioneer in science fiction.

In the late 1930s, a comparatively unknown actor named Orson Welles updated the story, changed the scene to New Jersey and broadcast it on radio. Hitler was preparing the world for war in those days and the show put on by Welles was so realistic that it almost caused a panic.

Now a movie has been made of "The War of the Worlds" and the setting reverts to England at the turn of the century. It stars Richard Burton as the journalist who narrates the story and David Essex as "the artilleryman."

So much has been done in recent years with science fiction movies — "2001, a Space Odyssey," "Star Wars" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" — that the fine visual effects of this film can almost be taken for granted.

But what really makes this version of the story exceptional is the fantastic musical score. The sound track of "The War of the Worlds" (Columbia PC2 35290), a two-LP album, is gripping, almost spellbinding. It deserves consideration for a Grammy.

Jeff Wayne, son of theatrical producer Jerry Wayne, is responsible for this achievement. He wrote the music and orchestrated it. In the beginning there is a rumbalike rhythm which picks up tempo as Burton unfolds the tale of heat rays, vicious red vegetation and gigantic destructive tripods created and manipulated by the Martians.

As the artilleryman, David Essex, a friend of Jeff Wayne, moves up front with songs near the end of the movie, which also casts singer Julie Covington in a brief but principal role.

It is not unusual for those seeing a movie to want a recording of the sound track. But it is unusual for a sound track to make a person want to see the movie from which it is taken. That is the case with this compelling sound track from "The War of the Worlds."

On the Jazz Scene — cfl Two fine jazz pianists are featured on an excellent LP, "Embraced" (Pablo Records 2620-106). The two-disc album presents Mary Lou Williams on six tunes, all her own compositions, and Cecil Taylor on four. Mary Lou's fans particularly will like "Good Ole Boogie." "Ayizan," one of Taylor's compositions, is a full-blown piece that takes all of side three to complete. Taylor also plays one of Mary Lou's compositions, "Back to the Blues."

Paul Mann, president of the Newton Camera Club, pins Class 'B' first prize ribbon on Mimi Rubin of Newton at the annual banquet of the club. Cynthia Cronig was the second prize winner and Agnes Leonard took third place.

Title I summer school prepares children for fall

Summer vacation from school will start this week for 41 young children who have participated in federally funded Title I activities at Lincoln-Eliot and Emerson schools.'

Twenty-three preschool children have been in school for the past six weeks to prepare for the experience of being in kindergarten. They were selected after the screening process at kidergarten registration.

Eighteen K-1 children were in the summer program on the basis of their teachers' recommendations' and worked in areas outlined by teachers.

Heading the program at Emerson has been Thomas Etre, and Joseph Utka, Title 1 director, was the principal at Lincoln-Eliot. Diane Handspicker supervised six work-study high school students who assisted teachers.

All the students at both schools received free lunches, courtesy of the State Bureau of School Food Services and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Sixty students in grades one through six also recieved five weeks of close attendtion to improve their reading skills.

Thirty graduate students from Boston State Teachers College worked with students at Emerson School.

Also' 31 students from all parts of Newton participated in the summer bilingual program at Lincoln-Elliot during the last month.

In past years the program was just for Italian-speaking children but this year included 10 Spainsh-speaking children, six Chinese-speaking children, and 15 Italian-speaking children.

Travel Talk
By Josephine Aria

Located in the western Mediterranean between Minorca and Iviza, 1,405 square miles around, lies Majorca (also spelled Mallorca), Spain. It is the largest of the Balearic Islands, and with beautiful mountins strung across the northwest coast which rise to 4,741 feet in Puig Major and therby shelter the island from northisland from northerly winds. Majorca is a popular tourist spot. The climate is mild, the vegation luxurious, and it abounds in olives, vines, almonds, citrus fruits, and limestone caves. In the 19th Century the notorious French writer George Sand spent a long winter there with Frederic Chopin, and wrote a famous travel guide called "A Winter in Mallorca".

Horticultural Society lists fall/winter courses, events

More that 100 courses, events and tours will be offered by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society during the coming fall and winter, it is announced by Margaret Shean Ris, M.H.S. educational coordinator. She offers a free calendar of Society activities to anyone sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to COURSES, Massachusetts Horticultural Society, 300 Massachusetts Ave., Boston 02115. Pre-registration is required for all classes.

Highlights of the catalogue include a Beginning Indoor Gardening Series, instruction in greenhouse gardening and gardening under lights, as well as specialized studies on the raising of such plants as orchids, African violets, ferns and begonias.

A solar greenhouse series, co-sponsored with the Boston Center for Adult Education, will include a greenhouse tour. Landscape design and home maintenance workshops are also offered.

A set of courses celebrating Boston's horticultural history will coincide with the 150th anniversary of the non-profit Society in 1979.

A series of accredited courses in botany will again be co-sponsored with Northeastern University, and an accredited course, Introduction to Horticultural Therapy, will be offered in association with Massachusetts Bay Community College.

Tours of the Emerald Necklace, Boston Harbor islands and Massachusetts orchard country are planned, as well as nature and arts classes, nature photography, crafts and horticultural career seminars.

Auburndale women hold annual meeting

Recently the Auburndale Woman's Club installed its 1978-9 officers at the annual meeting. The outgoing president, Mrs. William B. Graham Jr. was presented a silver plate by the members of the board in appreciation of her dedication during her term in office.

As is the custom each year, the club presents an award to an Auburndale resident who is a Newton High School senior and plans to further her education. Present for the occasion was the winner, Deborah Ann Kreider and her mother, Mary Ann Kreider. During her three years at Newton North, Deborah played field hockey, softball and captained the senior basketball team. This fall she will enter Keene State College, Keene, N.H.

A few weeks following the annual meeting, the board members were entertained at a luncheon at the home of its new president, Vivienne Silverstein.

Orthodox Theological Society plans international conference

The Orthodox Theological Society in America has held its annual meeting at the campus of Hellenic College Holy Cross Seminary in Brookline to prepare for its third international conference here August 28-31.

Prominent theologians from Europe and America will participate in the conference, the theme of which will be " Theological Reflections on the Forthcoming Great Council of the Orthodox Church". The conference will be open to all.

A new slate of officers elected at the annual meeting includes Rev. Dr. George C. Papademetriou, pastor of the St. Nicholas Church, Lexington, president; Prof. John Erickson, faculty member of St. Vladimir's Orthodox Theological Seminary, Crestwood, N.Y., vice president; Dr. Lewis J. Patsavos, faculty member of Holy Cross Greek Orthodox Seminary, Brookline, secretary; and Prof. Thomas Fitzgerald, also of the Holy Cross Seminary, treasurer.

An agenda was prepared at the recent meeting which centered on discussion about confession. As a result, a document will be prepared for the Standing Conference of Canonical Orthodox Bishops in America.

Queries on the conference should be sent to Fr. Papademetriou, 19 Meriam St., Lexington 02173.

Mayflower BBW sponsors barbecue

Mayflower Lodge, B'nai B'rith, and Mayflower Chapter, B'nai B'rith Women, will hold their annual barbecue for residents of the Walter E. Fernald State School, Waltham, Sunday, Aug. 20, at noon.

About 200 residents of the school will be treated to hot dogs, hamburgers, potato chips, drinks, watermelon and pastry. Entertainment will be provided by guitarist Iz Doveburd.

Stanley and Irene Gaffin of Newton chair this event. Trudy Young, also of Newton, is co-chairwoman.

Auburndale women seek meeting place for 64 year old club

The Auburndale Woman's Club is looking for a permanent location for future meetings. The organization, which has existed since 1914, has met at the Auburndale Club since 1922, but is now homeless since the decision of the owners . to sell the clubhouse.

The Woman's Club officers have set up a complete schedule of plans for the 1978-1979 season. Churches and synagogues have been cooperative in offering their facilities, and club members hope to find a permanent location for future meetings.

Any person or willing organization to assist may call Ms. Vivienne Silverstein, president, at 332-7877.

Bloomingdale's fashion store to open in Chestnut Hill Sept. 7

Department Bloomingdales, a division of Federated Stores, will open its full fashion store in Chestnut Hill on Sept. 7. This branch, the 16th in the Bloomingdales chain, is under construction in the building formerly occupied by R. H. Stearns at Rte. 9 and Hammond Pond Parkway.

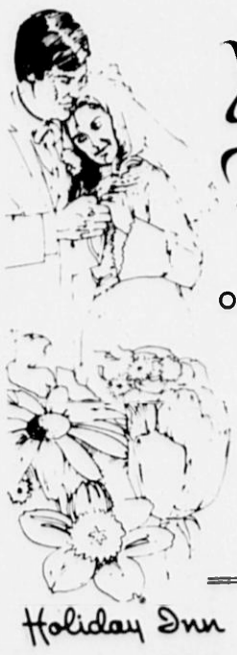

"With this branch we will bring to the Boston area all the excitement of our 59th Street store," says Marvin Traub, chairman of the board of Bloomingdales. "To emphasize our fashion concept and philosophy, we have included a men's department and a better ready to wear area which are among the largest in any of our branch stores. This space allocation enables us to include special shops, showcasing our best known designers."

"Based on the success of our existing Home Furnishings Store, our expansion in this market is a natural thing for us."

The 115,000 sq. ft. store will also feature children's clothing, accessories, cosmetics, and intimate apparel.

On the eve of the opening, Bloomingdales will host a black-tie benefit for the Sidney Farber Cancer Institute. Tickets are $50 each and may be obtained by writing Mrs. A. Donald Moncrieff, 26 Holly Rd., Marion, Mass. 02738.

White House Conference on Small Business opens today

Stuart Eizenstat, President Carter's donestic policy advisor, will speak in Boston today (Aug. 17) at the first-ever White House Conference on Small Business.

The conference, the first full-scale White House study of the needs of small business, will be held today and tomorrow (Thursday and Friday) at the Copley Plaza Hotel, Boston. U.S. Snall Business Administration chief A. Vernon Weaver, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and Boston Mayor Kevin White will welcome the conferees.

The SBA counsel for advocacy, Milton D. Stewart, will report on a regional study of small business activity in New England.

Nearly 400 representatives of small businesses in New England are expected to attend. They will select New England delegates to the National White House Conference on Small Business in Washington, scheduled for January, 1980. They will also discuss issues affecting small business, including capital development, tax policy and government regulations.

When he announced the new conference July 22, President Carter emphasized his commitment to a strong small-business community.

"I believe such a conference can help us identify the many special problems facing small business and design an agenda that can address these problems in a constructive way," President Carter said.

Conference proposals will help the President draw up a legislative package on small business.

Edison will tell all users about peak-load pricing

Boston Edison is mailing to more than 100,000 customers an explanation of optional electric rates based on the time they use electricity.

Although the Time of Use Rates (TOUR) are available to all Edison customers, the company is making a special mailing to those residential and business customers who may benefit from TOUR.

However, all 550,000 Boston Edison customers are being notified of TOUR through bill enclosures with their regular bills.

Any customer who expresses an interest in TOUR will be asked to fill out an application which will document their electric use and equipment. The application, when mailed back to Edison, will be analyzed and will enable the company to determine whether or not TOUR might save the customer money.

James Lydon, senior vice president of Edison, said "Generally, customers will not be able to save money without making significant changes in their life styles and that's the purpose of these rates."

Lydon said TOUR encourages customers to shift their electric use from periods of high demand (peak) to periods of less demand (off peak).

Currently, the biggest demand on Edison's equipment is from Monday to Friday during the nonths of mid June to mid October, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. The off peak period is from 10 p.m. to 9 a.m. and on weekends; the remaining hours are called shoulder periods.

Lydon said the optional rates are part of a joint effort by Boston Edison and the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities to conserve energy by utilizing a pricing mechanism. In this case, TOUR, also called peak-load pricing, is potential way to slow down customers' demand for electricity during peak periods. This should reduce the need for additional costly new generating and transmission equipment in the future, which in turn, will help slow rising electricity costs.

Every investor-owned utility in the state has been ordered by the DPU to formulate optional peak load pricing plans and rates.

CETA announces two programs for 14 persons

Two new On-the Job Training programs located in Waltham have just been announced by Newton Area Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) Training Manager Sally Everett.

Up to four people may learn to be machine set-up operators.

Up to 10 people may have the opportunity to learn printed circuit board (PCB) assembly. A night shift is also available in this program..

Under these CETA training programs each trainee is hired by the company and is treated as a regular employee of the company.

At the end of the training period, in the case of the machine set-up operators approximately 35 weeks, and in the case of the PCB assemblers about 11 weeks, successful trainees will remain with the company and receive a 10 percent wage increase.

Wages during the training period range from $3.25 to $3.83 per hour. CETA aids the employer by reimbursing the company for about half of the cost of the training.

To be eligible for CETA on-the-job training, applicants must be Title I eligible (unemployed at least 30 days, meet certain federally determined low-income guidelines, and live in Waltham, Newton, Lexington, Bedford, Brookline, Dover, Lincoln, Needham, Newton, Wellesley or Weston).

Applications for these and other CETA programs are available at the Newton Area CETA Training and Job Center, 141 Moody St., Waltham. For more information, call 899-7821.

'Hire II' has incentives for employing veterans

Hire II, a new program to assist Massachusetts businesses in need of skilled workers, is now being offered by the Division of Employment Security (DES), according to DES Director John Hodgman.

Hire II reimburses employers for up to 50 percent of the cost of training new workers who are v.eterans, and also provides assistance in recruiting and screening workers.

"Hire II, which saves Massachusetts businesses both time and money, should be especially valuable to those technical firms having difficulty finding skilled workers," Hodgman said.

The guidelines for participation in Hire II are simple. Employers who agree to hire and train workers for skilled jobs can be reimbursed 50 percent of the training period wages.

Training programs must not exceed six months in length, and wages must be at least $3.50 an hour. All training must be completed by Sept. 30, 1979..

All employees hired through the program must be veterans.

Hodgman emphasized that Hire II has been designed with employers' needs in mind, requiring a minimum of paperwork and red-tape. He stressed that employers will be doing their own hiring and training, with DES providing recruitment and screening assistance, and reimbursement for training costs.

According to Hadgman, "Hire II has many advantages for Massachusetts companies. New employees will be trained according to the specifications of the individual firm.

"The fact that the program provides career opportunities for qualified veterans should assure employers that they will be hiring a stable and dependable workforce," he said.

Funds for HIRE II are being provided by the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA).

Employers interested in HIRE II should contact Jack E Dempsey, contract specialist at the Needham Street DES Job Center, 964-3280, or call the Hire II project director at the program's toll free number, 1-800-392-6136.

Feeney installed as president of local Telephone Pioneers

Brendan F. Feeney of 17 Hagar St., Newton Lower Falls, was recently installed president of the Central Council of the Thomas Sherwin Chapter, Telephone Pioneers of America.

As president, Feeney will oversee the council's many charitable projects for the handicapped and disadvantaged.

Founded only a year ago, the council has sponsored many activities at the Cambridge and Somerville Program for the Alcoholic Rehabilitation (CASPAR) and the Protestant Guild for the Blind.

Last year the Sherwin Chapter donated specialized equipment for testing the heart's performance under stress to the joint Harvard School of Public Health and the Greater Boston YMCA community project.

This year the Pioneers plan to sponsor two life-saving programs. The Vial of Life program encourages people to place a special decal on their refrigerator indicating that a vial inside contains their medical history. The other program will offer medical alert bracelets to people with life-threatening allergies or ailments.

The 4200-member chapter is made up of four councils — Central, Intown, South, and West — all clustered within Greater Boston. Retired employees join Life Member Clubs.

Ms. Murphy named

Shelia Jeanne Murphy of Jamaica Plain has been appointed dean of students at Mt. Ida Junior College in Newton.

Ms. Murphy, formerly of Pawtucket, R.I., is a graduate of Stonehill College and attended Radcliffe Institute's program in publishing procedures.

Prior to her appointment as dean of students, Ms. Murphy was the director of residence at the college.

Looking over final plans for a joint effort on behalf of Muscular Dystrophy are (from left) Lt. Francis Howely and Chief Harvey Preble of the Newton Fire Department and Judith Munger, community relations representative for McDonald's. On Aug. 27, the two will field teams for a benefit softball game at 2 p.m. at Albemarle Field.

Jauregui appointed dean of Mount Ida Junior College

Mt. Ida Junior College has appointed Ignacio Jauregui of Allen Street, Needham, to the position of dean of the college.

Spanish by birth, Jauregui grew up in Shanghai where he received his LLB degree from Aurora University. He subsequently attended Harvard University and was awarded an M.A. in political science in 1951.

Before coming to Mt. Ida he taught at the American School in Manila and the graduate school of the University of Santo Tomas.

He has also conducted special seminars on American institutions for foreign students at Boston University, under the auspices of the State Department.

Jauregui has been chairman of the Liberal Arts department at the college for the past 15 years, and a member of the faculty since 1957.

Selecting a school is one of life's major decisions

Juniors and seniors going back to high school this fall will be asking themselves one of life's most important questions: "Where will I go to school after graduation?"

The answer will affect their earning power, career opportunities, and how and where they will spend the rest of their lives. Yet, many make the final decisions without investigating all the options, says Richard H. McClintock, president of ITT Educational Services, Inc., which is one of the country's largest networks of career training schools.

Ask questions

Whether you're planning to attend a junior or community college, a four-year college or university, or a post-secondary trade or business school, McClintock advises drawing up a list of questions to ask school officials, students, graduates and employers who regularly recruit at the school.

What are some of the most important questions to ask? "Find out the school's entrance standards," McClintock says.

"The school should enroll only those students who have the potential and motivation to succeed in their course of study. Also, check teacher credentials for academic training and work experience."

McClintock says another indication that the school can provide equality education is its accreditations, such as by state licensing, professional association approval, or by accrediting groups like the Association of Independent Colleges and Schools and the National Association of Trade and Technical Schools.

Talk to the school's placement director to find out if you'll receive assistance in finding a good job when you graduate.

"At proprietary schools like the business and technical schools operated by ITT Educational Services, ask to see the Placement Report required by the U.S. Office of Education for schools receiving federally insured loans, federal grants and Veteran's Administration approval," McClintock advises.

"This report specifies the number of students who have graduated from the school in each curriculum, how many requested placement assistance, the number who were placed in jobs related to their training, and their average starting salaries."

The placement department also should be able to tell you which employers visit the school regularly to interview students for jobs in your chosen field, McClintock says.

"Find out if the placement department surveys graduates and employers to determine if they are mutually satisfied," he adds. "Then talk to several employers and graduates yourself."

McClintock recommends visiting the school, both with and without classes in session to get a "feel" for the institution.

Check to see if textbooks and equipment are up-to-date and sufficient in numbers. Ask students what they think of the school and why they chose to go there.

"You also should determine what your education will cost," McClintock says. "In addition to out-of-pocket expenses for tuition and fees, room and board, books, supplies, travel and incidentals, consider how long you will be in school before you can begin working and earning a salary.

"The U.S. Department of Labor's Occupational Outlook Handbook, available at most libraries, can help you realistically estimate the starting salary in your field."

Headquartered in Indianapolis, ITT Educational Services operates 20 post-secondary business and technical schools in 11 states.

Last year, 94 percent of the ITTES graduates who were eligible, and requested placement assistance from their schools' placement departments, found jobs for which they were tained or training-related positions.

For a complete checklist of questions to ask when looking for a school, send 25 cents and a stamped, self-addressed business-sized envelope to "How To Shop For the Right School," P.O. Box 68326, Indianapolis, Ind. 46268.

Career education: one answer to a dilemma

By BRIAN A. BROWN

Where am I going: What kinds of jobs are there? To whom can I turn to learn about locating them?

These are some of the questions junior and senior high school students ask when they begin to think about their futures. At that point in their development they need guidance to reach some basic decisions about their lives.

An interest sparked in a particular career could set them on the right track to choose intelligently the course they need for career preparation.

One of the main problems with youths in this age bracket is their limited knowledge of vocations, apathy toward school, and lack of participation in the classroom.

Concurrent with that road-block to learning, teachers cannot prepare them with the basics and also provide career interests.

To supplement career guidance, the Exploring Division of the Boy Scouts of America, Greater New York Councils, developed a program called "Career Education Exploring." Through this project, students in New York City are exposed to a wide variety of job opportunities.

The program provides a better understanding of a future in a technical or professional career area. It also motivates youths to explore career possibilities, while giving them the opportunity for out-of-class learning experiences, which are an integral part of the career match-up.

Kathy Koffer, a Boy Scout Exploring Executive, developed the program three years ago. She succeeded in bringing the program to 14 schools and 800 students.

The project was so fruitful that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's Emergency School Aid Act funded a proposal that Ms. Koffer and a Scouting director submitted to increase the number of youths they could service.

The program allows a professional to match his expertise with students who are interested in his profession, even though they may not want to attend college, are physically handicapped, or have a slight learning disability.

Career sessions, held twice monthly during school hours, are coordinated with a different speaker who is a business professional, manager, or entreprenuer.

The program thus far has been hailed as a vehicle for reducing vocational stereotyping, increasing attendance through greater student interest, and providing positive role models for the students. And for gifted youths, it is the catalyst that can set career aspirations on target.

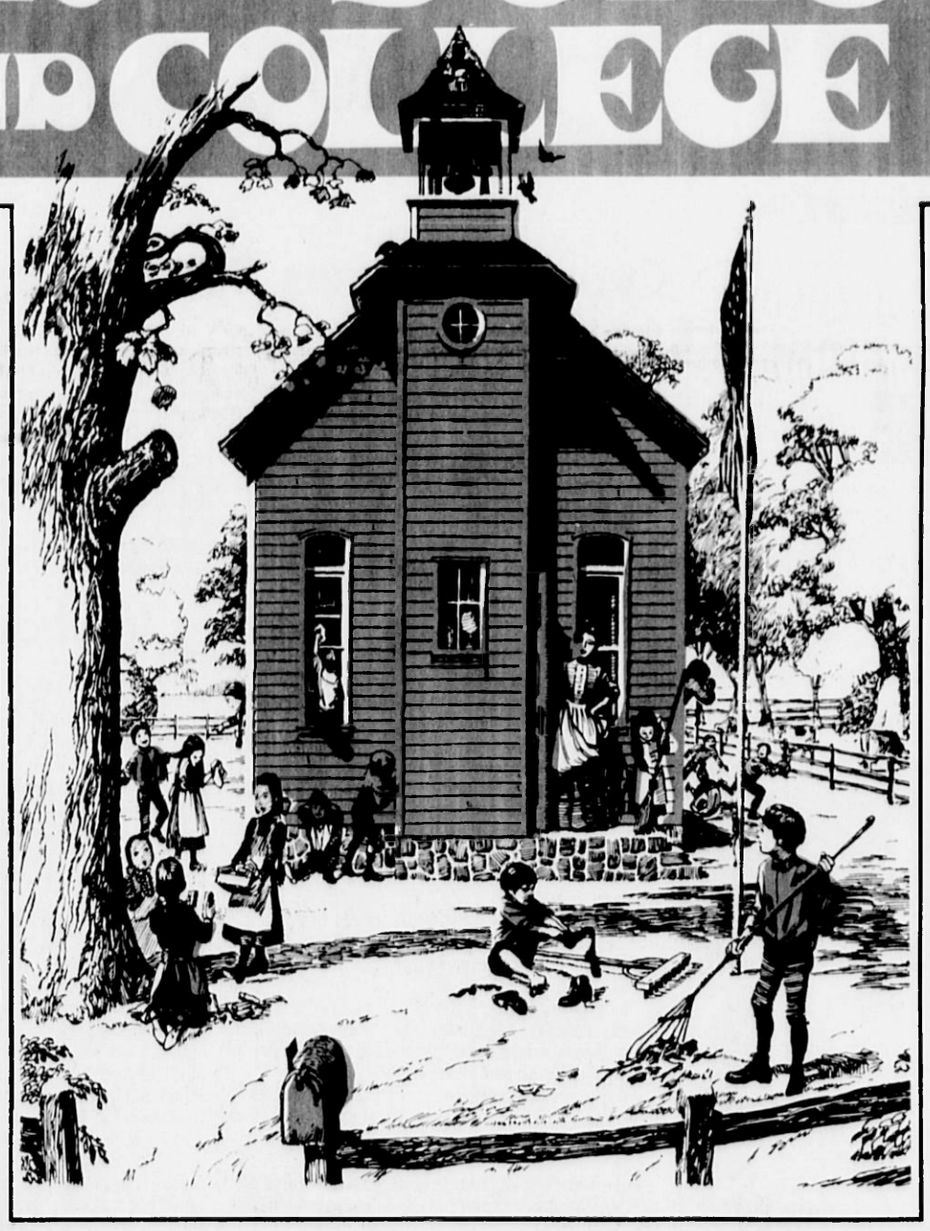

The scope of career sessions is broad and constantly expanding. Many corporations are involved, including American Airlines, Black Enterprise Magazine, the Bronx and Brooklyn Attorney's Office, CBS, Celanese Corp., Coast Guard, Consolidated Edison, and the New York Transit Authority, to mention a few of the companies that support the project with manpower and donations.

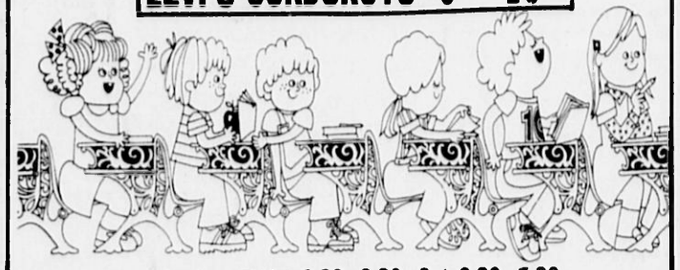

What does one teacher, used to dealing with apathetic students, say about the Career Education program? "This is the first thing in a long time that they've really been interested in. They've never been exposed to anything like this before.

"It took me months to get them off the backs of buses and the streets . . . But they're overcoming their background, though it took a lot of doing."

The baby we save could be yours.

Dormitory hot plate cooks will love versatile tri-pan

Rejoice, all ye dorm-dwellers who cope with one-burner cooking! The tri-pan is here — a three-sectioned, non-stick skillet that makes it possible to cook or heat several different foods at once.

Day or night favorite

This paragon of pans, made in France by T-Fal, is a boon at breakfast-time (bacon, eggs, hash browns all hot at the same time). It's great, too, for late-night snacks and impromptu parties.

Never a mess

Biggest boon of all is that patented super-slick interior featuring 100 percent pure PTFE. No soaking, no scrubbing, no mess—ever! One swish of a soapy cloth does it.

Triple the fun!

Impress your friends with a tri-pan party—and the following foods dear to every student's heart:

PIZZA DIP
(Makes about 2 cups)

1 can (8 ounces) tomato sauce
1 tablespoon instant minced onion
¼ teaspoon oregano
½ cup chopped stuffed olives
1 can (4½ ounces) deviled ham

Spoon mixture into one section of T-Fal non-stick tri-pan. Heat until bubbly. Serve with taco chips and potato chips for dipping.

DORM PARTY featuring terrific food is a cinch to give when you've got the tri-pan. New three-sectioned, non-stick skillet from France can serve up three hot snacks on just one burner—with no clean-up problems to spoil the fun!

COCKTAIL FRANKS IN BEER
Serves 4)
1 pound cocktail franks
1 tablespoon instant minced onion
Beer

GARLIC NUTS
(Serves 4)

½ pound mixed salted nuts
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Mix ingredients and spoon into section of T-Fal non-stick tri-pan. Stir gently with wooden or plastic spoon over medium heat until nuts are hot.

Healthful tasty after school snacks

After a long, busy day at school, many youngsters rush home in search of a tasty "pick-me-up."

If you're a concerned mother who's wondering if after-school "munchies" interfere with your children's dinner appetites, the American Bottled Water Association offers these light, low-calorie snack suggestions:

Young children will enjoy finding portions of fresh or canned fruit—pineapple, grapes, orange sections, or even melon chunks—waiting for them in the refrigerator. Another delicious, healthful treat is applesauce sprinkled with cinnamon.

Instead of the usual sugary and carbonated drinks, keep a container of fresh, clean-tasting bottled domestic water in the refrigerator.

Bottled domestic water is a perfect thirst-quenching beverage for "washing-down" any snack without spoiling your youngsters' appetites.

For the child with a "sweet tooth," prepare a mixture of naturally-sweet raisins and nuts, or a cup of crunchy whole grain cereal.

On a hot day, homemade ice pops, made with fruit juices and pieces of fresh fruit, are not only fun to eat but refreshing as well.

If your children are vegetable lovers, they will enjoy nibbling on crisp, garden-fresh vegetables. Cut some carrot and celery sticks and add some olives and slices of cheese.

Youngsters will enjoy this mini-antipasto while waiting for mom to come home, and you'll know they've eaten their daily salad.

FANTASY AND REALITY MERGE in this child's room right out of a storybook starring Syroco's Raggedy Ann and Andy plaques, pegged Tidy-Up and delightful clock. Of durable plastic, they are all fingerprint-free and very affordable. Storage cabinets offer plenty of room for growing, always a must for youngsters off to school. ## Evening classes Sept. 18 at Aquinas

The Center for Continuing Education of Aquinas Junior College, Newton, will begin the Fall term on September 18. On September 11 (6-8 p.m.) registration will be held at the Newton campus. (Registration for courses may be made on special mail-in forms.) Fall semester classes will begin Monday evening, September 18. Courses will be given Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings from September through December.

Offerings will include business subjects (principles of accouting, business mathematics, shorthand and typewriting); enrichment courses (English composition, stenoscript and general psychology); and a workshop for upgrading secretarial skills (typewriting, office procedures and machin transcription; and EMT (Emergency Medical Technician) program.

For adults who prefer to take courses during the day time many subjects are open to them. Classes for the day program begin on September 11. Registrations should be completed by September 7.

Information regarding courses may be obtained by telephoning 244-8134 or 244-009.

Adults are tackling keyboard

Adults are joining kids in the annual back-to-school march, taking continuing education courses in greater numbers every year.

And piano lessons are among the most popular in the adult education repertoire. According to a recent Gallup survey, some fourteen million adult Americans regularly play the piano.

Increased leisure time is partly responsible for new-found adult interest in piano, but playing the keyboard also helps adults ease the tensions of modern living.

Piano playing is personally rewarding too, as novice adult musicians successfully meet the challenge of employing completely different skills than those used in their jobs.

"I can forget my day-to-day troubles and completely relax at the piano," explains one Midwest executive who had never played the piano before he started lessons a few years back.

Adults across the country echo his sentiments — indeed, a recent survey shows that 83 percent of all Americans wish they could play a musical instrument.

If you are one of those Americans, and you'd like to try your hands at the keyboard, don't let your age hold you back.

Age has nothing to do with an ear for music or achievement level—if your desire is there. And if you did take piano lessons as a child, chances are that your motor skills are just dormant, waiting for you to nurture them again.

For any adult who decides to take up piano, the National Piano Foundation offers some tips for musical success:

Whether you had previous instruction or not, whether you were good at the keyboard or not, your motivation for taking piano lessons today is different than it was 30 years ago. If you want to learn to play now, you can.

Set aside a private time for daily practice. It's important to have a piano in your home and a time and place you can call your own, if only for half an hour.

Find a teacher who is skilled in handling novice adult pianists. Teaching adults is different from teaching children.

Your instructor should understand you are interested in a rewarding hobby, and not necessarily in learning to perform with perfection.

Group classes may offer a good solid beginning. Such groups can give you strong support from fellow novices. Just be sure you will have some of the instructor's individualized attention.

Have a goal in mind. While you shouldn't expect to master a difficult sonata or a complicated jazz number right away, a good teacher can help you meet your objectives in a reasonable amount of time.

Talk over the musical pieces you'd most like to play with your teacher.

If the individual piece is too difficult for your current skills and abilities, the instructor can suggest another, more readily mastered, piece in the same style.

College survival kit helps freshman

If there's one thing that all students going off to college for the first year have in common, it's probably that age-old fear of the unknown.

How will it compare with high school? Will I be able to do all the work? How will my grades be? Will I have to study all of the time?

Now there's relief at hand for all anxious freshmen in the form of a College Survival Kit, an all-inclusive manual about college ways and means.

The College Survival Manual was compiled by Irv Brechner during his senior year of college at the request of friends and fellow students who marvelled at his ability to excel in his academic work while keeping up an active and varied extracurricular schedule.

The proper use of time is the theme which runs throughout the booklet, for as Mr. Bechner states, "the difficulty of the work is not the problem. The proper use of time is the main obstacle which causes the collapse of many students."

There are no regulated study halls, no daily assignments, no supervising parental figures at college to monitor a student's progress. College provides the student with complete freedom of time—freedom that can be used for highly creative purposes.

The College Survival Kit gives dozens of hints for getting off to a good start, provides proven study techniques successful exam-taking methods, pointers on paper writing, and much more.

If you're headed off for your first year of college and worried about what it will be like, the College Survival Kit is available from Mr. Brechner for $3.00 per manual. The address is COLLEGE SURVIVAL KIT, Dept. M., Box 264WOB, West Orange, NJ 07052.

Thinking thrifty will stretch fashion looks

Heading back to school, economy-minded students need to make the most of limited budgets.

Before Orientation Week, Homecoming and all the other rites of fall on campus, savvy students will keep costs down when shopping for clothes and personal care products, or finding a new hairstyle that's right for school.

Experts at Helene Curtis offer these tips on economy for coeds migrating back to campus this fall:

Economy starts at the top with a short, easy-care hairstyle as breezy as a crisp fall day. Natural or permed for curl, a good haircut frees a coed from the expense and fuss of rollers and dryer because it dries naturally and falls right into place.

Save money by buying large sizes of bath soap, creams and other frequently-used items. Suare Dandruff Shampoo by Helene Curtis, in the economical 16-ounce bottle, is gentle on hair and scalp and leaves hair feeling healthy, clean and easy to manage. And, like all Suave products, it's easy on the pocketbook, too.

Keep laundry costs down: check clothing labels for easy-care fabrics; buy large economy-size detergents to do more loads for less; and wash full loads to save money and the nation's energy.

Choose the layered look for fashion. Modernize last year's dirndl skirt and sweater with a new unstructured blazer. Add style to a big, roll-sleeve blouse with a Chinese-quilted vest. Match slim-fitting jeans and corduroy slacks with this year's bigger sweater that starts loose on top and slims down to hug hips.

Update inexpensively with new accessories like whimsical stickpins or leather rope belts that wrap two or three times around the waist. Long, loosely-tied scarves and gold chains can double as necklaces or belts to save more money.

Penny-wise students can look their fall fashion best and still have change to spare if they ace the course in shopping economics.

Speed reading for students from ages 10 to 70

Based on an established, national program, E.R.S. offers a unique written guarantee that a student will at least triple their reading speed with equal or improved comprehension. Most people do considerably better and are pleasantly surprised. Adults read at an average rate of 250 words per minute. The E.R.S. goal is to increase that rate to 1500-3000 words per minute on most general material, with full comprehension. Reading rates of 5-10,000 words per minute are not uncommon. This means that a person can read an average size paperbook in 20-30 minutes! To date, the fastest reading speed attained at an E.R.S. class is 81,000 words per minute.

Depending on natural methods and personalized instruction, the program does not use machines or devices. Normally consisting of one class per week for a period of ten weeks, many people have successfully completed the course in as little as five weeks. With small classes limited to ten, students proceed at their own pace, with a great deal of individual attention. Because of this structure, enrollment is continuous which means a new student may enroll at any time. Once enrolled in the program, a person is entitled to return for refresher purposes at any time.

Because the E.R.S. method consists of informal and non-competitive classes, students from age 10 to 70 can attend classes together. There are frequently many family groups enrolled in the course. Instruction is by experienced classroom teachers, all of whom have earned a Masters degree in Education and have successfully completed the E.R.S. course.

Tom Ellis joins WCVB-TV (Channel 5) News team Sept. 4

BOSTON — Veteran television newscaster Tom Ellis will join the Emmy Award-winning WCVB-TV (Channel 5) news team as of September 4, according to an announcement made today by WCVB-TV news director Jim Thistle.

Ellis is a newscaster with 10 years experience in prime television news on network-affiliated stations in Boston and New York. He will be appearing on WCVB-TV's "Newscenter 5 at Six" and "Newscenter 5 at Eleven" newscasts. In addition to his role as anchorperson on the newscasts, Ellis will also be doing location reporting away from the newsroom and serve as host-reporter for a number of news department special projects.

Ellis is no stranger to Boston television viewers, having been an anchor-erson on WBZ-TV's newscasts from 1968-1975. During thos years, Ellis worked for and with many of his new WCVB-TV colleagues; including news director Jim Thistel, who held that same position at the Westinghouse outlet from 1971 to 1973.

Thistle states, "Tom is an extremely hard and conscientious worker and an extraordinary communicator. I am delighted that he will be joining the outstanding group of broadcast journalists at Channel 5. I expect that present anchorpersons Jack Hynes, Chet Curtis, Natalie Jacobson, Anne McGrath, Jim Boyd, and Bob Clinkscale will all remain extremely important contributors to present, future, and possibly expanded news programming."

Commenting on future changes in WCVG-TV's ness operation, Thistle said the addition of Ellis to the "Newscenter 5" team is part of a major effort to increases the news staff. This process began in May with the hiring of meteorologist Dick Albert and consumer reporter Paula Lyons. Albert is slated to begin his on-air reporting July 31, while Lyons will join the news team on August 8.

Born in Klein's Prairie, Texas, Ellis began his broadcasting career in 1955 as an on-air announcer at KCNC Radio (AM), Ft. Worth, Texas. He then moved to a similar position at KVET Radio (AM) in Austin, Texas, and KWED Radio (AM) in Seguin, Texas. From 1958 to 1968, he was a news reporter at KONO Radio (AM) in San Antonio, Texas, and an anchorpoerson, reporter, producer, and news editor at KONO-TV (San Antonio, Texas).

1968, Ellis joined WBZ-TV, Boston, as anchorperson during the 6 and 11 p.m. newscasts. He remained at WBX-TV until 1975, when he joined WABC-TV, New York. During his two years with the ABC-owned and operated New York station, Ellis first anchored the 6 p.m. Newscast then later moved to the 11 p.m. news program.

Vasa days this weekend

Massachusetts District Lodge No. 2 Vasa Order of America will hold its annual Vasa Days Aug. 19 and 20 at the S.A.C. Park at 438 Lake St., Shrewsbury.

Festivities will open with a dance on Saturday night at 8 to the music of Nils Lundin's orchestra from Quincy.

On Sunday, from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., a dinner will be served. At 2 p.m., the program will feature the dancers and singers of Spiran Lodge 93 from Rockport. A $500 scholarship will be awarded to a student.

There will be games and pony rides for children. Refreshments will be served after the program. Proceeds of the day will go to the Scholarship Fund.

Good dental care for children

Just before school begins, there's a whirl of activity. Shopping excursions are combined with trips to the doctor and the dentist, at which point many children become uneasy.

Wise parents will make an effort to ease their children's minds, and calm their irrational and unnecessary fears.

The need for some reassurance beforehand is likely to be particularly strong if this is the child's first visit. The American Dental Association has some excellent and most practical tips for parents to make use of prior to taking their children to the dentist those crucial first few times.

A good deal of the child's anxiety stems from fear of the unknown. The best way to conquer this is to prepare the child beforehand. Telling the child exactly what is involved clears the air, and allows the child to think about the situation for a while, bringing up any questions as they occur.

With toddlers particularly, the best way to make them comfortable about the upcoming visit is to act it out first, in a play situation. Play "dentist" with your child, reversing roles if the child desires, or help your child to play "dentist" with a favorite doll or stuffed animal.

Make sure your child knows that you will be there during the session at the dentist's, for that knowledge will be the greatest comfort of all.

If the dentist discovers cavities, your child in all likelihood will have to be prepared for the unfamiliar experience of the drill. Explain to your child exactly what is going to happen to allay his or her anxieties.

Another way of reassuring children in this situation is to make them feel that they are a part of the process. Some children like to use a hand-held mirror to watch the dentist at work.

Choosing a dentist is particularly important. You may decide to use your family dentist, or you may opt for a practitioner who specializes in work with children. In either case, don't be afraid to ask the dentist you have chosen any questions that may occur to you before the visit.

Of course, dental care is not something that takes place only in a dentist's office. Dentists themselves agree that the most important part of tooth care goes on in the home. Your dentist or hygienist will be glad to help you learn the proper way of cleaning teeth, so you can teach your children in turn.

Proper brushing is the key to healthy teeth, so help your children to use a toothbrush, which at first will seem rather unwieldy in such small hands. Also, encourage your children to learn to use dental floss, and show them the proper method for doing so.

Your dentist can tell you a great deal about food, and give you guidelines as to what is good for teeth and what is not.

Teaching your children good eating habits early will help them to establish a diet regimen that will stand them in good stead for years to come. For free booklets about teeth and dental care, write to the American Dental Association, Dept. M, 211 East Chicago Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60611.

New peanut butter fun

Almost every kid from three to 93 loves good old-fashioned peanut butter, whether it's spread thickly on bread with jelly for the classic "P and J" sandwich or just scooped out of the jar (by finger, if mother's not watching!)

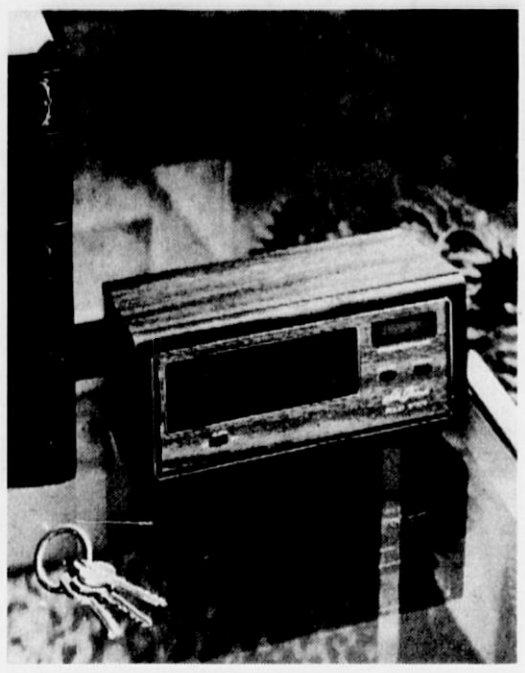

Peanut butter is not only one of the country's most loved sandwich spreads; it also has the benefit of being a highly nutritious food, rich in protein.

Why not try some exotic new tricks with peanut butter that will delight the taste buds of students at lunch or during recess with their surprising combinations.

We've all had peanut butter and jelly sandwiches. But did you ever combine peanut butter with thinly-sliced hamburger dill pickles for a tangy new treat? Or, if you prefer your peanut butter sweetened, a peanut butter and banana sandwich is a true delicacy.

Peanut butter is the perfect topping for celery sticks, which are apt to be discarded by the lunchbox set if not "jazzed up" a bit. Peanut butter also goes well with apple slices, pears, even onions!

Or, for a great snack, pack off a small jar of peanut butter, some crackers and a knife and let the kids go to it!

BEING SPOILED BY THOSE LAZY DAYS of summer leisure may make it tough for students to get to classes on time. Gift one or more with this smartly styled Speed-Read alarm clock from Seth Thomas. This solid state speed-read electric clock has no moving parts and features a Relax-Alarm™ that repeats every nine minutes till turned off.

Geishecker's Jeanery more than just jeans

Geishecker's Jeanery - the "tiny store with the big selection of Levi's" - will be open longer hours for back-to-school shopping. The Dedham Square store will be open Monday through Friday 'til 9, from August 28th through September 8th. The new Geishecker's Jeanery in the Randolph Shopping Center is presently open 10 til 9 Monday through Friday.

"We have as large a group of corduroy Levi's as ever," says Frank Geishecker, "— in fact, twelve colors, as well as the usual big range of denims. But now we also have hundreds of the new chinos, plus ten colors in wide-wale corduroy slacks. And the newest sensation—washable flannel slacks."

In addition, Geishecker's Jeanery has all kinds of tops—plaids, flannels, knits—to go with jeans. The store, now in its fifth year, prides itself on having most competitive prices on Levis, as well as on the other brands of tops, jeans, and slacks.

Back-to-schoolers wear neat-looking separates

Much to the delight of both parents and teachers, the back-to-school set will happily forsake faded jeans and rumpled tee-shirts in favor of neat-looking separates for fall.

Classic look

The new, no-frills clothing includes long-sleeve turtleneck tops; menswear-type shirts; short, fitted wing-tip vests; classic blazers; both tunics and jumpers; swingy gored skirts and slim pants circled with striped belts.

The fabrics for school clothes are sportswear-oriented solids, conventional and stylized plaids of Acrilan acrylic, Monsanto polyester and blends.

Easy-care clothing

This season, the emphasis is on durability and comfort as well as on easy maintenance. Monsanto Wear-Dated clothes assure one year's normal wear, refund or replacement when returned, postage prepaid, with tag and sales slip to Monsanto.

The knowledge of newspapers

How much effect will having a newspaper in the house, or using one in conjunction with schoolwork, have on children? Quite a bit, according to a report published recently by the Newspaper Advertising Bureau, entitled "The Influence of Childhood Exposure to Newspapers on Adult Newspaper Habits."

According to the study, in which more than 3,000 adults were interviewed, four out of five recalled that there was generally a newspaper at home during their adolescence.

Today, 70 percent of these people read a newspaper regularly.

Almost half (43 percent) recalled that a newspaper had been introduced into the classroom as a regular part of their schoolworkd.

Today, 66 percent of these adults read a newspaper frequently, as opposed to 62 percent of those who did not have exposure to a newspaper in school!

Dormitory food for thought

So you're off to college, but you'd rather not eat on the meal plan? Before you go, make sure to pack these necessities: dishes and silverware (service for two, so you can invite a guest up for a dorm room feast), some pots and pans, a hot plate, an electric percolator, perhaps even a toaster. But first, be sure to check dorm rules to find out what is and isn't allowed at your school. To store food, consider renting a small refrigerator (many schools provide this service). Invest in a collection of condiments and spices, and you'll find that you're able to turn simple meals into gourmet delights.

The first week in August marked a beehive of activities at the West Newton Common. Highlights of the various program included - a Pro Soccer Clinic, featuring the New England Tea Men, the Eddie Pellagrini Baseball Clinic, a tour of Channel 5, where the youngsters had an opportunity to watch a broadcast life, as well as meet the television personalities. On Wednesday, August 2nd, the youngsters were involved in special arts and crafts projects, under the direction of Bunny Aronson. That evening the youngsters attended the last regular season game of the New England Tea Men at Schafer Stadium in Foxboro. On Friday, August 4th, rain dampened the scheduled outdoor activities, but not the fun as the West Newton children attended the film, "The Revenge of the Pink Panther", at the Cinema in Framingham. These activities, as well as a full compliment of daily programs, such as weight lifting, a jogging club, Midget, Junior and Senior League Baseball, and park games for all agea. The West Newton Common is under the leadership of Brian Vallely. Congratulations to West Newton's Jeff Sampson for winning the State Hula-Hoop championship. Jeff bested a field of 28 youngsters from all over the Commonwealth and will now go on to the Regional Tournament held in Connecticut. Jeff, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jason Sampson of 126 Webster Street, has been a champ before, having won the State title three times and the Newton Championship for the fifth time. Good luck and best wishes as you quest for the National Title and a trip to Georgia.

National League Baseball Championships

Finals of the National League Baseball championship series will be held this week. Entering into the final best of 5 game series will be the Newton Upper Falls Team, coached by John Bibbo, who defeated the St. Bernard's team, coached by Tom Pugilese and John Cupo. The other finalist will be the Newton Centre team, coached by Rick Ciccone and Henry Taillacq, who upset the Newton Boys Club, regular season champions, who were coached by Steve Smith and John Parker.

International Division

The International Division of the Newton Recreation's Twilight Baseball Program concluded its regular season on Saturday, August 5th. Final standings in the Copp Division were as follows: 1st - Highlanders; tie for 2nd, Boys Club and Trans National Travelers; 4th - Totem Pole Braves, 5th - Carson Post AL.L, 6th - Upper Falls Lions and 7th - Sacred Heart. In the Murphy Division, the standings went this way - 1st - Oak Hill; 3-way tie for second with Newton Home Realty, Newton Sports Center and Post 440 A.L., 5th - St. Bernard's, 6th - Auburndale Warriors and 7th - Elks Red Sox. The playoff pairings will be as follows: Totem Pole vs Highlanders, Boys Club vs Trans National Travelers, Newton Home Realty vs Oak Hill Cubs and Newton Sports Center vs Post 440 AL.L, to be played the week of August 7th.

NEWTON RECREATION DEPARTMENT SUNDIAL TENNIS CITY-WIDE ADULT TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Starting the evening of September 8th, and continuing through September 10, 1978, the Newton Recreation Department will host a mixed doubles, a men's singles and doubles and women's singles and doubles Sundial Tennis Tournament at the Newton North High School Tennis courts.

Proceeds from all Sundial Tournaments directly benefit work being done at the famous Eye Research Institute of Retinal Foundation.

This year, in addition to receiving engraved silver trophies for winners and finalists, all winners will be hosted by New Hampshire's famous Waterville Valley Resort and the Snowy Owl Inn in the fall of 1979, to play in the Sundial Championships. Entry fee only $5.00 per person, per event.

Registration will be held at Burr Park field house on Waverly Avenue, Newton Corner, across from the Bigelow Junior High School on the following dates:

Monday, August 28 - 6-8 p.m.
Tuesday - August 29 - 6-8 p.m.
Wednesday - August 30 6-8 p.m.
Thursday - August 31 6-8 p.m.
Friday - September 1 - 6-8 p.m.
Saturday - September 2 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.
Sunday September 3 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.
Monday September 4 - 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.
Tuesday September 5 6-8 p.m.
Wednesday September 6 6-8 p.m.
Thursday September 7 6-8 p.m.

Volley for charity

The management of Waterville Valley Resort has announced that they will again be hosting the second annual Sundial Championships September 8 to 10. The winners from all Sundial amateur mixed-doubles tournaments qualify to compete in this delightful weekend.

Ellen Waystack, Director of Sundial Tennis states, "The careful thought with which the Waterville Valley Management puts into this well organized event and the lovely surroundings makes this one of the tennis highlights of the year."

Waterville Valley is one of the largest tennis facilities in the eastern United States offering eighteen championship quality clay tennis courts. Sundial winners will be staying at the luxurious Snowy Owl Inn, which has been judged the best-designed mountain lodge in the United States.

Tournament play will begin 9 am on Saturday and will continue through most of the day. Finals will be played on the Stadium Court Sunday beginning at 10:30 am. There will also be a consolation tournament for first-round losers.

Waterville Valley welcomes family and friends of the Sundial player and is offering reduced rates for accommodations.

For further information on hosting or participating in a Sundial Tournament contact: Ellen Waystack, Director of Sundial Tennis, Eye Research Institute, 20 Staniford Street, Boston, MA 02114 (617) 742-3140.

Learn tennis

There are still a few openings for the tennis classes beginning the weeks of August 21 and September 13 on the Newton YMCA's new plexi-pave courts.

The instructors are professional teacher members of Tennis Services, Inc. Their combined instructional experience total more than 20 years.

Classes are available for four levels of players: beginners, advanced beginners, intermediates and advanced. Classes are offered in the morning and at night.

For more information and registration details, phone Tennis Services, 277-6202.

Previewing Longwood tennis action

By STEVE EPSTEIN

There is a great deal of prestige involved in the U.S. Professional Tennis Championships which will open Monday at the Longwood Cricket Club in Chestnut Hill, and continue until August 28.

The tournament has a tradition of great competition and thrilling play. It is an awaited stop on the tour for many of the star pros.

Once again, the Longwood Cricket Club along with its sponsor, The New England Merchants National Bank, have combined an appealing tournament atmosphere with the incentive of $200,000 prize money to bring 64 of the world's top players to Chestnut Hill for the week.

Both the singles and doubles competitions should prove to be exciting for the thousands of area tennis fans who annually turn out to see the matches. Each year new attendance records are set as the interest in tennis continues to grow to epidemic proportions in the U.S.

Last year's matches had their disappointing side. Top seed Jimmy Connors was forced to pull out of the tournament after the third round with the threat of aggravating an injury just one week before the U.S. Open. Rain also came on the third day of competition forcing a ticket switch which was disorganized at best. Many people were disillusioned by Longwood, but the tournament organizers have worked hard to bring back a championship field.

The tournament's backers knew the reputation of Longwood. All of the greats in the last decade and a half have played here in the U.S. Pro. Rod Laver had won here five times. Ken Rosewall had won here three times. Bjorn Borg topped three of the strongest fields ever at Longwood in 1974-76 to show his dominance of center court with consecutive titles. Great tennis had to be the order of the day, and this is what the tournament has tried to achieve in the last few months.

Although none of the top five players in the world are slated to make an appearance as of press time, the fifth through tenth ranked players will all be there, as will half of the top 50 pros on the tour. The draw will consist of 50 regular touring pros, two players who are invited and do not have to qualify, 4 special "wild card" selections who also do not have to qualify (Usually young players on the tour such as John McEnroe last year), and finally eight players who win a place in the tournament by winning a qualifying tournament held at Longwood on Sunday, August 20.

As an added note, usually this qualifying tournament is open to the public. For any real tennis fan who doesn't mind seeing great play from players he or she probably hasn't heard of, the qualifying tournament is a great deal of fun to see. It usually only costs a dollar or two donation to charity. You won't see any top ranking pros, but the tennis is enjoyable and inexpensive for the real tennis fanatic.

Last year, Patricio Cornejo, who had qualified by way of the special qualifying tournament, reached the quarter-finals. Often this tournament is a good showcase for young talent. It's a good way to spend a Sunday afternoon. It starts around noon.

After the 64-man draw is selected, they will begin play Monday, August 21, at noon. Throughout the week until Sunday the 27th, there will be two sessions of tennis, one starting at noon, the other at 7:30. The ticket prices run from $5 to $11. The prices are a few dollars more expensive in the evening, and they also get more expensive as the tournament gets into its later rounds on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. There will only be one session on Monday, August 28. This is the final at 7:30. If you don't already have tickets, plan to watch it on Channel 2. It is always a sell-out, weeks in advance.

Finally, to the draw. There will be many players to look for. Many of the players appearing are known throughout the world. Others will cause a wide-eyed look from even the most studied tennis observer, and the response when his name is announced, 'who's he?'. Here are a few of the favorites to win the tournament, and a rundown of their past performances here at Longwood in the last couple of years.

MANUEL ORANTES

Orantes comes to Longwood as this year's defending champion. He had been seeded 3rd last year, but became the tournament favorite when top seed Jimmy Connors was sidelined due to injury after the third round, and second seed Brian Gottfried was upset in the third round by Chilean Jaime Fillol. Orantes defeated Ivan Molina of Columbia in the quarter-finals, Fillol in the semi-finals, and finally polished off American Eddie Dibbs in the final, 7-6, 7-5, 6-4.

The 1977 victory was a great comeback for the 29 year old from

Eddie Dibbs

Barcelona, Spain. He has always loved to play at Longwood, and came here in 1976 despite an injury. He was 4th seeded despite his handicapping injury, but was defeated in the first round easily by Italian Paulo Bertolucci. It was sad to see this champion play so badly, but he came back last year to win his first Longwood title. He returns this year as the 8th ranked player in the world. He is a tough competitor on clay, and should be one of the favorites in the tourney, as he has been playing well this year.

EDDIE DIBBS

Dibbs returns to Chestnut Hill with the reputation of being a bridesmaid. His Longwood career mirrors his career in many major tournaments, showing the ability to get to the later rounds, but never to go all the way. This year, however, things may be very different for Eddie Dibbs.

The 27 year old from Miami Beach, Florida lost in 1975 and in 1976 at Longwood to eventual champion Bjorn Borg. Unseeded and virtually unknown in 1975, Dibbs bowed to Borg in the second round. In '76, however, Dibbs was seeded 7th. He met up with Borg this time in the semi-finals. The result was the same, but Dibbs fought much harder before being overtaken by the Swedish tennis machine.

Last year, there was no Bjorn Borg to get in his way. He came into the tournament as the fourth seed. He made it to the final after defeating Dick Stockton in the quarter-finals, and Wojtek Fibak in the semi-finals. Although he lost to Orantes in the final in straight sets, his play throughout the tournament was superb. He comes to Longwood as the 6th ranked player in the world, the highest ranking of any player in the tourney. Dibbs is also the champion over Orantes in the Volvo Tournament played three weeks ago in North Conway, N.H. Maybe this time Eddie Dibbs will throw the bouquet instead of catching it.

RAUL RAMIREZ

Raul Ramirez of Ensanada, Mexico is the 7th ranked player in the world. His list of accomplishments in tournaments all over the world is lengthy, and his efforts at Longwood are part of this list. Ramirez is really known more for his doubles prowess than his ability as a singles player, but this is slowly changing. The 25 year old Ramirez and his regular doubles partner Brian Gottfried were the champions at Longwood in 1975. They were the top team in the world for a couple of years.

Ramirez did not play at Longwood in 1977, but in the two years previous his play was outstanding. In 1976, Ramirez made news at Longwood when he defeated doubles partner Gottfried in the third round and then ousted top seeded Jimmy Connors in the quarter-finals by scores of 2-6, 6-2, 6-3. Connors had won the title in '73, and then had not returned to defend his title in '74 or '75. Borg had won in both years, and in 1976 Connors returned to Chestnut Hill to take a shot at Borg. Ramirez killed this prespective final by upsetting Connors. Ramirez was eventually beaten in the semi-finals by Harold Solomon.

Ramirez had been a quarter-finalist in 1975 as well as co-doubles champion. To go along with his victory over Connors in singles, there was no such glory in doubles in 1976. The defending champions were top seeded, but defeated in the first round by Australians Mark Edmondson and John Marks. However, Ramirez has always played well on clay and specifically, on Longwood's clay. He could very well make a run for the title.

CORRADO BARAZZUTTI

Although he is undoubtedly one of the world's top young players, Barazzutti has had little luck winning on the clay of Longwood. The young Italian was 10th seeded in 1976, but was upset by Australia's Mark Edmondson in the second round in straight sets. Last year, he was again a second round loser as the 12th seed. He continues to play well in Europe and on the American tour, but Longwood has been his nemesis. He has raised his ranking to 10th in the world, and if he can figure out his problems at Longwood and correct them, he could finally see a final this year.

HAROLD SOLOMON

Solomon delighted the New England tennis world two weeks ago when he decided to play at Longwood. He was a late, but welcome entry to the field. This native of Silver Springs, Maryland who will be 26 in September is noted for his "moon balls". Solomon has always been known as a player who uses his lob to his advantage. At only 5-6 and weighing 130 pounds, Solly realized that due to his lack of size, he had to compensate with finesse. Unlike many of the dominating serve and volley players who dominated the game when he broke in, Solly was willing to stay back at the baseline and use the lob and groundstrokes to win matches, and win he does. His style has been adopted by many young players without great height, and this method is effective, if not thrilling to watch.

Although he didn't play Longwood last year, he did well here in his two previous tournaments. Clay is his surface, and this has been evident at Longwood.

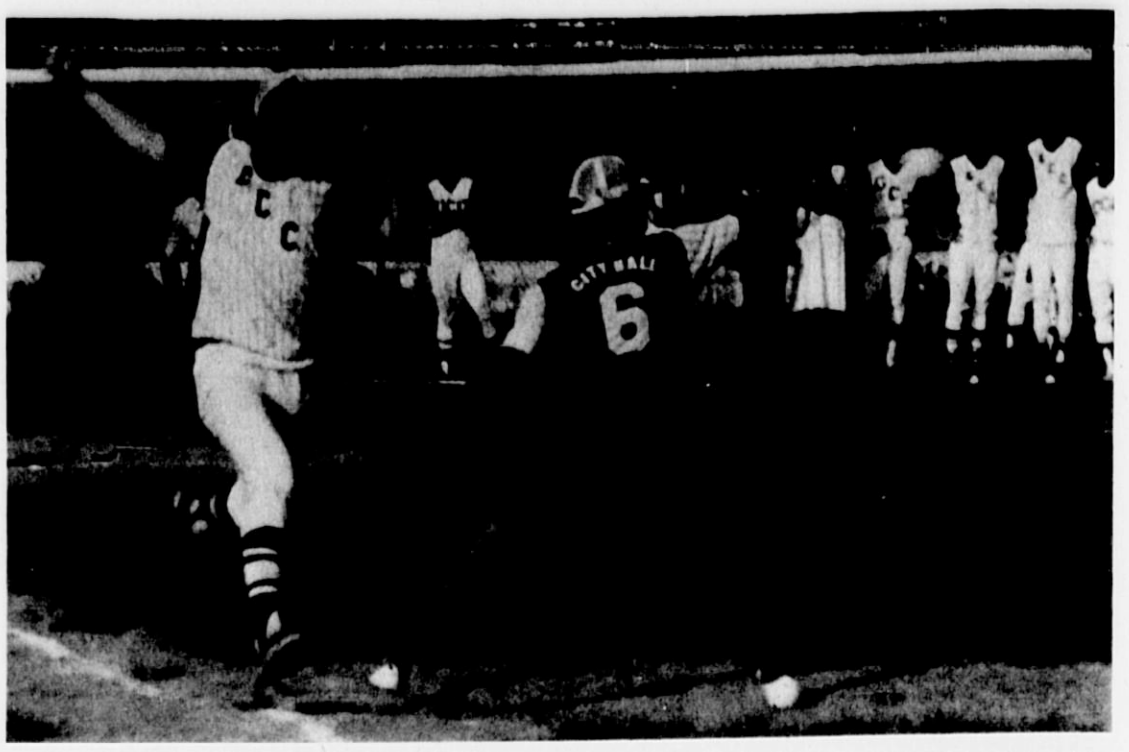

In 1975, Solly was 9th seeded and played well before being defeated by Raul Ramirz in the tourney's third round. However, Solomon got his revenge in 1976. He was the 8th seed, and after beating John Alexander and Paulo Bertolucci, Solomon got a rematch with 6th seeded Ramirez in the semi-finals. This time Solomon was the victor in a four set thrilling, 4-6- 6-2, 6-2, 7-5. Solomon went on to be the tournament runner-up, losing to Bjorn Borg in Borg's third straight Longwood Championship victory. He also reached the quarter-finals in doubles with "bagel twin" Eddie Dibbs. He should be tough this year on the slow clay.

DICK STOCKTON

Stockton is an often underrated player who is now ranked 14th in the world. Stockton is living proof that you can make money on the pro tour without winning many titles. He consistently reaches the quarter and semi-finals, but hasn't won many major titles lately. He is however a talented player who has starred in Davis Cup play for the U.S.

This 27 year old from Dallas, Texas was seeded 13th in 1975 at Longwood. He beat Erik van Dillen and Paraguay's Victory Pecci before running up against eventual champion Bjorn Borg in the third round and losing. He and van Dillen were quarter-finalists in the doubles. In 1976, Stockton played Team Tennis and was unable to compete at Longwood. He came back last year as the 5th seed and won easily in the early rounds over South Africa's Pat Cramer and John Yuill and UCLA's Billy Martin. Stockton was finally defeated in the quarter-finals by Eddie Dibbs.

If this tour veteran can put it all together he could be a surprise winner at Longwood. He is certainly an enjoyable player to watch—win or lose.

Swim-a-thon helps Kidney Foundation

NEWTON — Swimmers at the Gath Pool will be tallying each 25-yard lap when they participate in a swim-a-thon to benefit the Kidney Foundation on Saturday, August 26. The fund raiser will help to support research programs underway at Boston teaching hospitals through the solicitation of pledges for each lap completed.

The swim-a-thon, which is being sponsored by the Newton Recreation Department, will start at 9 a.m. Any money amount may be pledged per lap. Prizes will be awarded to the top three swimmers returning the highest dollar totals in pledges. Each participant who collects ten dollars or more in pledges will receive a free Kidney Foundation "Gift of Life" tee shirt.

Frank Roberts, director of the Gath Pool, said, "We're hoping this year's event will be even bigger and better than last year's." He added, "Youngsters will have the opportunity to help this worthy charity during their regular swimming session, and we're anticipating eager support from all of them."

In the event of rain, the swim-a-thon will be rescheduled for Wednesday, August 30, starting at 9:00 a.m. Sponsor sheets are available at the Gath Pool office in advance of the activity.

Contributions generated by the swim-a-thon will be applied to renal studies at Beth Israel Hospital, Massachusetts General Hospital, New England Medical Center and Peter Bent Brigham Hospital. In addition, swim-a-thon funds will help maintain the Foundation's organ donor program.

Kidney diseases affect 13 million American men, women and children. Annually, 54,000 lives are claimed by some form of the disease.

The goal of the Kidney Foundation is to work toward the elimination of kidney diseases through the funding of research into the causes, cures and ultimate prevention of this threat to human happiness and health.

Information about kidney diseases and the organ donor program may be obtained by contacting the Foundation office, 183 State Street, Boston, MA 02109.

REPORT

REAL ESTATE NEWS

Figures released by MLS committee of Greater Boston Real Estate Board, for 1977, reflect a 53% increase in number of Cooperative Sales. The average sale price on a home was $48,936 during 1977. The MLS committee hope to have the new computerized listing book, in full operation by Spring of this year. The brokers of Council I&M MLS group meet at a monthly breakfast meeting, to further promote the services of MLS. There are well over 90 offices from the 16 towns, involved. Speakers are invited to address the group, and listings are brought to the attention of attending members, that might offer some unusual features, as acreage, or waterfront properties, etc. All in all membership in MLS grew substantially during 77 and is looking foreard to a bigger and better one for 1978.

The Salvation Army
That Fights Despair

Many people have asked me to explain the work of The Salvation Army . . . Well, this organization performs so many fine services, at Christmas and throughout the year, that it's difficult to sum it up briefly. Perhaps the best way to describe their efforts is to call them "the Army that fights poverty, loneliness and despair."

The Salvation Army plays a critical role in making sure that the needy are given attention, care and human understanding. Army workers realize that the holiday season can be particularly gloomy for many of our neighbors unless something is done to brighten their lives.

Visitations to hospital patients and prison inmates; gifts to needy children and companionship to the aging and the forgotten are just some of the many ways in which The Salvation Army is building a better tomorrow, today.

Why don't you help by giving generously to your local Salvation Army headquarters?

Gertrude L. Sanders

Services were held Wednesday (Aug. 16) in Barrancas National Cemetery, Pensacola, Fla., for Mrs. Gertrude L. Sanders.

Mrs. Sanders, 78, of Auburndale, died Monday (Aug. 14) at home after a brief illness.

Before moving to Auburndale 12 years ago, Mrs. Sanders had lived in Pensacola. She was a member of the Order of the Eastern Star.

Wife of the late Oswell J. Sanders, Mrs. Sanders is survived by her daughter, Mrs. Frances Cupoli of Aurburndale; eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Concenzio Cerasa

A funeral mass was celebrated Wednesday (Aug. 16) in St. Bernard's Church for Concezio Cerasa.

Mr. Cerasa, 88, of West Newton, died Saturday (Aug. 12) in Lawrence General Hospital after a long illness.

Born in Italy, he hasd been a resident of West Newton for more than 45 years. He was a retired laborer.

Mr. Cerasa is survived by his wife, Mrs. Angela Cerasa; three daughters, Carmella of Florida, Alice and Mrs. Caroline Arno, both of New York; a brother in Italy.

Burial is in Calvary Cemetery, Waltham.

Fans rediscovered by energy conscious

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American consumers, stung by ballooning energy bills, have rediscovered the fan.

Sales are up for attic fans, whole house ventilation fans, window fans and other air movers. Advertisements for everything from energy-free wind-powered attic ventilators to old-style, lazily spinning wooden ceiling fans are appearing in the trendiest catalogs.

The American Ventilation Association says by some estimates 60 percent of the United States could get along without air conditioning entirely if necessary because summer temperatures are moderate enough. Of course, a fan does not take humidity out of the air as an air-conditioner does.

LEGAL NOTICES

HEARING NOTICE FROM OFFICE OF
CITY CLERK
NEWTON, MASS.

WHEREAS: Petitions have been filed with the Board of Aldermen and Planning & Development Board of the City of Newton as defined and as attached hereto under the Zoning Ordinance, Chapter 24, as amended it is ORDERED: That a hearing be held on WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1978, 7:45 P.M. at CITY HALL in said City of Newton, jointly before the Land Use Committee of the Board of Aldermen and the Planning & Development Board acting as a Planning Board, at which time and place all parties interested therein will be heard.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED: That notice of said hearing be given publication on August 17, 1978, and August 24, 1978, in the Newton Graphic and that a copy of said notice be posed in a conspicuous place at City Hall:

#388-78(2) CHESTNUT HILL TOWERS REALTY CO., petition for special permit to amend site plans for Chestnut Hill Towers, 250 HAMMOND POND PARKWAY, Ward 6, Section 65, Block 8, to enclose the already-approved swimming pool.

#527-78 NEWTON-WELLESLEY HOSPITAL, petition for permissive use to operate day care center for children of Newton-Wellesley Hospital employees at 2014 WASHINGTON STREET, Ward 5, Section 55, Block 1, Lot 15, containing approx. 9,424 sq. ft. in Single Residence B District.

#528-78 DR. WILLIAM S. WALKER, petition for extension of non-conforming use for addition and enclosure of existing dog runs at 1100 BEACON STREET, Ward 5, Section 54, Block 22, Lot 6, containing approx. 5,392 sq. ft. in Business B District.

#531-78 Ald. Richmond & Dietz recommending amendment to Revised Ordinances Section 24-9(a) and 24-9(c) relating to building, enlargement or extension of structures within 300' of a Great Pond.

#564-78 NEWTON AT 128 REALTY TRUST, petition for change of zone from Single Residence A and Limited Manufacturing to Residence E District the following: NAHANTON STREET, Ward 8, Section 84, Block 34, Lots 2L and 2M (shown on plan as Parcels R and R-1) containing approx. 1,317,500 sq. ft.

#565-78 NEWTON AT 128 REALTY TRUST, petition for permissive use to construct in proposed Residence E District, one five-story apartment building containing not more than 125 apartments with attendant facilities, to be located on NAHANTON STREET, Ward 8, Section 84, Block 34, Lots 2L and 2M (shown on plan as Parcels R and R-1) containing approx. 1,317,500 sq. ft.

Notice is hereby given that a copy of the proposed ordinance changes, as described above, are available for public inspection in the office of the City Clerk, City Hall, Newton, Mass.

Attest:
Joseph H. Karlin,
City Clerk

Attest:
Gene Kennedy,
Clerk
Planning & Dev. Bd.

Under the Zoning ordinances of the City of Newton, an objector to a petition can best serve his purpose by filing at or before the first hearing, his signed opposition in writing, stating his reasons for objecting.

A copy of the Planning Department's report and recommendations of these petitions will be available for public inspection in the office of the City Clerk, on the afternoon of the date of public hearing.

Birth defects are forever. Unless you help.

In India, only the population steadily increases

By RAMESH C. PANDE

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — India's unchecked population explosion is eating up the steady increase in its grain production.

The population reached a staggering 625.8 million at the end of 1977, according to figures released by the Registrar of India in June, and is increasing by about 2 percent annually.

If the trend continues, the country second only to China as the world's most populous will break the 1 billion mark by the turn of the century.

To feed that many, India would by then have to produce more than 200 million tons of grain a year.

Despite steady improvements in the grain production — from 50 million tons in 1947 to an estimated 125 million tons this year — 200 tons is a tall order for farmers whose harvests depend on the varying mood of the monsoon.

Population expansion has plagued India's planners since the country became independent in 1947. Not even forced sterilization under former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi has proved effective in stemming the tide; there will be 13 million more Indians this year alone.

India's deeply ingrained adulation of children as "gifts of god" and the regarding children as a form of social security are roots of the problem, experts say.

Bitter memories of forced sterilization during Mrs. Gandhi's 21-month emergency rule still are fresh in many minds — and a problem for the ruling Janata government.

"The soft attitude of the (Janata) government is only going to spell disaster for the country," says Chandra Dutta, a professor involved in a number of social programs in central India.

"Remember, the downfall of Mrs. Gandi's Congress government was partly due to forcing birth control upon people. The Janata government could also face a downfall, sooner or later, if they fail to check the boom in births."

A Hindi novelist who writes on social problems says sarcastically: "The only sector of the Indian economy which has shown steady growth so far is the population."

Shapero's 'Dead End' wins Kodak film prize

Newton artist Janet Shapero has won the Charles A. Kinsley Memorial Trophy from Eastman Kodak Company for best motion picture, in the 1978 Photographic Society of America (PSA) International Film Festival.

The award honors the late Charles A. Kinsley, of Kodak, for his years of service to PSA.

Ms. Shapero, of 53 Park Ave., will be awarded a trophy during the 1978 PSA International Convention here this week. She was praised by selection panels for her diverse capabilities and consistent winning qualities evident in her entry.

An artist, photographer, and cinematographer for the past eight years, Shapero has won film awards at festivals in the U.S. and abroad. The film which won her this coveted award, "Dead End," will be shown during the convention.

"Dead End" is a subjective view of a walk down Skid Row. Initially, the visitor seems to be a casual passerby. Later, he discovers that the shoes he is walking in are those of an unfortunate individual who passes out after a series of hallucinations and who awakens to find himself lying in a gutter.

Shapero said the film began as a three-month project and ended up taking two years to complete.

"During that time," she said, "I worked virtually alone in my parents' basenent with borrowed equipment, with limited experience and with the limited funding that I had in my bank account. This film grew out of a personal need to unravel my ambivalent feelings of responsibility and helplessness when confronted with desolate human beings.

"The pain, torment and degradation of those who are trapped in an abyss of depression and hopelessness, due to unemployment, alcoholism or a myriad of other social, physical or psychological pressures lies open for view, but most people find it too difficult to look or to respond.

"It was my hope that the viewer would find it less difficult to respond to an animated film, that he would be less apt to censor his emotional response, and that as a result he might become more aware of the plight of his fellow human beings," the artist said.

David Ross

Musician's career began in Oak Hill

About 15 years ago David Ross began his professional career by playing guitar for a neighbor's sweet-sixteen party in Oak Hill.

Now, at the age of 30, he has cut a 45 rpm record, has two songs published in sheet music, and is hoping soon to get his new song, "Boston," published or recorded.

Ross grew up on Greenwood Street and graduated from Newton South High School in 1966. At that time he used to play for the G-Clefs.

While at the University of Pennsylvania studying economics, Ross joined a rhythm and blues group and cultivated his love for music.

After graduation he returned to play in a Boston band, and then studied voice at the Schola Cantorum in Paris.

While in Europe he had two of his songs, "I Love Loving You" and "Shouting from Rooftops," published by R.S.O. Music of London.

Back in Boston Ross studied arranging and composition at Berklee School of Music.

"We Go Together So Well" and "Music Man" have recently been released on Sail records, and the song "Boston" has been mentioned in high political circles.

While Ross was on the Good Day show on Channel 5 a few months ago, Kathryn White, the mayor's wife, heard "Boston" and requested a copy.

Ross said that WNTN has a copy it is playing on the air, and he hopes to have it available to the public soon.

For two weeks beginning Aug. 15 Ross will be playing at the Holiday Inn in Lower Falls, and often performs at the Backyard in Newton Centre.

Dick Rousseau will direct 'Something Afoot' for Players

The Newton Country Players have selected Dick Rousseau of Auburndale as director for the initial stage production of their 23rd season, the Boston premiere of the Broadway musical mystery "Something's Afoot."

Book, music, and lyrics are by James McDonald, David Vos, and Robert Gerlach, respectively, with additional music by Ed Linderman. The show, called "a rib splitter" by Time Magazine, was originally produced by the Goodspeed Opera House, East Haddam, Conn.

Performances are slated for Friday and Saturday evenings, Nov. 3-4 and 10-11, at the Players' new home in the Newton Highlands Congregational Church, 54 Lincoln St., Newton Highlands.

The production is available for programming at reduced rates to sponsor groups and theater parties interested in fundraising for bookings from Nov. 2 to Nov. 12, at the church, with its seating capacity of 275, including midweek and Sunday dates.

For the Players, "Something's Afoot" represents Rousseau's initial directorial effort. He was at the helm of productions of "The Music Man," "Once Upon a Mattress," "Bells Are Ringing," "Little Me" and "Dames at Sea" for Canton High School, where he is an instructor in the English Department.

He received his BS from Castleton State College, Vt., and his MA and CAGS fron U. of Conn.

On stage for the Players, he was seen as Wally Womper in "How to Succeed in Business" and McCaffrey in "South Pacific," while behind the scenes, he served as publicity director for two shows and as lighting technician for "The Boys in the Band."

Dick Rousseau

This summer he appeared in the dual roles of Bouley— Postmaster in "Damn Yankees" at Pricilla Beach Theatre, Plymouth. Other stage credits include Ralph Devine, dance and vocal chorus in "Mame" and chorus in "Follies" for the Curtain Call Theater, Braintree, and as Mr. Goldstone in "Gypsy" for the On Stage Theatre Co., Brandon, Vt.

Rousseau served on stage crew for "Pleasure of His Company" and "Cactus Flower" for the Auburndale Players, as stage manager, he worked mountings of "The Mouse and the Lion" for Charles Playhouse Children's Theatre, Boston, "Candide" for the On Stage Theatre Co., and eight shows for the Off Broadway Summer Theatre, Brandon, Vt.

For further information phone 965-0752 or 323-7991 or write P.O. Box 9, Newton Centre, 02159.

City-wide elementary musical groups to rehearse Tuesdays

The three Newton elementary school music organizations — band, chorus, and orchestra — will rehearse on Tuesdays this fall from 1:45 to 3 p.m., instead of Thursdays as in the past.

Rehearsals will be held in the same buildings as last year: band at Bowen, orchestra at Countryside, and chorus at Mason-Rice.

Membership for the music organizations is open by audition to all public school fifth and sixth grade students in Newton. Some third and fourth grade students will be considered for the orchestra and band.

Chorus auditions will be conducted in November by the school's music teacher. Rehearsals will start on Tuesday, Dec. 5.

Band and orchestra auditions will be held at the Frank Zervas Elementary School, on Tuesday, Sept. 26 and Oct. 3. Rehearsals will start on Tuesday, Oct. 10.

To be considered for membership to any of the three organizations, students must actively participate in their school's band, orchestra, or chorus.

Membership of all three organizations reaches over 300 students who prepare programs of challenging music. They will present a May concert as well as school and community programs during the rehearsal season.

Two years in a row the All-Newton Elementary School Orchestra performed at the Massachusetts Music Educators Annual Conference. The band and chorus gave programs at Quincy Market Place, and the chorus sang at the Mayor's Annual Prayer Breakfast.

Pescosolido leads Legion delegation

American Legion State Commander Ernest Pescosolido of Newton will lead a delegation of over 200 Legionnaires to the 60th annual national convention of the American Legion in New Orleans, La., this week.

Those who were at the American Legion's 1968 national convention in New Orleans do not have to be reminded of the "Crescent City's" gracious hospitality and its historical traditions.

Headquarters for the Massachusetts delegation will be in the Royal Orleans Hotel in the French Quarter of the city.

Kids' Trips | Boston By Little Feet

Boston By Little Feet integrates games and stories with a look at some of the city's architectural wonders, a happy mix indeed.

By Harriet Webster

There is a rumor afloat that children can learn a bit about history and architecture painlessly, that a brief dose of culture can be eased into their delicate souls with a minimum of trauma. We decided to check the story out — and guess what? There's some fine truth to it!

Boston By Little Feet, the junior division of Boston By Foot, conducts a one and a half hour walking tour each Sunday afternoon. The tour integrates games and stories with a look at some of the city's architectural wonders, a happy mix that encourages the kids to actively participate in the experience. "It's not a lecture tour," explains coordinator Polly Flansbury. "It's really an attempt to get the kids to 'feel' the buildings."

One fine, bright Sunday afternoon, we met our guide in the lobby of 60 State Street to commence our tour. Carolyn begins by asking the kids to stand on the terrace outside, looking across the street at the Old State House and the New England Merchant Building. The first thing we learn is that where we are standing was once part of the harbor. In other words, we are perched on that controversial substance now popularly known as solid fill.

Carolyn then begins a comparison of the two buildings, soliciting answers from the children through a series of questions. "How many stories does each building have? What is each one made from?" With a bit of gentle prodding, we hear that one is made from bricks and the other from stone and steel. She asks next about the differences in the windows — delicate 12-over-12s on the State House, larger panes covering more total surface area on the Merchant Building. She asks if they can identify the symbols on the State House — a lion and a unicorn.

After this, we all cross the street to run our hands along the buildings, to feel the roughness of the bricks and the smoothness of the polished granite. The kids are asked to form human chains. Hand-in-hand, they measure the distance between the pillars on each of the buildings by seeing how many children it takes to span the gap.

Then we walk over to the Five Cents Savings Bank Plaza for a look at the Old South Meeting House and the Old Corner Bookstore. We look too at the contemporary structures on the Plaza, noting that there are two different types of pillar construction in residence. On one building the columns appear to be pegged against the main structure, while on another they seem to be shorter segments stacked one on top of the other. This provides interesting food for thought to youngsters expert with building blocks and erector sets.

We move on over to Old City Hall, now housing an elegant restaurant and (what else?) a bank. This is a Victorian charmer, replete with fancy curlicues. A wedding cake dripping with frosting, it lacks only the statues of the bridal couple. But it makes up for this with the fine Benjamin Franklin figure in the courtyard out front. The children stare at Ben intently. Then they are asked to find him in each of the tableaux representing historic moments that are featured on the base of the statue.

Onwards to King's Chapel, where we first learn that there is no tower up top because the congregation ran out of money. The Chapel is closed on Sunday afternoon so we can't go inside, but we do wander around for a look at the burial ground after reading this lovely sign: "Tourists, Shoppers, Neighbors, Strangers — All Are Welcome." It's not too tough to fit into one of those categories.

Carolyn explains that Billy the Kid is thought to be buried here, perhaps under the floor of the Chapel. She points to a small door in the corner of the building leading into the graveyard and whispers, "Billy the Kid, are you in there? Why were you hanged?"

We then set to investigating the gravestones, and glory be if the most popular motif doesn't happen to be a skull! Some of the stones sport whole skeletons creeping about; others make do with the skull alone, while one has a stylized skull and crossbones. There is even one marker featuring a skeleton in cahoots with the devil. Makes us wonder about the mental state of our forefathers.

We then work our way back to City Hall Plaza, home of the New City Hall. Carolyn likes to give the kids a break here, a chance to run around. As she sits down on a step, she tosses out a seemingly innocuous question: "How many bricks do you think were used to build City Hall Plaza?" At least one young man spends the break muttering under his breath, "one, two, three, four. . . ." The answer, dear folks, is two and a half million.

We descend the steep steps which lead us to Quincy Market and Faneuil Hall. Carolyn provides background information, explaining that the complex still serves its dual original purpose: functioning both as meeting hall and market place. Sunday afternoon is a crowded, active time at the marketplace, so when the tour ends the kids usually find a street artist to watch.

Boston By Little Feet is not a "gee whizz" sort of kids' trip. It is a low key affair, and one that we can hartily recommend as a peaceful interlude in a frantic afternoon of shopping and eating at Faneuil Hall-Quincy Market. Parents are expected to go along on the tour (no charge) to prevent it from being used as a babysitting service. The tour is recommended for ages six to 12, but we think eight to 12 might be a bit more realistic. Because this is its first season, the program is sparsely attended at present. For this reason we suggest you let your children bring along friends, because the tour is definitely more fun with a larger group. All systems are GO, however, even in if attendance is low. "We're like the Boston-New York Shuttle," Flansbury explains. "If one child shows up, we run it."

Notes

The price of the tour is $1 per child. Reservations are necessary (call 367-2345), and the group meets at 60 State Street at 2 pm each Sunday. School, scout and other youth groups can be accommodated at other times by arrangement.

US Pro Tennis Championship

Longwood Cricket Club is to tennis what Fenway Park is to baseball . . . the Pro Championship combines today's two-fisted backhands with a respect for the history of the Club.

By Bob Young

Next week's 51st U.S. Professional Tennis Championship brings together some of the biggest guns in men's tennis, led by Eddie Dibbs, Arthur Ashe, and defending champ Manuel Orantes, to compete for $200,000 in prize money. The site for the week-long tournament is the Longwood Cricket Club in Chestnut Hill.

For the tennis buff the tournament holds a two-fold attraction: Great tennis in a great old world setting. Longwood Cricket Club is to tennis what Fenway Park is to baseball. With 25 grass and 16 clay courts, Longwood is the fourth largest outdoor tennis facility in the country. But the club's chief feature is its intimate and almost other-worldly feeling. And the beauty of seeing the U.S. Pro Championship at Longwood is that it manages to combine today's two-fisted backhands and 140-mile-an-hour serves with a respect for the history of the Cricket Club.

Cricket Anyone?

Cricket was the game played at Longwood when a group was organized for the sport on the property of David Sears. The year was 1877 and the locale was Brookline and Longwood Avenues in Boston. It wasn't long, though, before tennis was played there. The first grass court was constructed in 1878 and interclub matches began in the 1880s. Cricket was fading out slowly by this time. When the Brookline Chronicle ran a story on July 28, 1891 that the Longwood Circket Club would host its first annual tournament, it boasted that "crack players from New York and Canada as well as the New England champions" would compete. Tennis had cemented its place in Longwood history.

Nine years later, prodded by 21-year-old club tennis star Dwight Davis, the United States and Great Britain paired off at Longwood in the first international Davis Clubs. The Americans roundly defeated their British opponents and one English player, H. Roper Barrett commented unhappily on the conditions there in One Hundred Years of Longwood:

"The ground was abominable. The grass was long . . . The net was a disgrace to civilized lawn tennis, held up by guy ropes which were continually sagging . . . As for the balls, I hardly like to mention them. They were awful — soft and mothery — and when served with the American twist came at you like an animated egg-plum. I do not exaggerate."

In 1911, the club acquired the Chestnut Hill Club in Brookline, realizing that the choice Sears property in Boston would be too dear to hold onto. From that time until 1951, various land filling, land acquisition and construction manuevers took place at the Chestnut Hill site. Permanent seating was dedicated in 1928 to Edwin Sheafe, Longwood president from 1902 to 1922. That stadium has since had its seating capacity increased to the present-day total of 7500, and the club grounds themselves have now spread over 10 acres.

Longwood first hosted the U.S. Pro Tennis Championships in 1964. It was a time when the lines between amateur and professional tennis were shifting. Professional tournaments weren't bringing out the crowds, so exhibitions served as showcases for the pros. Yet even these were becoming redundant at best.

Enter Longwood, with more than a little help from the New England Merchant's National Bank, which sponsors the tournament to this day. The idea of a professional event at amateur-bred Longwood was not an easy one to get across to the Longwood Board of Governors. The National Doubles Championships were already being held at the club, so members were hesitant to bring another large tournament onto the grounds. But the pro concept prevailed and the first prize of $2200 in that first final was awarded to Rod Laver, victor over Pancho Gonzales.

Grass was the surface for tournament play up until 1969, when the courts inside Sheafe Stadium were replaced with a synthetic surface. The night play which Longwood pioneered in 1964 — the first tourney held outdoors under the lights — dictated that the dewy evening grass be replaced. The courts changed surface again in 1974, to clay, which is the playing surface today.

Rough or Smooth?

Those clay courts have stirred more than a little controversy over the years, and this summer is no exception. Traditionally, the U.S. Pros at Longwood precede the U.S. Open by one week in August, and provide a warm-up of sorts for one of the "Big Four" of tennis. This year the U.S. Open has switched sites from the clay courts of Forest Hills to the artificial turf of Flushing Meadows. Critics believe that the Longwood field is weaker than usual this year, since the clay courts provide a less than enticing warm-up for the Open.

Not, so, according to Longwood President Tom Raleigh. "If you really look at this year's draw," Raleigh points out, "you'll see that as a group the quality is very high. It's a very strong field."

To date, eight of the world's top 20 players will be competing. Raleigh expects 50 of the top 100 to be signed by the time the 64-man event begins. Jimmy Connors, Bjorn Borg, Vitas Gerulaitas and Guillermo Vilas are notable by their absence, but Raleigh still believes that the field is of the highest quality:

"I say that Longwood is the second toughest draw in the country next to the U.S. Open. What's happening is that top players like Vilas, Borg and Connors have lots of options open to them at this point. Granted, the surface at the U.S. Open is different this year. The fact is that this is a very tough tournament to win — the last time Borg won here, in '76, he lost at Forest Hills the following week. And I think he feels he lost because he had such a tough week here.

"Last year Connors was almost beaten in the first round by Marty Reissen, then ran into a tough match with John McEnroe in a later round."

This year's field is most certainly a solid one ranking-wise. Defending champion Manuel Orantes, seventh-ranked in the world, is entered along with sixth-ranked Eddie Dibbs, last year's runnerup. Corrado Barazzutti of Italy, ranked eight and ninth-ranked Raul Ramirez of Mexico will also be top seeds. Ramirez is currently the fourth leading money winner on the pro tour. Arthur Ashe, John McEnroe and Jaime Fillol of Chile also rank with the high seeds, as do Victor Amaya, Tom Gorman, Wojtek Fibak and Adriano Panatta.

"Anybody who comes out here in the early rounds on Tuesday and Wednesday," Raleigh predicts, "is going to see great tennis." 15 sessions in all are scheduled, with the first round kicking off at noon on Monday, August 21. Matches will be held at noon and at 7:30 pm Monday to Friday. The quarterfinals on Saturday, August 26, are slated for 1 pm and 7:30 pm, with the semi-finals at noon and 7:30 on Sunday. Monday's final will begin under the lights at 7:30. Both Sunday's and Monday's matches will be televised on Channel 2, at 2 pm on Sunday and 8 pm Monday.

Ticket Information

Longwood will have an information booth operating from 11 am to 1 pm and 6:30 to 8 pm. It will be located to the side of the main entrance gate, at Hammond Street and Route 9. Ticket prices for the noon, Monday through Wednesday sessions are $6 and $5. Evening matches on those days are $8 and $7. The Thursday and Friday noon sessions cost $7 and $5, with Thursday's evening session priced at $8 and $7, and Friday's evening match $10 and $9. All quarterfinal and semifinal sessions are $10 and $9. Monday's final is $11. Call 731-4500 for ticket information.

Special Ticket Offers

Coupons are available at Stop and Shop, Medi-Mart, Bradlees and Perkin's Tobacco Store for two tickets for the price of one for the afternoon and evening sessions on Monday, August 21. Proceeds will benefit the Sportsman's Tennis Club.

Colgate is offering a general admission ticket for half price on Wednesday, August 23. Mail in two proofs of purchase from Palmolive Liquid (front label), Cold Power (boxtop), Ajax Cleanser (net weight designation), Baggies (end panel), Colgate toothpaste (end flaps), Fab (boxtop), and Curity Curad bandages (back panel and two wrappers from Curad Bandages). Limit is two tickets for the $6 day session and two $8 tickets for the evening matches.

How To Get There

BY CAR: Longwood is located at the intersection of Route 9 and Hammond Street in Chestnut Hill. Route 9 east or west, depending on your location, will take you right past the club.

BY TRAIN: Take the Riverside train on the Green Line and get off at the Chestnut Hill station. The club is a short distance up the hill on Hammond Street.

Parking

Parking is always a problem for the Longwood tournament, but this year arrangements have been made with several parking areas in the vicinity. Boston College Stadium (Commonwealth Avenue, Newton) offers unlimited free parking is available here with a shuttle bus leaving for Longwood one hour before the start of matches and one hour after the matches back to the lot. There is a $2 charge per car round trip for the shuttle bus.

Beaver Country Day School (791 Hammond Street, Brookline) has approximately 150 spaces be available at $2 per car. Parking will not be available here on Sunday, August 27.

Chestnut Hill School (Hammond Street, Chestnut Hill) possesses spaces for 100 cars, which will be available at $2 per car.

Chestnut Hill Motel (Route 9, Brookline) has one hundred free, marked spaces available. The spaces are to the right of the motel, on the field down below the motel.

Local Talent | North Shore Rock

What better way to spend a Sunday on the North Shore than with some of the area's most promising bands?

By Michael Howell

No band report this time around, fans. Why? Because all the bands are sequestered in their garages, rehearsing for this Sunday's historic happening: the First Annual North Shore Music Festival.

No kidding . . . a North Shore Music Festival. And it's about time, too. Unlike other areas of our fair state, the North Shore has never had a thriving club scene for original local groups. Oh, there have been a few here and there, but mostly North Shore kids get their chops down in the basements of indulgent parents, then head over the Mystic River Bridge. And probably because parents' basements are less than ideal places to work out your act, many find themselves quickly in need of a bridge sticker. Maybe this Festival is a step toward changing all that.

Anyway, the spirit — if not the spirits (no alcohol) — of Woodstock (or at least C.B.G.B.'s, the New York punk haven) will be in Danvers this Sunday, August 20, at 2 pm. The Twin Rinks on Route 114 becomes the North Shore Arena, and the Festival will begin. It's a chance to catch some up and coming bands that you might not have had a chance to see before.

The way things are shaping up, it'll be the hardest-rocking spot on the North Shore since Seatrain packed 'em in at the late, lamented Stonehenge club. The diverse bill features six of the local crème du garage. The Nervous Eaters, whose instant-classic single Loretta has enlivened many a party hereabouts, will be joined by the popular Vinny band.

The festival is also making an admirable effort to give wider exposure to some not-so-well-known but deserving groups. They'll be introducing DJ and the Band of Sin, a driving ensemble featuring a lead flautist, Freeway, local rockers from the Middleton-Topsfield area, and Cragg Zopp, whose jazz-classical-rock brew is said to be reminiscent of Yes.

Tickets for all this new music are $4 ($5 at the door), and are available at the Twin Rinks' box office.

What better way to spend a North Shore Sunday than with some of the area's most promising bands? For the same four bucks, the North Shore Music Festival looks like it'll deliver much more of a splendid time than Robert Stigwood's plasticene Sgt. Pepper . . . and the music will undoubtedly be better.

Wax Works

By the time you read this, the sizzling Stompers will have their first record out on the Double Eagle label. Produced by head Stomper Sal Baglio and Peter Lembo, this strong initial effort revives a great old custom, the Double-"A" disc, by backing the eminently danceable Cost To Coast with the wry I'm In Trouble. Only 1000 are being pressed, so don't dally. Look for it at Strawberries, Music City, and Discount Records in downtown Boston, or send $1.50 to Double Eagle, 52 Valley Road, Norwood 02062 . . . and tell 'em I sent you.

Dance | Hatch Shell Ballet

This week and next, The Boston Ballet Company will grace the Hatch Shell with the beauty of the dance for the fifth straight year.

By Gary Provost

We drove into Boston last year in a van, four adults and two kids, loaded down with wine and cheese and munchies that come in cellophane bags.

"You ever been to a ballet before?" we said to each other.

"No, I've never been to one, have you been to one?"

None of us had been to a ballet, though we'd all caught the Ice Capades on occasion. So here we were driving to the ballet, mainly because this was a free performance of The Boston Ballet on the Esplanade. A dearth of cash and a wealth of curiosity compelled us to take a look. Altogether, we knew less about ballet than we did about the nutritional value of the lousewort.

But guess what? Ballet is art, it's music and color and luscious young bodies leaping and flashing across the stage, and you don't really have to know anything about it to enjoy watching it. That's more than you can say for baseball or chess.

We'd gone in early to get good seats, which in this case meant a nice spot in the grass where we could spread our blanket, pour our wine, chat and people-watch for an hour or two before the performance. You get a good view of the Hatch Shell from almost anywhere, but if you're a purist don't get too close to the stage. You won't see the dancers' feet.

This was a night of revelations. Three short ballets were presented, and I found I could enjoy them all in blue jeans and a tee shirt. My favorite was "Jazz For Boston." This modern dance, especially created for The Boston Ballet's Esplanade performances, is bright and brash and, unless there's something drastically wrong with my hormones, very, very sexy. The other two pieces were more traditional examples of this art form, which is broad enough to entertain everybody. I loved them also.

More significant, though, was the reaction of the children. Those uncultured little louts who are supposed to whoop it up for Spider Man and be lulled into lethargy by the mere mention of ballet sat straight-backed and wide-eyed with wonder through the whole thing. It wasn't that our six-year-old and our 9-year-old were particularly high-browed. Throughout the park kids were being dazzled. They had never seen anything like it. How were they to know we hadn't either?

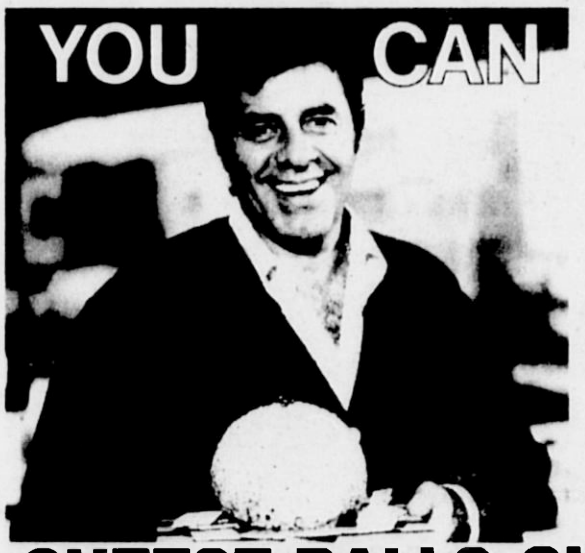

This week and next, The Boston Ballet Company will grace the Hatch Shell with the beauty of the dance for the fifth straight year. For you, it's free. The tab is picked up by The Boston Ballet, Coke, Mobil Oil, and the John Hancock insurance people. Don't stay home just because you don't know a pas-de-deux from an escargot. If you like grace and movement and well-kept bodies that swim through the air to magnificent music, by all means go. If you've got kids, by all means take them. If you've got a picnic basket and a blanket, take them too.

And if, like hundreds of others, you are impressed enough with your first taste of ballet to want more, you can attend performances of The Boston Ballet from November to May — for about the price of a Celtics ticket. But remember, if you do go and you don't like the ballet, there's nothing seriously wrong with you. Even Larry Murray, Marketing Director for the Boston Ballet, knows that. Says Murray, "Anyone can go and look at a ballet and decide for himself whether or not he likes it."

Notes

The Boston Ballet Company will give its annual free performances on the Charles River Esplanade August 17 to 20 and 23 to 27. Programs begin at 8:30 pm at the Hatch Shell. The following works will be presented: Rainwood (both weeks) Trio (first week), Aureole (both weeks), Allegro Brilliante (both weeks), Tarantella (first week) and Jazz for Boston (both weeks). A few additions to the program are planned.

A season ticket to The Boston Ballet will be raffled off each night. Those seeking further ticket information for next season should contact The Boston Ballet, 19 Clarendon Street, Boston 02116, telephone 542-3945.

Flower Exhibition
Gladioli predominate on the tables today at the Mid-Summer Flower Exhibition, held from 2 to 8 pm at the Worcester County Horticultural Society, 30 Elm Street in Worcester. Bringing up the rear is an assortment of fruits and vegetables, which, with the gladioli, are engaged in a competition. No entrance fee is requested, and the number to call for details is 752-4274.

Colorful Music
The Blue Notes, the color of nostalgia, go through their paces tonight through August 20 at the Club Casino in Hampton Beach, New Hampshire. Sets are at 8:30 and 11 pm, and the tickets, which entitle you to stay for the whole evening, are $4.50 and $5.50, at all Ticketron locations, and the Club Casino box office, (603) 926-4544.

Berkshire Balloonfest
25 hot air balloons star at the Berkshire Balloonfest, starting today and floating through Sunday at Cummington Farm, Route 9 West in Cummington. The balloons indulge in various aerial escapades, and are accompanied by sky-diving demonstrations (Saturday at 1 and 3 pm), the Cummington Crafts Fair (Saturday and Sunday) and continuous movie showings. Admission to it all is free, and most balloon events are scheduled for the early morning (about 7) and the evening — when winds are down. For all details, give a ring to (413) 634-2111.

Marshfield Fair
The Marshfield Fair is the oldest agricultural fair in the state. This year, the tradition is carried on today through August 27, at the Route 3A Fairgrounds in, naturally, Marshfield. And, as is proper, there's something for everyone, from a midway to fireworks to parimutuel horse racing to handicrafts. The grounds open at 9 each morning (except for Sundays, when the starting time is 10) and close — whenever. The entrance fee requires $1 from adults, nothing from children 12 and under. Parking costs $1. Have your questions answered at 834-6620.

In the Wind
What's in the wind tonight is the concert by Peter, Paul, and Mary, who bring their get-together tour to Hynes Auditorium, 900 Boylston Street in Boston, tonight at 7. The tickets for PP&M are $8.50 and $9.50, at Ticketron. For more information, call the Hynes box office, 262-8000.

Now Dear, Eat Your Plants
Dandelions, anyone? Learn the intricacies of harvesting and cooking your own edible plants, in this morning's workshop at Pond Meadow Park, 470 Liberty Street in Braintree. Enthusiast Larry Kramer hosts the proceedings, which include a slide show and samples of tasty greenlings. The workshop is free and begins at 9:30. For the lowdown, call the Park at 843-7663.

Festival of the Moon
One revered Chinese tradition is celebrating the birthday of the moon. Today, from 10 am to noon, at the Peabody Museum of Salem, children can do just that. The festivities are augmented by red rice, seaweed and paper boats. The charge for it all is $1 per tyke. For all information, call 745-1876.

Saturday Music
From South to West today. Styx rocks at the Cape Cod Coliseum, on White's Path in South Yarmouth, at 8 pm. Tickets are $7.50 in advance, $8.50 the day of the show, available at Ticketron locations and at the box office, 394-2131. Out at the Music Inn, in Lenox in the Berkshires, Muddy Waters, Commander Cody, and David Bromberg all entertain, starting at 3:30. Tickets are $6.50 in advance, $7.50 the day of the show. For information, call the Music Inn at (413) 637-2200.

Up and Away
Today is Funday at the Plymouth Airport, with an airshow, airplane, glider, and helicopter rides, games, food, and aviation exhibits. Action starts around 10 in the morning, and goes all day. For more information, call the Airport at 746-2020.

Falmouth Road Race
A well-known runner's delight, the Falmouth Road Race takes off today at 10 am from Wood's Hole. The race continues along 7.1 miles of seacoast to Falmouth, and boats about 3,100 entrants — among them marathoner Bill Rodgers, who won the event last year. Any details you might want to know are at 548-8500, the number of the Falmouth Chamber of Commerce.

Words and Music
The songs of Sammy Cahn, with the man himself presiding, are the topic of Words and Music, the revue opening tonight at the North Shore Music Theatre in Beverly. Running through August 26, show times are tonight through Friday at 8 ($8.95), also Saturday ($9.95); matinees are Wednesday and Saturday at 2, costing $4.75 and $6.75. For further information and reservations, call the box office at 922-8500, or charge tickets via Master Charge at 922-8502. The Theatre is located at Route 128, exit 19.

Chuck Mangione
Chuck and his good-feeling Quartet entertain tonight only at the South Shore Music Circus, on Sohier Street in Cohasset. The music begins at 8, all the tickets are $8.50. For reservations and more information, call the box office at 383-1400.

22• tues.

Extended Run
Since the show was just about sold out for August, the folks at Man of La Mancha have decided to extend the musical's run through October 1. So don't despair of seeing Richard Kiley in his famous role — just head on down to the Music Hall box office (268 Tremont Street, 423-3300) and stake your claim for seats. Another alternative is to charge tickets at Theatre Charge, by calling 426-8181.

Mitzi
Mitzi Gaynor, the glamour girl with the virtually indestructible legs, struts her stuff tonight through August 27 at the South Shore Music Circus, on Sohier Street in Cohasset. Tonight, the show is at 8 and the tickets are $9. Wednesday and Thursday, also at 8, Saturday at 5:30 and Sunday at 3, the tickets are $10. Friday and Sunday at 8 and Saturday at 9, tickets are $11. The Wednesday matinee at 2 is a bargain at $8. For reservations and information, call the box office, 383-1400.

23• wed.

Veronica's Room
Veronica's Room is a mystery thriller by Ira Levin (the author of Deathtrap), set in Walpole, about a Boston University coed. It previews tonight at 8 at the Theatre at the Square, 12 Holyoke Street in Cambridge. Through September 10, performances are Wednesday through Saturday at 8 and Sunday at 7:30. Tickets range in price from $5.50 to $6.50. For information and reservations, call the box office at 864-2112.

A Dangling Conversation
As part of its Summer Conversational Series, the Concord School of Philosophy is presenting a talk on the topic Witchcraft in Salem Village: How Historians Piece the Puzzle Together, tonight at 8. Richard B. Trask has the honor of speaker, and tickets are $2, available at the door or in advance. The School is located on the grounds of the Orchard House, Lexington Road (Route 2A) in Concord, and can be reached at 369-4118.

Movies | Short Subjects

Feature Attraction
The Buddy Holly Story

The odds were against it. The Buddy Holly Story followed in the dying wake of such nostalgia-inspired rock 'n' roll movies as American Hot Wax, The Last Waltz, Sgt. Pepper's, and Grease. How could anyone get enthusiastic about yet another blast-from-the-musical-past? But The Buddy Holly Story easily commands top billing over its less inspired predecessors and it has done so without expensive publicity campaigns or big named stars.

Gary Busey, who's previously appeared only as a supporting actor, plucked the "starring" role as Buddy Holly and he looks every inch the real Buddy, in his portrayal of the famous Fifties singer. But looks aren't everything. Busey also delivers a paramount performance.

You can forget about the story. It's simplistic and glorified at best, and only sketches the popular singer's career from lowly obscurity in his hometown of Lubbock, Texas, to the lonely heights of the record charts. But what makes this film so engrossing is Holly's music. It transports us to a time not so long ago and to a place that doesn't seem so very far away, helping the film create a world that's totally its own. From the opening scenes we are trapped in the aura of a difficult decade.

Although the songs and lyrics are Holly's own, the film's soundtrack is performed "live" by the actors rather than dubbed. Busey sings surprisingly well and plays a mean guitar; while The Crickets (Holly's group played by Don Stroud on drums and Charles Martin Smith from American Graffiti on bass) do just as well.

The charismatic appeal of Gary Busey and the competent direction of rookie Steve Rash make The Buddy Holly Story a finger-snapping and foot-tapping experience long after the final credits have dimmed. Scheduled to open August 23 in the suburbs only.

—Sam Lasoff

Animal House

Until recently, the folks at the National Lampoon have been content to satisfy their creative urges by liberating scatological prose and making dirty words safe to print. They have now broadened their horizons and expanded onto the big screen. Animal House which tells the tale of a frat war, is nothing more than a springboard for the kind of jokes Johnny Carson sometimes likes to tell on national television: sex, sexist, and more sexist. Not even John Belushi and Donald Sutherland can make Animal House habitable. Braintree Cinema, Brockton Cinema, Chestnut Hill Cinema, Framingham Cinema, Hanover Mall, Lawrence Showcase, Woburn Showcase, Danvers; Cheri, Pi Alley.

Corvette Summer

Ever since the Beach Boys crooned about the joys of cruising in a deuce coupe or a 409, a boy's love affair with his car has been a natural for Hollywood's filmmakers. Last year there was The Van; this year, the not-so-obscure object of desire is a shiny, red, souped-up Stingray.

Corvette Summer isn't your ordinary Boy meets Car movie. It's a little bit more complicated than that: boy makes Car. Boy loses Car. Boy finds Girl. Boy forgets about Car and goes after Girl. Mark Hamill (Star Wars) stars as the Boy; Annie Potts is the Girl; the Car turns in a purring performance as itself.

The direction by Hal Robbins helps propel the narrative without too many sagging pitstops. And with engrossing photography by Frank Stanley, Corvette Summer looks like the Gone With The Wind of hot-rod movies. Saxon.

The Driver

The Driver is a movie that doesn't go anywhere. A dismally seedy story of the dark side of the underworld, this latest of junk movies is nothing more than a multi-character study: Ryan O'Neal is the driver who specializes in the fast getaway and the fancy car tricks, Bruce Dern is the rabid "S.W.A.T." cop gone berserk on getting his man, and Isabelle Adjani plays a useless and inexplicable role for the sake of something sexy to look at. Although Dern and O'Neal play career men to the outer limits of perfection, The Driver get caught in traffic and ends up spinning its wheels. Gary.

The Eyes of Laura Mars

A modern, overdone murder-mystery, Eyes features Faye Dunaway as Laura Mars, a successful fashion photographer noted for her very chic and very macabre portraits. She is in telepathic communication with someone who is murdering her colleagues. To complicate matters still further, the intrepid cop in charge of the case (Tommy Lee Jone) becomes her lover. Oddly the two of them, as well as everyone else in the cast, don't seem particularly fearful — it's more as if they have stomach cramps throughout. Still, the culprit is not exposed until the very end, and the movie is never boring. Irvin Kershner directed, Jon Peters produced. Chestnut Hill, Dedham, Lawrence, Leominster, Natick, Brockton (August 18); Paris.

Foul Play

Goldie Hawn and Chevy Chase star in this suspense comedy written and directed by Colin Higgins. Chase's famous pratfalls are limited to a tolerable few, and he and Hawn share an engaging kookiness. Hawn, who plays a librarian named Gloria Mundy (a Thurber steal), is the target of a pair of hitmen; Chase, as a police lieutenant under a cloud, assigns himself to protect her. Incidentally they find True Love. With Billy Barty, Rachel Roberts, and members of the New York City Opera. Brockton, Circle, Woburn, Leominster, Danvers (August 18); Cheri, Beacon Hill.

Grease

Entertainment and that's all; or rather, television director Randal Kleiser's idea of entertainment, the kind we've been insulted by for years. This isn't to say that the musical numbers aren't energetic, that John Travolta isn't charming, that Stockard Channing isn't proficient as the high school bad girl. But where is the heart behind the monster? And what in heaven's name is this fascination with the Fifties? Brockton Cinema, Circle, Dedham Showcase, Peabody Cinema, Leominster, Natick; Cinema 57.

rning Opportunities

● Perhaps you already have several college credits, but your full-time job has prevented you from completing your degree. Or maybe you don't have a single credit, but you know that sooner or later – despite your job or other responsibilities – you'll want to get a college degree.

In either case, you would do well to find out how to get your degree through any one of over 50 part-time programs offered by Northeastern University.

Have you considered the advantages of Part-Time Programs at Northeastern University?

Wide Choice of Courses

Included in Northeastern's more than 50 part-time programs are some 1,400 undergraduate courses to meet your interests and objectives. Basic areas of study are as follows:

BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION
HEALTH PROFESSIONS
LAW ENFORCEMENT
LIBERAL ARTS
THERAPEUTIC RECREATION
ENGINEERING TECHNOLOGY
SCIENCE
ENGINEERING

Campuses Convenient to You

To make higher education easily accessible, Northeastern offers its main campus in Boston, the suburban campus in Burlington, and eight branch academic centers in Brockton, Framingham, Marshfield, Milford, Norwood, Reading, Revere and Weymouth.

Simplified Admission

Knowing the constraints on your time, Northeastern has made admission, registration and enrollment uncomplicated. We counsel you on career objectives, minimize red tape, and in many cases we allow full credit for courses taken previously at accredited institutions, and for life experience, by examination. You may be admitted to part-time degree programs in University College and Lincoln College without making formal application. You may matriculate as a degree candidate . . . or select individual courses to meet particular needs. You may register by mail or in person at any Northeastern location. Registration dates are September 5-14. Check schedule or call for specific dates at each location. Classes begin the week of September 25.

University College: 437-2400 (Business, Health, Law Enforcement, Liberal Arts, and Therapeutic Recreation)
Lincoln College: 437-2500 (Engineering, Science and Technology)
Burlington Campus: 272-5500

The Distinction of a Northeastern Degree

Since its founding in 1898, Northeastern has been committed to helping working men and women attain the benefits of higher education – by offering degree programs that can be tailored to the needs of people with full- or part-time jobs.

Your degree program at Northeastern can be spread out or accelerated to meet your specific circumstances. In University College you can earn an Associate's Degree in as little as two years . . . and a Bachelor's Degree in four. A Northeastern degree is nationally recognized as a symbol of excellence in higher education. Many executives, engineers, educators and other professional leaders got their start at Northeastern University.

If you're going to invest the time, effort and money in your continuing education, do it at Northeastern where your degree will really mean something.

LIMITED HAIR?

If you have a bald spot that bothers you, we can make it disappear. Permanently.

Sleight of hand? No. It's our exciting concept of creating a hair transplant specifically for you. We're Hair Unlimited. And, thanks to a pioneer in the field, we're one of the largest and oldest hair replacement companies in the country.

We call our technique artistic transplanting. Our customers call it magic. Either way, you get the most natural, carefree results possible. So good, in fact, even your mirror won't know for sure.

At Hair Unlimited, transplanting isn't the only answer, either. It's just one of a whole range of options you can choose from when selecting the solution you want to live with. In other words, we want you to be vain. We want you to know everything there is to know about hair replacement. And then we want you to consider very carefully which method is going to complement the man you are. Because it's your life, and you should have a big say in how you want to look in it.

Which brings us to a key point. All our work is done by experts. No fly-by-nights or novices for us. We employ only licensed specialists who do the most professional work done in hair replacement today. And still manage to treat you like the individual you are.

We've got a booklet that will tell you how we do it. All the tricks of our trade. Let us send it to you. Because, face it, 70 percent of our customers are men between the ages of 21-45. And, at that age, who needs bald spots?

DATING

UNITED SINGLES is an alternate way of meeting people. It's designed for those whose work does not allow them the time to meet people, and, who are tired of the results they have gotten from their own style of meeting people.
Our purpose is to determine your basic attitudes and refer you to people who match them. For each match selected for you, we provide a referral sheet which includes a photo and vital statistics, elimating the cold, blind date approach. FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL 337-5608 or 426-2400.

One man's fish is another man's poisson.

King's Dictionary of Boston, published in 1883, reported:

"The leading French restaurant of the city is 'Ober's.' This has more than local fame. The viands here are unsurpassed."

A small booklet issued shortly thereafter introduced next door neighbor Frank Locke's recently opened 'Wine Rooms' as having "the general appearance of an enchanting picture, a sumptuous apartment in some palatial edifice."

And so Ober, with his plain interiors and fancy food, found himself in an alley fight with Locke with his plain food and fancy interiors.

The Winner was Boston.

As history would have it, both men departed Winter Place and other places of this world having never consummated a marriage.

And it wasn't until 1901, that a Frenchman of considerable charm and estimable taste, broke down the small barrier (in actuality, a door) that separated both establishments.

And from that memorable year until his death in 1939, it was Emil Camus who gave Locke-Ober its distinctive character.

Today, under the direction of David H. Wells, Locke-Ober still offers (from their menu of elaborate resources), Frank Locke's Dover Sole and Louis Ober's filet of sole bonne femme.

One man's fish. Another man's poisson.

NORTH

Andover Inn-Chapel Ave, Andover, 475-5903. On the grounds of Phillips Andover Academy, but a far cry from school fare. Some of the far-flung favorites are Loempia, scampi flambe. Make sure that the pastry cart rolls past your table. On Sundays, the dinner feature is Rijstaffel, a Dutch-Indonesian buffet. Moderately priced, elegant. Full bar. Open Mon-Sat, 11:30-3, and 5-10. Sun, 10:30 am-3 pm, and 4-9 pm. AE, BA/V, DC, MC.

Beef and Oyster House-143 Washington St, Salem, 744-4334. Beef and oysters, yes, but you needn't limit yourself to these eponymous delights, as there are other land and sea dishes to be had. Moderately expensive, fully licensed. Hours: Daily, 11 am-11 pm. AE, BA/V, MC.

Beverly Depot-10 Park St, Beverly, 927-5402. Take the Boston and Maine to the Depot, for steaks, chops, and all the trimmings, in railroad surroundings. Moderate prices, full bar. Closed on Mons, it's open for dinner 5-10 pm, Sun-Thurs; 5-11 pm Fri-Sat. AE, MC.

Bishop's-99 Hampshire St, Lawrence, 683-7143. The standard bill of fare — roasts and steaks — is enlivened by shish kebab and Arabic appetizers: tahini, stuffed grape leaves, baba ganoosh. Open daily, 11:30 am-10 pm, Fri-Sat nights 'til 11. Full bar. No reservations are taken on Sat nights, but they are strongly advised on Wed, Fri, and Sun. AE, BA/V, CB, DC, MC.

Michael's House-26 Atlantic Ave, Marblehead, 631-1255. The house predates the restaurant by nearly two centuries. At lunch, try the quiche du jour, or the open steak sandwich. Seafood is a specialty any time. Prices are moderate. Open daily, 11:30-2, and 5:30-midnight. Full bar, wine list. AE, MC.

Proctor House-373 Lowell St, Peabody, 531-1598. In 18th-century surroundings, the menu is Yankee con brio, American and Italian specialties. Moderate prices, full bar. Hours: 11:30 am-10 pm, til 11 Fri-Sat. AE, BA/V, CB, DC, MC.

Rosalie's-18 Seward St, Marblehead, 631-9888. The cucina here is North Italian, the surroundings warmly Victorian. Veal Sorrentino, shrimp Luciana. Open daily, 11:45-2:30, and 5:30-10 pm. Reservations are advised for dinner. Fully licensed, no credit cards.

WEST

Cafe l'Orange-Thoreau St, Concord, 369-8700. Upstairs in the Concord Depot, the Cafe is low-key, contemporary, and the cuisine is French: boneless rack of lamb, coquilles St. Jacques, duckling. Prices are moderate, reservations are accepted. Fully licensed. Hours: Mon-Sat, 11:30 am-2:30 pm, and 6-9, ('til 10 pm Fri-Sat), closed Suns. AE, MC.

The Deli-Shopper's World, Framingham, 872-4442. A nice self-explanatory name, and a nice spot to take a break from shopping. Complimentary cole slaw and pickles. Beer and wine only, reservations not required. Hours: open daily at 7 am; Mon-Thurs until 10 pm; Fri-Sat until 1 am; Sun until 8 pm. BA V.

The Every Day Gourmet-Mill & Speen Sts, Natick, 653-8010. Not quite everyday, actually, it's only open on weekends. The menu from this teaching kitchen changes all the time. Make reservations, and bring your own things to drink. Hours: Fri-Sat, noon-3 pm, Sun, 10 am-2 pm. No credit cards.

Legal Seafoods-Rte 9, in the Chestnut Hill Shopping Centre, 277-7300. Legal's outpost on the western front is sometimes less hectic than the Cambridge branch, especially if you are willing to eat early or late. Otherwise, the set-up is pretty much the same: the crowds, crowds, crowds are offset by the fish, fish, fish. Reservations for large parties. Full bar. Hours: Mon-Sat, 11 am-9 pm; Sun, 1-9 pm. AE, and personal checks.

Longfellow's Wayside Inn-Rte 20, S Sudbury, 443-8846. Both the Inn and its kitchen are faithfully and sturdily Yankee. Hot corn muffins are a stand-by. Among the other favorites: Massachusetts duckling, lobster, baked stuffed shrimp. Open every day, 11:30-3:30, and 5:30-9. Suns, 12 noon-8 pm. The premises are fully licensed and reservations are strongly advised. AE, BA/V, DC, MC.

Sabra-45 Union St. Newton Center, 527-5641. Isreali and Middle Eastern specialties, in gustatory harmony. Specialties include hamin on Saturdays, and shakshuka for Sunday brunch. Not expensive, either. Full bar. Hours: Mon-Tues, 11 am-11 pm; Wed-Sun, 11 am-midnight. AE, BA/V, MC.

Upper Crust-At the Sheraton-Tara Hotel, Framingham, 879-7200, and Braintree, 848-0600. Steaks and fish, chicken Hongroise, and the Tom Jones Dinner, a massive feast that requires two days notice. Fully licensed. Hours: Mon-Fri, 5 pm-10:30 pm; until 11 Sat; Sun, 3:30 pm-10 pm. Lunch, 11:30 am-3 pm, Mon-Fri. AE, BA/V, CB, DC, MC.

The William Paul House-Reservoir St (Rte 31) Holden, 829-6666. The specialty of the House is seafood, with a continental accent: baked stuffed filet of sole, seafood Mornay. Moderate prices, full bar. Hours: Tues-Sat, 5-10 pm, Sun, noon-8 pm. AE, BA/V, MC.

Yangtze River Restaurant-25 Depot Sq, Lexington Center. 861-6031. Mandarin-Szechuan with Polynesian things as well: Gai-Har-Lo-Mein, Shrimp Almond Ding, Blessed Family Happiness. More happiness: everything is nicely explained on the menu, which is long. Full bar. Hours: Sun-Thurs, 11:30 am-9:30 pm; Fri-Sat, until 10:30 pm. AE, BA/V, MC.

SOUTH

The Country Fare-1217 Main St, Hingham, 749-2260. Wildlife from land and sea among the entrées: King Crab casserole, roast duck. Moderately expensive. The premises are fully licensed, and reservations are recommended. Hours: Tues-Sat, 11:30 am-9 pm; Sun, 11:30 am-8 pm. AE, BA/V, DC, MC.

The Ground Round-Kings Plaza, Braintree, 848-4848, and other locations. A multi-media dining experience, music and TV along with burgers and other sandwich specialties. Inexpensive. Full bar. Hours: Daily, 11:30 am-1 am. No credit cards.

Inn For All Seasons-32 Barker Rd, Scituate Harbor, 545-6699. Imaginative continental menu, topped off with special desserts, like three-layer chocolate cake and Linzertorte. Entrees include chicken Kiev, veal Oscar, and individual beef Wellington. Moderately expensive. Fully licensed. Closed on Mons, otherwise, the hours are noon-2 pm, and 5-10 pm. Sun brunch 11 am-2 pm. Reservations. MC.

Ken's Fish House-218 Dedham St, Norfolk, 384-8152. A fish house, with steak and chicken, too, for landlubbers. Moderate prices. Full bar. Reservations are required on holidays. Hours: Daily, 11:30 am-10 pm. AE, DC, MC.

Plaza Inn-Rte 1, Wrentham, 384-2800. "The pleasures of the table are of all time, and all ages, of every country and of every day." Entrees, which are French, Italian, and American, start at $5.95. Full bar. Hours: Daily, from 11 am. AE, MC.

Ronnie's Kosher Restaurant-1179 N Main, Randolph, 986-6743. Strictly Kosher, all the food is made on the premises under rabbinical supervision. Roast brisket, kreplach soup, and stuffed chicken are a few of the favorites. No liquor. Hours: Sun-Thurs, 8 am-11 am, noon-4 pm, and 5-9 pm. Fri: 8 am-5 pm. Sat: 5-9 pm. BA/V, MC.

Tinker's Dam-Rte 139, Pembroke, 826-5748. Cozy, candlelit dining in the upstairs dining room. A glowing pine bar provides a full range of drinks to complement a menu that is basically Continental: veal Oscar, Wiener Schnitzel. The prices are moderate. Open 11:30-2:30, Mon-Fri, and 6-10 pm Tues-Sun. Reservations for large groups only, eight or more. BA/V, DC, MC.

The Victorian-583 Linwood Ave, Whitinsville, 234-2500. Southwest of Milford, Whitinsville may be off the beaten track, but The Victorian will reward you with period decor and a menu that is mostly French. Closed Mons, otherwise, Tues-Sat, 11:30 am-2:30 pm and from 5:30 pm onwards, and Sun, noon-8 pm. Fully licensed. BA/V, MC.

Winsor House Inn-390 Washington St Duxbury, 934-2548. The Winsor House is grandly Federalist without, warmly panelled within. Continental menu: Saltimbocca, coquilles St. Jacques, sole Jacqueline. Moderately expensive. Fully licensed. Hours: Tues-Sat 11:30 am-2 pm; Tues-Sat 6 pm-9 pm, Fri-Sat. 6-10 pm. Reservations are a good idea for weekend dining. AE,BA/V, DC, MC.

Puzzle #41
Yu Said It

By Don Rubin

Five thousand years ago, according to legend, the First Emperor of China appointed a commission of learned men to study the world and develop the elements basic to Eastern culture.

The commissioners, another legend maintains, were actually all "First Emperors," and each was responsible for a different aspect of social and artistic achievement: language, medicine, agriculture, etc.

One of the sovereigns — Fu Hsi, Huang Ti, Yu, nobody knows for sure — is said to have invented writing after seeing a dragon-horse leap out of the Yellow River.

(Words, apparently, simply couldn't express his enlightenment. In relating the experience to the others, he had to draw pictures of the dragon and the horse.) And, to this day, Chinese remains a language of symbolic characters based, for the most part, on pictographs (pictures of concrete things) and ideographs (pictures containing the ideas of things).

We've reproduced some of those basic characters here, and we'd like your help in identifying them. Simply match the drawing with its English counterpart. Remember, all of them are pictures.

And as for our guess regarding which of those Emperors deserves the ultimate credit (or blame) for this week's puzzle, there's not a question in our minds.

It had to be Yu.

Answers to Puzzle #39
Weather Proof

We wish that the real weathermen could predict the weather with as much accuracy as our winners answered the puzzle. Not much trouble at all, except for a slight tendency to label Map 1 as highest March temperature. The little numbers may have been a mite hard to make out, but it will be a cold day in Hell when it's 93 on St. Patrick's Day in Missoula, Montana. Here are the folks who know their isobars from their elbows: Robert J. Ruch, Southborough; Serge Botsaris, Wayland; Richard Dowan, Marshfield; Abby Hamilton, WIndhester; William B. Bendel, Framingham; Jim Manning, Braintree; Bruce Kunkel, Chelmsford; R. J. Merrow, Winchester; David E. White, Arlington; Thomas Burda, Quincy.

Rules of the Game

From now on, the answers to and winners of any given puzzle will appear TWO WEEKS after the puzzle runs in METROGUIDE. Note that the deadline has also been extended.

1. Names of the first ten contestants with the correct answer will be published in METROGUIDE. All contestants submitting correct answers to any of the puzzles through August 31 will qualify for the Lottery, and a grand prize of dinner for two with all the trimmings. The METRODINNER winner will be announced in the September 14 issue of METROGUIDE.
2. All entries in The Puzzle Contest must be received at the METROGUIDE office, 227 Statler Office Building, Boston, MA 02116, by noon, the Thursday one week after publication.
3. All entries must be accompanied by the name and address of the contestant.
4. Employees of METROGUIDE and their immediate families are not eligible.
5. All entries must be accompanied by a tearsheet of the puzzle page. Whenever possible, the Puzzle answer should be entered on the form provided.

Affirmative action given new thrust

By ELIZABETH McKINNON
of the Graphic staff

Virgil Perez of Lawrence has been hired as Newton's new affirmative action officer. He will start work Sept. 5.

Perez will be the fourth affirmative action officer for the city in the past 18 months.

Newton was cited by the U.S. Office of Revenue Sharing in June 1977 for violation of federal revenue-sharing regulations against job discrimination.

Since the spring of 1977 the position of affirmative action officer has been held by three persons placed by the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA). The top pay allowed by CETA, $10,000, was not enough either to attract adequately trained personnel or to keep them on the job for more than a few months, if they were qualified.

Perez's salary will be $14,000, a figure arrived at by velvet-gloved persuasion of the Board of Aldermen by Mayor Theodore Mann's top assistant, Jane Pitt.

At the time of the federal charge of discrimination, Newton employed only 1.4 percent minority workers and 12.6 percent women in departments receiving revenue sharing money. According to the Office of Revenue Sharing, these figures should have been 7 percent and 42.4 percent, respectively.

Efforts of the Personnel Department have improved these figures somewhat since then.

Perez is resigning from his position of director of equal employment opportunity for the city of Lawrence Aug. 25. In that capacity he advised the mayor, the city council, and department heads on employment procedures in accordance with federal and state laws and monitored the city's compliance with its affirmative action program, among other aspects of the job.

Part of his job in Newton will be to change the attitudes of some employees both toward minority coworkers and about seeking promotions for themselves.

Personnel Director Edith Meisser has frequently commented on the reluctance of most women employees to apply for a higher-level job that is vacant, even though they are qualified and could perform well.

Internal promotion of minority members and women is one of the goals of affirmative action.

Perez will also have to deal with Civil Service, which has been accused of being one of the reasons for job discrimination inasmuch as higher test grades may be achieved, for a variety of reasons, by white applicants.

Civil Service now allows the hiring authority to request an alternate list of minority and female applicants to

$2.3m more sought to run city in '79

A $2.3 million supplementary budget request from Mayor Theodore Mann will be discussed with members of the Board of Aldermen at a private supper meeting tonight (Thursday) in preparation for Board action Sept. 5 approving a new tax rate expected to be up at least $6.

Asked Monday at a news conference why the meeting is closed to the press and the public, the mayor answered that there would be discussion of collective bargaining.

City Solicitor Daniel Funk told him the meeting was not required to be open under the provisions of the open meeting law.

The fiscal 1979 budget passed this spring was for $73 million.

In addition to a $1.6 million appropriation to settle collective bargaining, the mayor is asking for $300,000 for expected hospital-medical-insurance expenses, $250,000 for street reconstruction, and $135,000 the city's spendable surplus, which is $700,000. The $700,000 must last until March 31.

The treasurer's office hopes to mail tax bills on Sept. 11 to avoid having to borrow money in anticipation of taxes. To meet this date, the Board of Assessors expect to have the new tax rate certified by the state on Sept. 7.

Estimates by knowledgeable city officials point to a $6 to $7 increase in the tax rate, now $166.20.

The Board of Aldermen may decrease items in the mayor's supplemental budget but may not increase them.

The Public Facilities Committee will meet immediately after the supper meeting to deliberate on these budget items. The Finance Committee meets next Aug. 30.

Principal to teach

Former Hamilton School Principal Joan Warner will receive her full pay of about $31,000 in September to be a fourth grade teacher at Bowen School in Newton Centre.

Hamilton School in Lower Falls has been closed due to declining enrollment, and Ms. Warner was demoted in June by the School Committee to a teacher, with a loss of about $7000 in pay.

She objected through the channels of the Newton Teachers Association (NTA), which was still at the time negotiating a reduction-in-force clause with the School Committee to cover principals.

Former NTA President Richard Adams said Ms. Warner's case had a great impact on the negotiations.

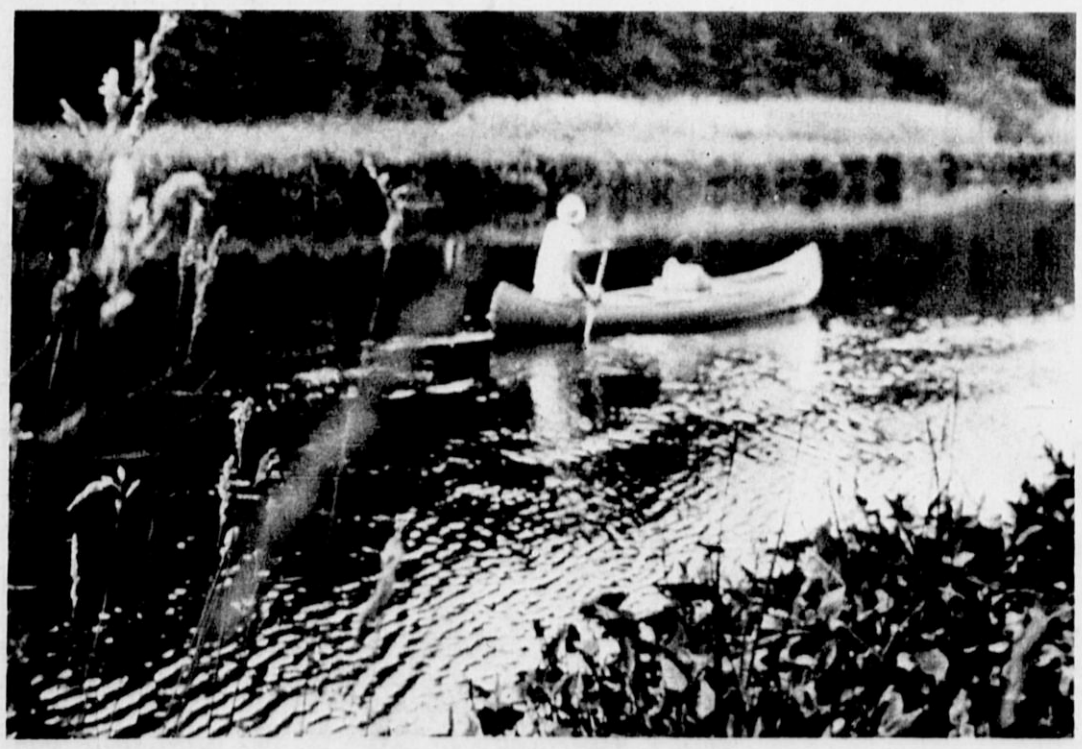

The Unit B contract for school administrators now apparently insures that principals whose schools are closed will receive principals' pay for two to three years, depending on how ambitiously and when they apply for principalships in Newton.

The contract has not been ratified by the administrators, and neither side is discussing the details of the offer.

Ms. Warner's lawyer, Jeffrey Freedman, said he advised her not to comment publicly on her opinion of the contract offer.

Ms. Warner said she was hoping for some special administrative position in the schools since she would be paid full salary.

She was passed by when the School Committee appointed Robert Harrington as the new principal of the Zervas School in Waban.

Architect picked for 40 units of state-funded elderly housing

By LINDA FRITZ
Graphic correspondent

After several hours of grueling interviews, the Community Development Authority and the Planning and Development Board Monday night selected Putnam & Associates as its top-choice architect for 40 units of housing for the elderly.

The project will be financed by the state's Department of Community Affairs (DCA). It is part of a $31 million package to be divided among 16 communities throughout the state.

Putnam's projects include converting the Putnam School in Cambridge to elderly housing and a 60-unit elderly housing project in East Boston. The firm is also working on a development for the elderly in Claremont, N.H., sponsored by the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development.

One of the architect's tasks will be to help the authority and the board select a suitable site for the project. The final site may call for new construction or for adaptive reuse of an old building.

Buildings listed in the April 1978 application to DCA as possible sites were the Peirce, Peabody, Hamilton and Emerson schools. Also included were Gorin-Leeder's 235-295 Washington St. building, the Gamewell building on Chestnut Street, L.E. Gurney's 44 Oak St., the Sherman Paper Products Company building at 275 Needham St., Security Mills on Norwood Avenue, and the Mazzola Bakery on Adams Street.

Not mentioned were the the Murray Road School and Claflin Hall, for which 15 proposals are currently being evaluated. The architect, however, will not be limited to those buildings listed in the application.

In working on the elderly housing projects, Joseph Henry Putnam, the principal of Putnam & Associates, said he has consulted sociologists. They told him that many elderly are fearful of cliques that take over the front door seating areas to watch the comings and goings of tenants.

Putnam's solution in the Claremont project was to make the seating area by the door limited and uncomfortable. Instead he put the conversation area further back and blocked its view of the front door.

In designing for the elderly, Putnam said, the single most important

Paul Street project fading

The city of Newton is contemplating landtaking procedures to acquire the land on Paul Street, Newton Centre, for elderly housing, according to Planning Director Charles Thomas.

Failure of the Board of Aldermen to grant a license for an increase in storage of oil to the owner of the land, Frank Donato, who had relocated his oil depot to West Newton, has prevented the city purchase of the property.

Under regulations of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, which was to have subsidized the project, the city must provide another site for a displaced business.

The Board of Aldermen would not allow Donato to operate an expanded oil business in the business district of West Newton because of concerns about public safety. He is operating under a limited license from another firm's property.

Landtaking, however amicable it may be, requires HUD approval, Thomas said, and he is not at all sure that HUD will allow the landtaking.

The size of the building, and the number of units in it, was whittled down until it was more or less acceptable to the neighborhood through many arduous meetings.

But then the unit cost of the apartments was too high for HUD, and architects, working with the Planning Department, trimmed certain

Backman charges state with child abuse at Worcester

State Sen. Jack Backman, chairman of the Human Services Committee, and representatives of the Task Force on Institutional Violence have released a report detailing a pattern of child abuse at the Worcester Secure Treatment Unit run by the Department of Youth Services.

Sen. Backman called upon the State Secretary of Human Services to conduct a thorough investigation of the policies of the Department and the Office for Children, which is responsible for licensing the facility.

Although the task force was initially directed by the Office for Children to make the investigation, Backman charged that the Office for Children later tried to suppress its findings and actually fired two employees for allegedly speaking to Backman about one suicide and two attempted suicides.

The report, compiled by the "Task Force on Institutional Abuse" and based on on-site investigations in Worcester last spring, details a series of incidents which resulted in the death or serious injury of adolescents in the Commonwealth's custody. The Task Force report condemns the Department of Youth Service for running an abusive facility and charges the Office for Children with failure . to carry out its monitoring obligations. An appendix documents a pattern of harassment and the firing of task force members apparently designed to suppress release of the report.

"The .administrators of the program at Worcester have admitted to me most of the abuses that the report alleges," Backman said. "In fact, my personal meetings with the administrators and my inspection of the facility at Worcester this week confirmed that the report actually understates the abusive treatment of the kids at Worcester."

"We have heard much in recent weeks about the state's new commitment to ending child abuse. It is the most incredible hypocrisy to make such statements at the same time that abusive treatment is taking place in the Commonwealth's own institutions."

Reports of child abuse rise; study of services underway

"Reports of child abuse, which usually decrease in the summertime, are up this year," said Rep. David J. Mofenson (D-Newton), House chairman of the Committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs. "Since the stories surrounding the Gallison child abuse case broke this spring, the number of reports of child abuse have risen dramatically statewide."

Mofenson based his comments on preliminary findings of the Speaker's Special Inquiry on Protective Services. The inquiry is an informal investigation and analysis of protective services problems which House Speaker Thomas McGee established two months ago at the request of Rep. Mofenson.

"It is still unclear as to whether the rise reflects an increase in the number of child abuse cases or people are becoming more sensitive to the importance of reporting problems and seeking help," Mofenson said.

The special inquiry staff is currently visiting regional and local children's protective services offices around the state in an effort to understand what the procedural problems are in delivering services to abused and neglected children in need and to their families.

Gunman hijacks $10,000 cargo in Newton Corner

A 16-foot truck was hijacked at gunpoint Friday morning in Newton Corner after the driver delivered an order of cigarettes and candy to Hubbard Drug.

Newton police are still investigating the hijacking of over $10,000 worth of goods at about 9:15 a.m. when a 23-year-old Hyde Park man was driving for the George Melhado Company of Hyde Park.

The driver was released unhurt by another Melhado truck driver who came across the hijacked truck after it had been unloaded and left in King's Plaza in Braintree.

Acccording to Newton police, the driver, James Harper, was pushed forward after getting in his cab by a man who held a revolver on the side of the driver's face.

The driver was ordered to lie face down on the floor of the cab, and was driven around for a8bout 45 minutes, police said.

The truck stopped and other unidentified persons unloaded the cargo of cigarettes and candy worth over $10,000.

Harper was told to pull his sweatshirt over his eyes and was then locked in the back of the truck. .

The hijacker told Harper that the police would be called after the truck was abandoned, . and they apparently were.

Braintree police received an anonymous call at about 11:10 p.m. about the abandoned truck, but Harper was released by the other Melhado truck driver.

Sgt. Gerald Lawrence is investigating the case.

Newton-Wellesley opens cancer outpatient center

Comprehensive service to the cancer patient is the goal of Newton-Wellesley Hospital's Ambulatory Oncology Center, which opened recently in newly renovated quarters in the hospital's outpatient department.

The center is directed by Dr. Timothy O'Connor, the hospital's new chief of oncology (the study of tumors). O'Connor trained in medicine and hematology at St. Vincent's Hospital in Worcester and has completed a two-year fellowship in oncology at New England Medical Center Hospital.

Center patients are followed by Viola Harrell, a registered nurse with extensive experience and training in oncology who is also a certified physician's assistant. A social worker and a dietician complete the cancer care team, which works closely with patients' referring physicians.

Every form of cancer treatment is available through the center, including conventional chemotherapy as well as newer, experimental chemotherapy, immunotherapy, surgery, and radiotherapy.

O'Connor says that as much patient care as possible will be given on an ambulatory basis, as studies have shown that patients receiving chemotherapy on an outpatient basis do better than patients who are given drugs while hospitalized.

Besides serving as a treatment center, the clinic provides facilities for teaching and conferences among all of the professionals involved in caring for a cancer patient.

Two developers chosen for Moulton St. lots

The Planning and Development Board has chosen two developers for the Moulton Street single-family house lots.

Selected to develop two of the eight parcels was David St. John. He is the developer and architect of the other Moulton Street houses.

Vine Brook Realty Trust was chosen to develop five lots. Vine Brook offered to build on a sixth lot, but because of the terrain it was withdrawn from sale for reappraisal.

Both Vine Brook and St. John plan to build three-bedroom homes with an estimated sale price of approximately $60.000.

Originally the eight house lots were planned for subsidized single-family housing. When federal financing for such a project was no longer available, the Board of Aldermen approved selling the parcels to a developer who would build for market-level sales.

The lots were advertised this winter to be sold as a package to a single developer. When nobody bid on them, the Planning & Development Board put them on the market for individual sale at fixed prices.

At the same time, the board eliminated the requirement of putting money down when submitting a proposal. The current rules give the selected developers two weeks to purchase the land.

Foster care for elderly and disabled tried under new law

David J. Mofenson (D-Newton), has called a new law which directs the Department of Public Welfare to establish a foster care program for aged and disabled adults one of the highlights of the 1978 legislative year.

Mofenson, who as House chairman of the Committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs helped shape the bill into law, said, "The goal is to help persons who due to age or disability are incapable of living in a home setting without the presence and assistance of another person. It's designed to provide an alternative to nursing home institutionalization.

"Not only does this proposal hold out the opportunity for enriched lives for the elderly and disabled, but it also has the potential for saving the Commonwealth millions of dollars which other wise would have to be spent on institutionalized care," Mofenson said.

Rules will include "qualifications for persons providing foster home care, requirements regarding the nutritional and personal care services rendered in foster homes, and health, fire, safety, and space requirements for foster homes; and requirements regarding the medical supervision. The Department shall investigate all potential sources of federal funding for such foster-home care and shall take all necessary steps to secure such funding.

This program is a two-year pilot program. The Welfare Department is directed to "establish criteria to evaluate the program's cost effectiveness and life enhancement features" compared to nursing homes, and other long-term facilities. By May 1980, a decision will be made regarding whether the program should be extended, altered or eliminated.

Alderman tries again to cut size of Board of Aldermen

Ald. Ethel Sheehan has filed a measure to reduce the size of the Board of Aldermen.

Her proposal would cut the Board from 16 aldermen-at-large and eight ward aldermen to eight of each.

If the Board of Aldermen votes not to cut its size, Sheehan will get signatures of 10 percent of the registered voters to put the matter on the 1979 municipal ballot as a public opinion advisory question.

The outcome would not be binding on the Board of Aldermen, but the Board would probably heed public opinion. A cut in the size of the Board made by this method could not take effect until the 1981 ballot.

Ald. Sheehan recently co-filed with Ald. Robert Sandman a measure to halve the present aldermanic salary of $1800 a year. The measure was defeated.

Sheehan filed a measure to put the question on the ballot as a binding question. That proposal was defeated by a four-vote margin. An amendment to change it to a nonbinding guestion failed on a tie vote, 12-12.

Sheehan feels that the 24-member size of the Board makes city business slow and cumbersome and that accountability and visibility of aldermen would be increased if there were fewer of them.

Max Rubin honored for role in reopening NU Law School

Max S. Rubin of Brandeis Road, Newton Centre, was honored recently by the alumni association for his leadership in the 1968 reopening of the Northeastern University Law School.

When Northeastern School of Law first opened in 1898, it was the first law school in the Boston area offering a juris doctor degree through an evening program. In 1968, when the school reopened after being closed for 12 years because of economic and social problems, it was the first school in the country to offer cooperative legal education. This unique program offered a combination of classroom study and practical experience in law.

Rubin, who graduated magna cum laude in 1936, was one of seven outstanding members of the Northeastern School of Law honored at this event for their contributions to the school and to the development and respect of the legal profession.

Rubin, who also holds an L.L.M. degree from Northeastern, is a past president and a current executive committee member of the School of Law Alumni Association.

In private practice since 1936, Rubin has served as a special instructor of trusts and future interests at the Northeastern School of Law.

License fees go up in '79

Increased license fees for restaurants and liquor stores will go into effect with 1979 license renewals, according to Carleton Merrill, administrative director of the Newton Board of License Commissioners.

The board voted at its Aug. 15 meeting to increase the fees to those listed below. The current fees are shown in parentheses.

Package store, wine and malt, $750 ($500); restaurant, all-alcoholic six-day, $1600 ($1250); restaurant, all-alcoholic seven-day, $2000 ($1500); restaurant, wine and malt six-day, $750 ($500); restaurant, wine and malt seven-day, $850 ($600).; innholder, all-alcoholic, $2000 ($1500) .

License fees remaining the same are package store, all-alcoholic, $1500; druggist, all-alcoholic, $300; clpb, all-alcoholic, $1000; commercial club, all-alcoholic, $1800; educational institution, $1000; seasonal license, all-alcoholic, $500; seasonal license, wine and malt, $250; common victualler, $25; one-day licenses, $15.

License fees have been increased only twice in the past 21 years, most recently in 1972.

Existing state law allows a maximum of $2500 for a seven-day all-alcoholic license8and $1000 for a seven-day wine and malt license for a restaurant, Merrill noted.

Brochure describes human services available to residents

The services provided by the Newton Department of Human Services are described in a brochure available now.

The brochure outlines the functions of the Council on Aging, Youth Commission, Human Rights Commission, and the Mayor's Committee on the Environment of the Handicapped, plus other associated services available to Newton residents.

It will be distributed at drop-in centers, libraries, churches and synagogues, social service agencies, and other appropriate locations.

Newton residents and other interested persons should call the Department of Human Services at 552-7170 for a copy of the brochure or for additional information or assistance with any of the services listed.

Boston balloon

Boston: An 85-foot high hot air balloon filled Summer St. in downtown Boston (yesterday) as it was launched to officially open The Corner, the new indoor shopping mall recycled from the old Gilchrist department store. # Balloonists descend on Oak Hill estate

Two men who descended upon Newton in a helium balloon had police running around in circles Monday afternoon before they landed in Murley estate on Dedham Street.

Dr. Clayton Thomas of Dingley Dell, Brimfield, and William Miner of 56 Sargent St., Winthrop, took off from the opening ceremony at the pedestrian mall at Winter and Washington streets, Boston, and expected to land in Franklin Park.

Unexpected winds blew the red and white balloon off course. Police spotted it at 1:11 p.m., and thought it would land at Memorial-Spaulding or Solomon Schechter School.

Then it appeared it was heading for the large field between Newton South High School and Meadowbrook Junior High.

Dr. Thomas, president of a balloon school in Palmer, and Miner, an operations officer for the Federel Aviation Administration at Logan Airport, guided the balloon to a soft landing at Murley field, then folded it up and left in a truck, police said.

Sgt. Salemme promoted to Newton police lieutenant

Chief William F. Quinn announced John A. Salemme was promoted to the rank of lieutenant during a ceremony this week at Newton Police Headquarters.

Lt. Salemme was appointed a police officer on Aug. 8, 1967, and made sergeant on May 6, 1973.

Lt. John A. Salemme

Lt. Salemme is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Salemme and is married to the former Gayle Peterson. They have two children, John, 8, and Kimberley, 5.

Lt. Salemme has an associate's and a bachelor's degree in law enforcement from Northeastern University. He has attended Babson College Command School, State Police Narcotic School and State Police Fingerprint Identification School.

He is planning to return to school in the fall to obtain a master's degree in public administration.

Mayor Theodore Mann administered the oath of office to Lt. Salemme and his badge was pinned on him by his father.

Mayor Mann, Judge Monte Basbas, Judge Paul Chernoff, Alderman Mark White, and Chief Quinn extolled Lt. Salemme and wished him future success.

Present for the ceremony were his immediate family — Mrs. Gayle Salemme, Mr. & Mrs. Louis Salemme, Mrs. Violet Levitt, Lt. Salemme's grandmother and approximately 80 friends and guests, including city, police, and court officials and employees.

Lt. Salemme will be transferred from his present assignment as assistant court prosecutor to night lieutenant. He will also continue as an instructor in police department training programs.

Three women's bathing suits taken from two clotheslines

Two women's bathing suits were snatched from a clothesline in Auburndale Friday night, and a bathing suit and other women's clothes were taken from a clothesline in West Newton Thursday night.

A woman on Freeman Street, Auburndale, told police that at noon Saturday she discovered one blue and one green one-piece bathing suits missing from her clothesline. They were valued at $95.

A lawn mower, two lawn chairs, and assorted clothes were taken from the back yard of a house on Webster Street, West Newton, some time between 8 p.m. Thursday and 11:30 a.m. Friday, police said.

The women's clothes missing were three nightgowns, two blouses, one bathrobe, two pairs of shorts, a red bathing suit, and eight bras, and eight pairs of underpants.

About $600 worth of goods were taken from a house on Duncklee Street, Newton Highlands, some time between last Tuesday and Saturday afternoon, police reported. Missing after the bulkhead door was forced open was a set of golf clubs, shoes, and balls, and two Motobecane bicycles.

A man moving into an apartment on Charlesbank Road, Newton Corner, was missing a large amount of goods after a window was forced between 8:15 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

Police said the items taken included a color TV, a microwave oven, a 35mm camera with two lenses, a movie projector, silver-plated service for eight, a gold wedding band, a gold pocket watch, a tiger's eye ring, and $35 cash.

Early Saturday morning police discovered a break at the Old Colony Gas Station, 1172 Beacon St., Four Corners.

The front door was found caved in at 4 a.m., and missing was $40 in cash and 17 cartons of cigarettes.

Newtonville wants CD money used for selected special projects

By LINDA FRITZ
Graphic Correspondent

Hoping to save money, the Newtonville Advisory Committee unanimously rejected last week having a master plan developed for the village, choosing instead to concentrate on specific projects for its community development program.

The projects were hammered out in previous meetings after sifting through the suggestions gathered at the villages needs assessment meeting held in May. They are a tot lot and shade trees for Albemarle Park, seating areas in front of the Newtonville library and at the corner of Walnut and Austin Street, alternative greenery for the business district, and greenery at the Austin Street and Star Market parking lots.

Arguing for a master plan, Samuel Glass said the village center suffers from the split caused by the bridge over the turnpike. A master plan, developed by an expert, could point the way to unifying the two segments, he said.

Newton Corner also suffers from such a split, said committee member Martina Jackson. Its community association hired Skidmore, Owings, & Merril (S.O.M.), a firm with a track record in solving such problems, she added. After spending much time and & money, S.O.M. may not have developed plans satisfactory to the community, Ms. Jackson said.

Newtonville's budget—$10,000 for planning and $150,000 for implementation—is not any as large as Newton Corners, Ms. Jackson said. It certainly will not be enough to solve the bridge problem, she said.

A master plan would be cheaper than doing only specific projects, which in the end may not solve the village's problem, Glass said. A consultant is an expert and would know what to do with the bridge, he added.

The committee would like to do much of the planning itself, committee Chairman Margaret Hannigan said. Then it should have some of its $10,000 planning money left over to carry out some of its projects, she added.

Turning to the question of storefront and sign improvements in Newtonville, Gidon Stern of Sparkle Cleaners warned businessmen will find such projects too expensive. It would cost me roughly $5000 just to take down my sign, he said. "I can't afford it," Stern added.

Grant and loan money is available for such projects from the community development program, said Dale Silen of the Planning Department.

Grants, perhaps, but loans have to be paid back, Stern said.

The decision to concentrate on the five projects rather than have a master plan made has been decided. The committee does not intend to go back to the community to ask its opinion.

Drinan says small businesses need help in competing for U.S. contracts

Legislation introduced by Congressman Robert F. Drinan to provide small companies a larger share of federal contracts has been approved by the Senate Committee on Small Business and endorsed by more than 100 members of the House of Representatives.

Drinan will visit over a dozen businesses, including the Lake Systems Corporation in Newton, during the upcoming district work period.

Drinan indicated that previous visits he has nade to district businesses strengthened his belief that small firms need assistance in competing for government contracts.

"My legislation could benefit several hundred small companies in the 4th Congressional District and literally thousands of businesses in the New England region," said Drinan, "and it ultimately promises to decrease government purchasing costs by increasing competition. The support of HR 9321 has been overwhelming and I am optimistic that it will become law in the 95th Congress."

"Small businesses contribute almost half of the nation's GNP and a vast majority of private sector jobs, yet they receive only $1 out of every $5 in procurement by the federal government," . Drinan said. "More equitable treatment of small businesses can and should be a priority of federal purchasing policy."

"What small businesses are asking for is a fighting chance and fair competition, not charity or subsidies from the government. At the very least, my bill will ensure that small firms have the information, the access, and the even-handed treatment from federal agencies which they are presently denied."

The Small Business Government Contracting Reform Act, HR 9321, was drafted by Drinan early in 1977 to alleviate the procedural obstacles which prevent small firms from competing with large corporations for their share of the $60 billion government procurement market.

The legislation mandates that government contract provisions be explained in plain English; that prime contract awards be contingent on adequate plans for small-business contracting; that agencies give small firms free access to bidding materials and at least 30 days to bid on each contract; and that arbitration panels be established to resolve minor contract disputes without the trouble and expense of going to court.

HR 9321 has been endorsed by the Smaller Business Association of New England, National Small Business Association, Council of Smaller Enterprises, and the American Association of Small Research Corporations.

The Drinan legislation has been cosponsored by 105 members of Congress, almost a quarter of the House of Representatives, and inspired a similar bill by Senator Gaylord Nelson, chairman of . the Senate Select Committee on Small Business.

West Newton man charged with arson

Arthur P. Lipman, 35, of 128 Highland St., West Newton, was charged with arson after an attempt was made to set a car on fire at that address Monday afternoon.

Police Officer Ronald Perrault was directing traffic in West Newton Square at 5:15 p.m. and saw a gray Chevrolet speed up Highland Street.

About 30 minutes later the same car sped down Highland Street and was stopped by Perrault at the corner of Henshaw and Cherry streets.

While giving the driver a citation for speeding, Officer Perrault received a call for a car fire at the man's address.

At 128 Highland St. police found a green Porsche smoking in the driveway, with a burning broom under the car. The car had been drenched with kerosene.

The fire was put out, and after an investigation, police charged Lipman with arson.

Dumping of nuclear waste

In recent months there have been an increasing number of demonstrations against the construction of nuclear plants. The latest was in California and was even larger than the several at Seabrook, New Hampshire. There have also been hearings in three parts of the country about the problem of disposing of radioactive waste. Both "anti-nuke" and "pro-nuke" spokesmen expressed doubts.

Dr. Andrew Kadak of the New England Power Company, which seeks a step-up in nuclear facilities, said in Boston that "the public is convinced that the government doesn't know what to do with the waste. The public wants to believe in the government's answer to the problem, but it has been given precious little evidence that the government knows what it is doing."

Two incidents in different parts of the country and unrelated to nuclear plants should indeed raise doubts about the effectiveness of destroying lethal products.

The case of the accidental mixture of PBBs in cattle feed in Michigan meant that hundreds of cattle had to be slaughtered and buried. But the problem didn't end. Farmers have found that apparently the PBBs seeped into the ground, presumably from cattle wastes before they were destroyed. Sheep raised on the same acres are now evincing symptons of the same illness. It even may be that grains and vegetables grown in that soil could carry traces.

In Niagara Falls, vapors from chemical wastes dumped into an abandoned canal and covered with soil and clay thirty years ago, have surfaced. It isn't only the odor that is foul. At least 11 of the chemicals are known carcinogens. The incidence of birth malformations, miscarriages and skin eruptions are higher than average. Pregnant women and families with infants have been ordered to leave their homes. The area will probably be declared a disaster area. Yet the method of disposing of the chemicals had been considered safe in 1948.

The Interagency Review Group, headed by the director of energy research in the Department of Energy, is specifically studying the problems of disposal of nuclear wastes. It has been holding hearings around the country. Meanwhile the problem continues to grow.

There are now about 330,000 cubic feet of waste from commercial power plants in storage, submerged in pools at the plants. The Defense Department has 11 million cubic feet of high level waste in storage. Some observers believe that such storage areas will be full to overflowing at just about the time the oil crunch is upon us — about ten years from now. Proposals to transfer the waste into the sea, or shoot it into space, have been largely discounted. Six states are now under consideration for a waste isolation pilot plant in which there would be what is now considered a long time burial. Undoubtedly citizens of those states will have a few demonstrations too. After all, no one wants what are now the unknown long term consequences of exposure in radioactive materials.

With oil shortages apparently a reality in the near future, the United States desperately needs alternative sources of power.

A long, extra hot summer for Carter

Commentary by Wesley G. Pippert, of United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter has had a long hot summer.

Items:

—Much of his domestic program, including his energy proposals, are stalled in Congress.

—He has had serious differences with three key Democrats: House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, AFL-CIO President George Meany and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

—According to the polls, many voters are skeptical about his competence.

In conversations with several key staff members, one gets the impression that Carter and their aides have been assuming much of the blame themselves. There are signs, however, that they may be shifting some of the blame to Congress.

The problem, in their opinion, is that the White House has failed to focus clearly on priority items and has failed to pursue in a clear, crisp fashion what Carter is doing.

It is expected that in the weeks to come, there will be a more thematic approach to what Carter says and does. Without this kind of approach, aides say, it is difficult to get a clear grasp of who Jimmy Carter is and where he is going.

This was evident in his speech this week to rural audience in Columbia, Mo. Carter spoke about farm prices, but in even more strongly about the need for Congress to deal with what he feels is now a serious domestic problem, inflation.

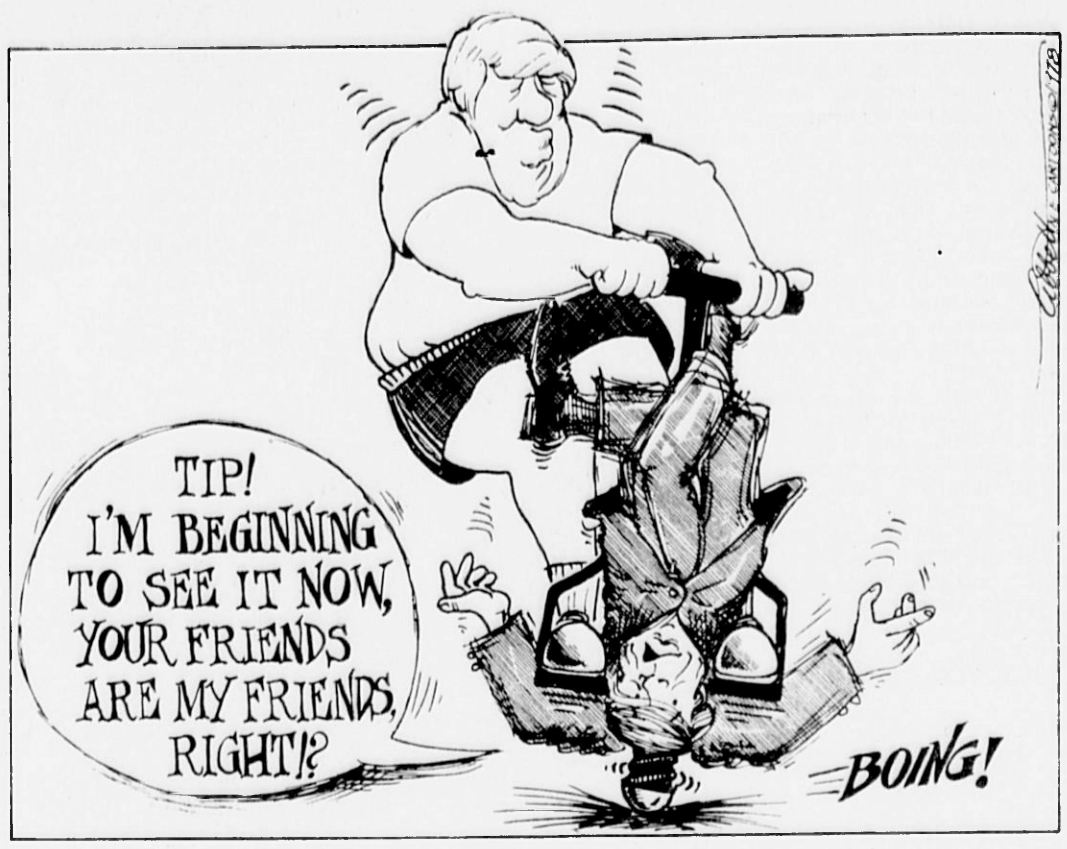

Surely, some of the responsibility for the slow progress of the energy bill, hospital cost containment, voter registration, civil service reform, tax reform and other Carter initiatives must be placed on Congress itself.

In the case of Congress, there are 535 members, each responsible only to his own constituency, many of them representing districts with almost total anonymity, with no newspaper or electronic reporters in Washington from their districts to keep track of them.

It's easy on Capitol Hill to forget favors from 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue downtown, to put one's regional interests ahead of the national interest, to rely on personal persuasion than on rational discussion.

That's a possible reason why O'Neill, one of the most powerful persons in America, could, in a fit of pique because a bureaucract friend of his got fired, refuse to talk to the president's representative.

This was one of the embarrassing moments for Carter this summer, when he turned employment agent to find a $51,000-a-year White House job for

Robert Griffin, who only a few days before had been dismissed from the scandalridden General Services Administration.

Whether Carter or Congress is more to blame, the public, if the polls are correct, tends to blame the president. Some surveys indicate that he should not run in 1980, and if he does, he probably would get beaten.

Carter's differences with Kennedy, on whom is now the regular quadrennial speculation that he is running for president, came over national health insurance. Kennedy, chairman of the Senate Health subcommittee, wants to move much faster than the president, who wants to tie full health insurance to the economy.

Carter's differences with Meany came over his handling of the economy, and especially the president's decision to hold federal pay increases to about 5 percent and the suggestion the private sector ought to do likewise.

Aides say that there is in Carter a little bit of the preacher and a little bit of the engineer. He does have a clear sense of the nation and what he wants to achieve, they say, and if he can begin to speak out with clarity and sensitivity to the people's moods and needs, as he did during the campaign, he will recapture the momentum.

Carter is a person of high morals and impeccable private behavior, and the polls about him personally actually reflect this. At least one aide says that if to be successful Carter, for instance, has to give in on what he feels are inefficient and wasteful water projects to be a successsful politician, he would prefer to be a one-term president.

But they argue that he is both competent and tough, and they recognize this is what they ought to emphasize more.

A sour strain in sweet Sunkist

Analysis by Gus Tyler

NEW YORK — For years, Sunkist was a sweet word to both my stomach and my soul. But of late, those golden-flavored oranges have begun to sour my spirits, although I continue to please my palate with these citrus delights.

To me, Sunkist was more than a fruit; it was a philosophy. It was a symbol of the little man who made it.

Sunkist is a cooperative — a form of social organization that makes it possible for the small independent producer to compete with the giants. The co-op called Sunkist has several thousand members, each of them a small-time grower who has joined with fellow growers to market their products. Without this sort of banding together, the diminutive entrepreneurs long ago would have been wiped out by the corporations of agribusiness.

Sunkist has been remarkably successful. About 70 percent of the California-Arizona citrus crop comes from Sunkist members. The combine is responsible for exporting more citrus than any other grower or combination of growers, having shipped more than 21 million cartons of its product overseas last year.

Now, reports The Wall Street Journal, Sunkist is facin9 complaints from the Federal Trade Commission that may break up the cooperative and — worse — may endanger all cooperatives in the land.

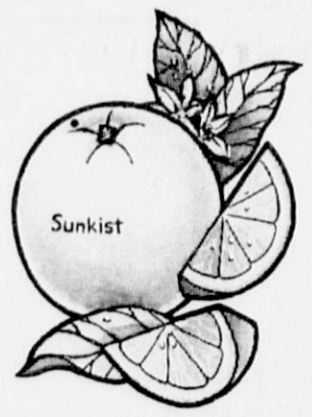

The charge is that Sunkist has been withholding "unreasonably large" quantities of lemons from the market in order to keep the price unreasonably high. Further charges allege that Sunkist has bought out a competing processor and that Sunkist has signed contracts binding some packing houses to work for them exclusively and to turn away independent growers.

In effect, this means that Sunkist is now doing what agricultural monopolies have been doing in the past: raising prices artificially, buying up competitors, choking independent operators.

Legally, Sunkist is probably guilty of nothing. The Capper-Volstead Act of 1922 exempted cooperatives from the anti-trust laws on the correct theory that it was necessary for the little guys to form a "combination" so that they could have equal power with the big corporations in the business arena.

But now Sunkist, itself, begins to look like just another of those corporations it was originally formed to oppose. And the FTC is moving to curb Sunkist.

Under present law, the FTC may not be able to do so. Hence, there may well be a new law to revoke or amend the Capper-Volstead Act. If that happens a deadly blow will have been struck at all kinds of cooperatives in America that have played a positive role in making it possible for the small businessman to survive.

Even some of the members of Sunkist who created Sunkist to be their protector now complain that the cooperative has become their oppressor. A former grower is quoted as saying: "We need a selling organization, but the co-op itself grows and grows, and we end up working for the management instead of the other way around."

Once again we are treated to the oft-told tale of Frankenstein: the monster who turned against his creator.

The pulse of politics speeds up

By RICHARD BULLWINKLE

Labor Day signals the last call to buy children's new school clothes, return to jobs or get houses in order after a lazy summer.

The elderly will cap their summer with a cookout Sunday at Hawthorn playground run by the Nonantum Xmas Party Committee.

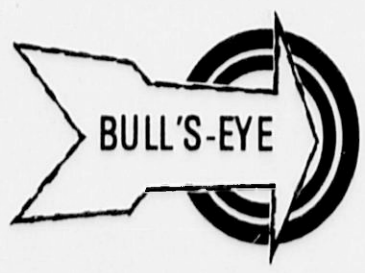

Political activity increases as the cookouts, flyers and door-knocking styles change to media blitzes of newspaper advertisement, television exposure and standard organizational meetings of PTAs, ward committees and local neighborhood groups.

Opportunities for "political ink" become greater with more frequent meetings of the Board of Aldermen and its committees and the School Committee.

The attention of the citizens of Newton will be focused on the plethora of races offered at all levels of government. Federal government has both parties offering candidates for United States senator. Congressman Drinan is opposed by Norm Walker, teacher and football coach from Newton North high school; the winner in this race has no opposition from the Republican Party so this is the contest.

On the state level, the chief constitutional officers, — governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, state treasurer and state auditor — all have opposition in both parties and many intraparty opponents.

The shrinking of the State Legislature has created built-in opposition in the three intra- and inter-city contests along with the scramble of local candidates seeking to replace those who are moving up to higher levels.

Locally State Sen. Jack Backman is unopposed.

The county-level candidates for treasurer and commissioner ride the coattails of the state candidates, but local candidates and an attempt at visibility by some of the candidates may have some effect.

The political activity in Newton has generated more candidates from the city and candidates paying more attention to Newton.

But more on each race and candidate in the next few weeks.

While Newton may have appeared a summer ghost town to many, the Newton Recreation Department, under the capable leadership of Commissioner Russ Halloran, is deserving of kudos for keeping the parks in fantastic shape and providing the many programs that kept trapped city dwellers happily occupied this summer.

I can't recall the number of times I've watched and enjoyed good baseball on summer evenings along with many of my fellow Newtonites. The heavy use of the facilities at Albemarle, Newton Centre, Upper Falls, and all other parks I did not see, speaks well of the programs.

While I'm passing out bouquets, Newton Treasurer Ted Scafidi and Comptroller Larry Marino are to be complimented for their roles in giving the city of Newton a triple-A credit rating in the borrowing market.

The city is blessed with these competent, smart and quick, individuals who reduce the cost of government.

On the other side of the coin, capable permanent replacements in both the Public Works and Engineering departments are not yet in place.

Public Works in particular, except for the one-year sojourn of Emil Larson, has not had a real leader since Willard Pratt left the office about six years ago.

With all due respect to Acting Public Works Commissioner Charles Thomas and Acting City Engineer Paul Giunta, who are doing adequate jobs, something has to suffer when one person is running two busy departments.

It would behoove the city to correct these deficiencies rapidly.

Murray Road School used by CETA for job seminars

Murray Road School in Newton is alive with students, many of them young people, but just as many are adults.

The facility is being used temporarily for workshops for the Newton Area Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA). By the end of the summer close to 500 CETA participants will have attended programs at the school.

Recently 100 participants took part in intensive one-day Job Search Seminars. Under the direction of CETA job developers Cornelia Crayton and Donald Weagle, groups of 20 explored planning a job search, and techniques for resume writing and interviewing.

"The ultimate goal of CETA is to see that all of our participants eventually join the private sector in permanent jobs," said Newton Mayor D. Mann, chairman of Newton Area CETA.

"In addition to training and temporary public service employment, we give our participants the skills they need to conduct a successful job search"' he said.

Newton Area CETA is a federally funded manpower program designed to serve unemployed, low-income residents of Newton, Brookline, Waltham, Needham, Bedford, Lexington, Lincoln, Weston, Wellesley, and Dover.

"Job search skills sometimes begin on a different level," Mayor Mann said.

Many Ceta participants are unsure of their career goals, and for these people, three-day Adkins workshops are conducted at the school. The groups are kept small, about eight for each session, to encourage more personal interaction, according to Allen McIntosh, director of the Adkins program.

Young people, between the ages of 14 and 21 will also be at the school for one-day career awareness workshops, under the direction of Shelly Brown.

Each day, except Fridays, ten to 15 summer youth participants will come to Murray Road School to learn what employers are looking for in an applicant, how to fill out an application, and how to develop a resume.

"The program is designed so that everyone comes out of the workshop with a resume," Ms. Brown said.

"We pretest the participants before the workshop to learn what they already know about the material we plan to present, then we test at the end to find out how well they have learned these concepts," she said.

Preliminary statistics indicate that there is a significant gain among the students and that 90 percent of them say they consider the experience worthwhile.

Save 13-cent stamps for letters weighing over one ounce

Many customers mailing heavy envelopes are not aware that postage is only 13 cents for each additional ounce over one ounce, Postmaster Philip Sullivan of Boston said recently.

Spot checks of large envelopes deposited in post offices in the Greater Boston area indicate that families are often using two or more 15-cent stamps in mailing items weighing over one ounce, Postmaster Sullivan finds.

Postal rates effective May 29 call for 15 cents for one ounce or less, and 13 cents for each additional ounce through 12 ounces.

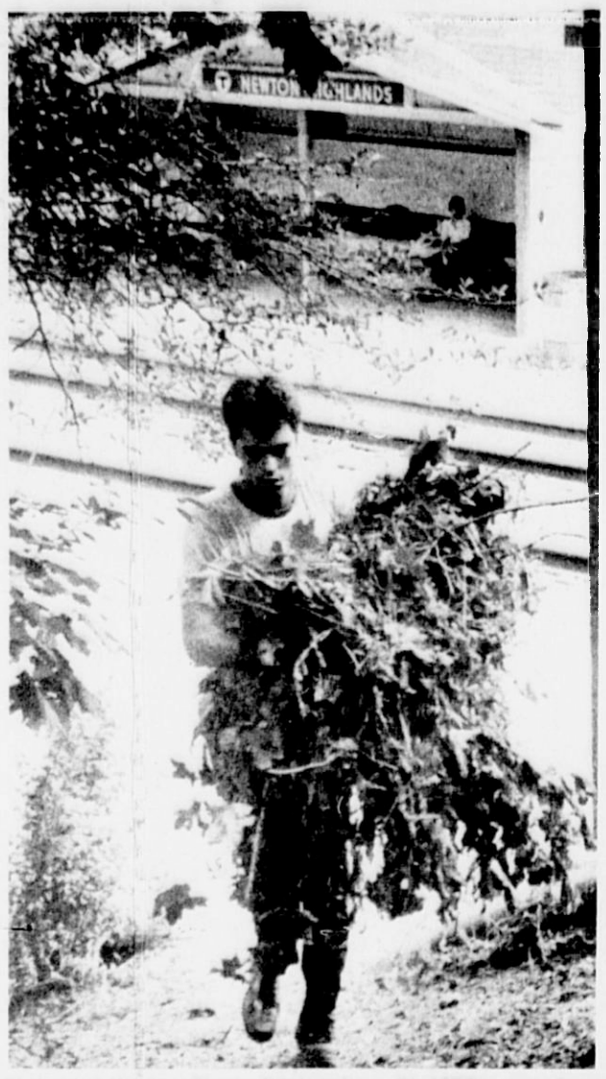

Because many families have a surplus of 13-cent stamps on hand, Postmaster Sullivan suggests that in addition to matching them with two-cent stamps, they may be used for mailing large envelopes or small packages weighing more than one ounce.

Customers who mail two-ounce letters on a regular basis can now purchase the new 28-cent Remote Outpost stamp at area post offices.

Beyond 12 ounces, first-class mail is called priority mail. Packages weighing up to 70 pounds can be mailed at this rate.

Within Massachusetts and Rhode Island, priority packages should be delivered the next business day. With the exception of a few distant areas, there is second-day service within the U.S. for priority packages.

Priority mail rates for a five-pound package range from $2.72 for distances of up to 300 miles to $4.83 to the most distant cities.

Seeing is believing. If you didn't believe the MBTA ever cleans any of its stations, here's proof that they do. CETA worker Joe Walsh of Brighton carries a bundle of brush from the Newton Highlands MBTA station after landscaping maintenance was finished by a Comprehensive Empioyment Training Act (CETA) crew assigned to the Green Line. The foreman said the federally funded employees found time to cut grass, trees, and brush in some of the main stations.

features of the building to bring the cost down to HUD limits.

The project had already been bid and construction was scheduled to start when the Donato license matter, the final step in the years-long process, came before the Board of Aldermen.

Thomas said this week he would not try to predict whether HUD will let the city take the land. If it does, the whole process of advertising the project for bidding will have to be done again, and HUD approval of the new, higher construction cost will have to be obtained.

Meanwhile, the Newton Community Development Foundation, a nonprofit housing group, has a plan for 40 or more apartments for the elderly on vacant land on Sumner Street, Newton Centre.

And $1.2 million in state money is available to Newton for new or converted apartments for the elderly and handicapped. Sites for this program have not been selected.

Affirmative action

substitute for the regular Civil Service list.

Newton must make periodic reports to the Office of Revenue Sharing on progress being made toward achieving affirmative action. Failure to comply with federal regulations could result in loss of revenue sharing.

Mayor Mann said this week that in addition to federal programs, more and more state programs have the affirmative-action strings attached.

Perez will not have the School Department under his eye, however. For some reason the School Department does not have an affirmative action officer, nor is it required to, even though it receives federal funds and has more than 1000 professional employees, plus hundreds more in custodial, cafeteria, secretarial and coaching positions.

The schools' assistant director of personnel Thomas O'Conor said recently that the city needs an affirmative action officer because it is dealing with Civil Service positions, but the School Department's "professional" personnel are non-Civil Service.

In June 1977 there were 76 black or minority professional personnel, which was close to the 7 percent expected by the federal government, but no figures were available for non-professional employees.

School Committee member Katherine Jones in June called publicly for the hiring of more minority and women when she opposed the hiring of three men to fill two vacant school principalships, and one other administrative post.

Mayor Theodore Mann (right) last week learned his blood pressure is at a normal level, compliments of Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Massachusetts. Hundreds of city residents and municipal employees also received blood pressure tests and got health information during the visit of the "Health thyself" van to Newton City Hall. The mayor talks with Steven Lyons, emergency medical technician for Blue Cross and Blue Shield, while a city employee checks her blood pressure.

Free booklet tells all about headaches

"Headache — The Oldest Enemy," a 12-page booklet explaining the various types of headache and how they are diagnosed and treated, has just been published by University Hospital in Boston.

The booklet is the second issue of a new series of publications called "Healthful Hints from University Hospital," which appears three times a year.

Each issue of Healthful Hints discusses in plain language how personal patterns of living can either reduce or increase the incidence of various forms of illness. Future issues will deal with such subjects as nutrition and cancer, exercise and health, and common eye problems.

"Headache" examines the common types of headache — tension, migraine, cluster and sinus. It explains various diagnostic tools that are available to aid in determining the cause of headaches, the most common medical problem.

The booklet also notes when a physician should be consulted.

"Headache" and a free subscription to "Healthful Hints from University Hospital" are available, free of charge, by writing the Office of Informational Services, University Hospital, 75 East Newton St., Boston, 02118, or calling 247-5606.

High school equivalency program given by CETA

A general equivalency diploma (GED) or high school equivalency test preparation class will begin Aug. 22 at the Newton Area Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) Learning Center, 15 Crescent St., Waltham.

For those who do not feel they are ready to begin this class and need more preparation in reading and math skills before enrolling in the GED program, a preliminary class will begin Sept. 5. Both programs are open to Title I CETA-eligible persons who do not have a high school diploma.

To be eligible, persons must have been unemployed at least 30 days, meet certain federally determined income guidelines and live in one of the following communities: Newton, Waltham, Brookline, Bedford, Lexington, Needham, Dover, Lincoln, Wellesley or Weston.

For further information, contact the CETA Training and Job Center, 141 Moody St., Waltham, or call 899-7821.

Fight to preserve rowhouse where Mencken lived and wrote

By MIMI WHITEFIELD

BALTIMORE (UPI) — The rowhouse H.L. Mencken called home is embroiled in a controversy that might inspire the Sage of Baltimore, if he were alive, to write still another invective against do-gooders.

For the past 2½ years, historical groups have been trying to acquire the threestory, brick Victorian house where Baltimore's most famous newspaperman, critic, author and editor was born and lived for nearly all his 75 years. They want to restore it and open it to the public.

They claim the rowhouse Mencken so fondly recalled in "Happy Days" has been neglected since it was bequeathed to the University of Maryland in 1967 by Mencken's brother, August.

It has been divided into apartments occupied by students in the School of Social Work. The first floor — once used for offices and later converted to an apartment — has been closed.

Most of the original furnishings and Victorian bric-a-brac were carted off to a warehouse, where one preservationist says they were damaged by fire, or taken to the Enoch Pratt Free Library — where Mencken's memory is kept alive in a room bearing his name.

The brick walkways in the backyard where Mencken tended grapes are overgrown with grass. The pony shed he knew as a boy has been torn down.

Now, Joe Anne Whitely, a member of the Union Square Association and the Maryland Historical Trust's Baltimore committee, said she is considering asking other preservationists to join her in filing a suit against the university.

"I have spoken to an attorney and I would not hesitate to pursue it," said Mrs. Whitely, who lives four doors from the Mencken house in a one-time funeral home. She was sitting on a settee in the bay window where Mencken's casket was placed.

Mrs. Whitely — one of the movers behind the restoration of the Union Square historic district, a once decaying neighborhood — claims the university has misrepresented its intentions for the house fronting on Union Square and has violated the conditions of August Mencken's will.

But Alice Blondell, who has lived next door to the Mencken house for more than 40 years and knew the Mencken family, is certain Baltimore's most famous writer wouldn't like people meddling with his brother's will.

"He'd turn over in his grave if he knew all the fuss they were making over his house," she said. Mrs. Blondell thinks the house is fine "just the way it is" and the preservationists should leave the neighborhood alone.

Mrs. Whitely, who never knew Mencken, said it is a "sacrilege" that the house where Mencken did so much of his writing is not open to visiting scholars on a regular basis. The Mencken family was meticulous about the house's upkeep and Mencken always had strong ties to it.

Mencken's first publishing venture began in that house, at 1524 Hollins St., after he received a printing press — a Baltimore No. 10 Self Inker — for Christmas the year he turned 8.

And he died in that same house, on Jan. 26, 1956.

Some critics claim Mrs. Whitely and her husband Robert, who are in the real estate business and own several pieces of property in the Union Square area, are interested in the preservation of the Mencken house as bait to sell more real estate.

But Mrs. Whitely, who grew up in the neighborhood, said: "Restoration of the Mencken house won't have anything to do with property values. I don't think the restoration would do anything but lend credence to the university."

Ruth Young, who became dean of the School of Social Work last July, inherited the problem.

She, too, is not happy about its current situation: "The problem is how best to use it; I don't think we're doing that now. It is not being maintained the way it should be. The problem has always been money."

If the school can obtain funding, she said she would like to see the first floor "at least kept as a historical monument."

And instead of a student residence, the dean said, "We'd like to tack it to learning in some way."

The school is considering moving its doctoral program or Department of Continuing Education to the Mencken house and holding small seminars on the second floor, she said.

Perhaps Mencken would look askance at people training to be do-gooders — a target of one of his literary bombasts — living in his house.

On the other hand, Mencken, who was so adept at skewering sacred cows of the 1920s, might regard the preservationists as overly zealous do-gooders.

But many of his friends and those who have studied his life say he probably would have liked to see his house preserved.

"I think August really made a mistake leaving it to the University of Maryland; they haven't done well by it at all," said Louis Cheslock, a former Peabody Conservatory professor who spent many musical evenings with Mencken at gatherings of the Saturday Night Club.

However, Mrs. Blondell said, "He never wanted his house to be any shrine or opened to the public. He was for no-show, just as plain as an old shoe."

Is hyperactivity related to diet?

Ben F. Feingold, M.D. of California, internationally known as a pioneer in the treatment of hyperactivity in children through his "Feingold Diet," will be the featured speaker at the 1978 New England Natural Living Festival scheduled for Aug. 25-27 at Regis College, Weston.

A wide variety of exhibits, booths, workshops and speakers will present information on all aspects of a healthier life style, including purchasing, growing and preparation of natural foods; gardening; natural healing; preventive medicine; and alternate energy.

A natural foods workshop will begin Friday at 2 p.m. with Beatrice Trum Hunter. Dr. Feingold will speak at 3 p.m. Saturday.

Hours for the festival are Friday, noon to 10 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 10 p.m.; Sunday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Low-cost natural meals will be served.

Admission is $3 per day. For further information call 893-9650 or 893-8844.

'Circus in Art' is theme of Art Association exhibit

The Newton Art Association Inc. is making plans for its summer outdoor art exhibit with a new category, sculpture.

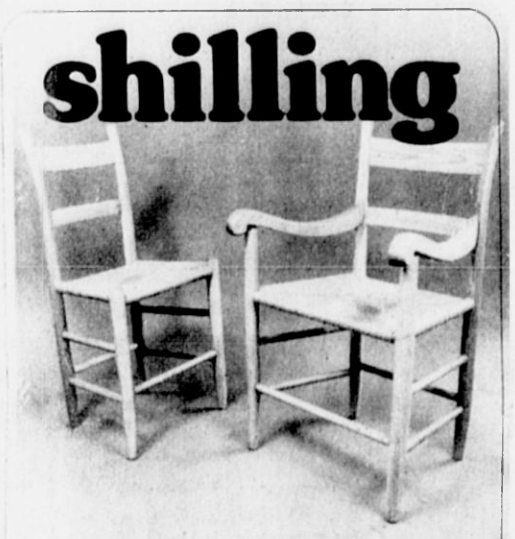

Throughout the day Saturday, Sept. 9, craftspeople will be able to be observed at work on pottery, weaving, crocheting, copper work and a number of other crafts in the park in Newton Centre Square at the corner of Beacon and Centre Streets.

The main theme, "Circus in Art," is being carried out in artists' paintings, pastels, prints, photographs. A group of original paintings is to be on sale to the public for $25 or less, along with many other art works priced a bit higher.

The public can get into the spirit of the day by casting one vote apiece for the painting best liked and can set their creative juices flowing by experimenting with all the amazing effects and designs that paint, string and paper can give to original gift wrap and abstract designs to take home. To add to a circus atmosphere clowns from Clown Workshop Theatre will be entertaining with their antics juggling, gymnastics, face painting.

Local craftspeople not members of Newton Art Association are invited to join the arty fun for the day to sell, maybe work on, some of their crafts. Call 332-6585 for more details. Booth space is $5.

Federal report points to small programs

Cong. Robert F. Drinan said recently that the unprecedentedly high incidence of poverty among America's senior citizens should be of grave concern to the nation and can no longer be ignored.

Commenting on a report issued by the House of Representatives Select Committee on Aging, Drinan said "the extent of poverty among the elderly stands as painful evidence of the inadequacy of the programs created to assist impoverished older Americans."

Drinan, who is the only member of the Massachusetts delegation ever to sit on the House Select Committee on Aging, called for an end to "the deplorable pattern of indifference and neglect that has forced over 3.3 million Americans over the age of 65 to live below the poverty level.

"The extent of poverty among the aged and the accompanying despair partially account for the bleak fact that out of every four suicides in the United States is committed by an elderly person," Drinan said.

The committee report detailed the pervasiveness of poverty among the elderly. It pointed out that "although persons above 65 constitute little more one-tenth of the population, they account for 29 percent of all persons in America receiving below $3,200 annually," he said.

"The federal program designed specifically to assist the elderly must be strengthened," Drinan said. He noted the report's findings that almost three-quarters of the families who depended on Social Security and supplemental security income in 1975 fell below the poverty line or were just slightly above it.

"Despite Medicare and Medicaid, elderly persons still pay a far greater out-of-pocket cost for health care than any other age group in America," Drinan said. "In addition, these programs encourage the institutionalization of the elderly, thereby severing many persons from family and community ties," the congressman said.

Ms. Heym helps foreign students

Sally M. Heym of Newton, director of the international student office at Northeastern University, recently attended the 30th annual conference of the National Association for Foreign Student Affairs (NAFSA) entitled "Continuity and Change in International Exchange."

The conference, held at the Iowa State Center, Ames, Iowa, focused on the latest developments in foreign student programs, teaching English as a second language, and the student abroad program for U.S. students.

NAFSA is directly involved in the improvement of programs and services for foreign students in the U.S. and for U.S. students abroad.

Cochairman of the NAFSA New England Region, Ms. Heym will direct the regional conference in Worcester this fall.

Architect

item is windows. They should be low enough to allow people to see out while seated, he said. Windows must also be easy to open, Putnam said.

An elderly apartment is often a person's last home' Putnam said. It must, therefore, do more for him or her, he said.

Every last square inch must be squeezed out of the limited space alloted by DCA, Putnam said. The rooms must also have flexibility. For example, a person must be allowed to eat in a variety of ways, he said.

To find out what the elderly in Newton need, Putnam said he would want to ask those currently living in public housing within the city. But a project is not only for the people living inside, he said. There is a certain social obligation to the community to preserve its surroundings, the architect said.

Putnam said he would do the design work himself. As for supervising the construction phase, he was unsure. That depends, he said, on who is hired to do the work. If the construction company is strong enough to handle the supervision, he would let it do so, Putnam said.

Since the final site may be an older building, the board wanted its choice to have experience in both adaptive reuse and housing for the elderly. Board members and Planning Director Charles Thomas, the sole member of the authority, liked Putnam's experience in combining the two areas.

Staying within the budget was another concern. Putnam kept within or under his budget in all the projects cited in his application, Thomas said.

Thomas and the board ranked Putnam as their first choice after interviewing five finalists. These were selected by sifting through 51 applications, choosing 16, and then narrowing those down to five.

The four others selected were Hugh Adams Russell, Bastille-Neiley, Dinisco Associates, and Endevor. Each was interviewed for a minimum of 45 minutes.

After the interviews, the field was narrowed to three. In a second vote board members Margaret Smith, Otis Robinson, Harry Crosby, and David Lurensky as well as Thomas ranked Putnam first. Alternate member Ellen Lipson ranked the firm second.

The final selection, according to Thomas, is dependent on DCA's approval. In addition, since no one architect can work on more than one of the 16 projects, it must first be determined if Putnam was selected by another community' he said. If such is the case, the architect makes a choice, Thomas said.

Police test radio network in single-engine aircraft

By RICHARD WILLIAMS
of the Graphic staff

How much would it cost for 55 Greater Boston police departments to pool their resources and lease a single-engine airplane to keep a bird's eye view on high-speed chases and interscity parades and marathons?

That question may come up at some future meeting of the Greater Boston Police Council (GBPC), since experimentation with a new police radio network has demonstrated that new hand-held police radios can communicate with any of 1100 cruisers on the ground.

Timothy Coogan, administrative aide to Newton Police Chief William Quinn, said officers from other communities who fly on their own time took up the four-channel radios and tested them recently with auxiliary antennas outside the planes.

Calling themselves "Air 1," the off-duty officers were able to communicate directly with "Newton 501" cruiser and several other cruisers and police departments.

The idea of ground-to-air communications is not new, of course, but before the Boston Area Police Emergency Radio Network (BAPERN) started operation, there was no way a pilot could talk to police officers on the ground unless the aircraft could carry 55 radios for the various police forces.

Any BAPERN radio has four frequencies, two of which allow for transmitting to any of the 55 communities, one of which covers the North, West, or South districts, and one for the local police department.

Coogan said BAPERN took seven years to develop after the GBPC was formed in 1969. The system, partially federally funded, uses repeaters that receive signals from local radios, boost them with more power, and send them out again to be heard over the Greater Boston area.

Coogan, who worked extensively with contractors for the BAPERN system, said many large cities use aircraft in police work' but would not speculate when any formal plans might be presented for purchase or lease of an aircraft by the GBPC.

Newton police have used the BAPERN system in . a few high-speed chases, but Coogan said the system is used more in northern suburbs where there are more armed robberies and high-speed chases.

IN FOCUS

Talent reflected in a variety of patterns

By ELEANOR SIEGEL
In Focus Editor

Charlotte Roth Wolfe of Chestnut Hill is a woman headed in many directions at once—sewing directions, that is.

Now a fashion designer, she has been sewing since she was four. It was not until her children were almost grown—the eldest is now 19—that she followed a path dictated by her talents.

She has built a successful business using her natural and seemingly endless creative sewing ability.

When Mrs. Wolfe graduated from The School of Fashion Design in Boston, her husbands Norman's gift to her was the addition to their home of a large, airy sewing room. It was the start of her business.

In that long, bright room overlooking the Chestnut Hill golf course, Mrs. Wolfe creatively transforms fabric. Sewn into the garment is her label—either "Charlotte of Chestnut Hill" or "IXL Chestnut Hill."

Born in Harrisonburg, Virginia, she still retains a Southern softness to her voice. It was her grandfather, "Roth the Tailor" who introduced her to his sewing machine. Today, she still uses his sterling silver thimble.

Often as she works, an album of opera music is playing in the background. Mrs. Wolfe is an opera buff who has been studying with Jane Appleton and William Miranda. Music is something woven into her life. It is not only the love of the music which spurs her on. She studies with an eye on learning about opera costuming for the stage. Costuming is an aspect of fashion design which intrigues her. During Halloween, everyone in her neighborhood can hardly wait to come to the Wolfe house for their yearly "fright." For Mrs. Wolfe creates a "fun house" and greets them at the door dressed as an old witch. When they enter, they meet the rest of the family disguised as the "Red Devil," a ghost, a black cat and "Zorro."

The costumes became well-known and Mrs. Wolfe was asked to lend them for a "First Night '78" press conference.

It wasn't the first time her costumes have gone public. She designed the costumes for the locally produced children's television fantasy series, "Catch a Rainbow."

Her sewing talent became apparent when she was nine years old. Then, she took the tuxedo her father was married in and made herself a three piece suit.

However, as a young woman, she was not content to go in only one direction. Thus, while she won a first prize at the North Carolina State Fair for an afghan, she also went on to win three medals from the National Fraternity of Student Musicians—and worked part-time cataloguing "one of the countries largest private coin collections."

Liberal Arts was her major at the University of North Carolina and when she graduated she got a job with the Central Intelligence Agency. She met her husband, a lawyer, in Washington and the couple moved to New York.

There she landed another interesting job. She worked for Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt and Harold Russell at the World Veteran's Fund, a United Nations affiliated agency.

She rode in the elevator with Eleanor Roosevelt and Vanderbilt gave her his opera tickets to use regularly. But no matter where she was, sewing remained a part of her and she would enroll in course after course. It is knowledge she puts to use every day.

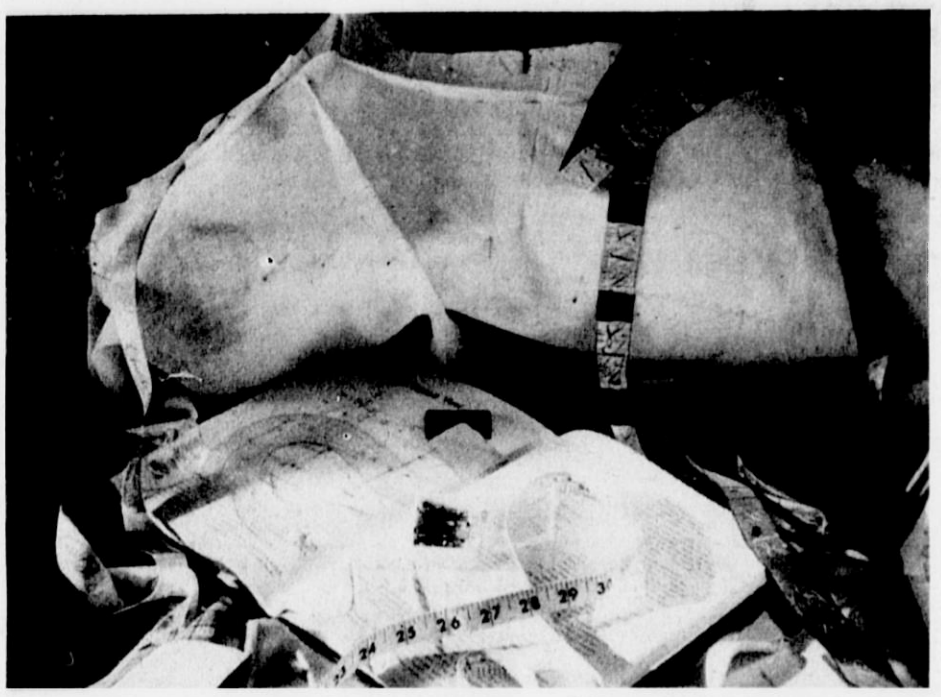

While setting up her business, her first customer arrived sooner than expected. "It was a friend who needed a dress desparately," and so before the new room was completed, her business was launched.

Today, her backlog can be anywhere from two to six months. Customers do not always want new clothes. Sometimes she "recycles" by a garment. For example, "I made a new wedding gown from an old one." Some customers do not want a new pattern—they want her to copy a famous designer's pattern.

Charlotte Roth Wolfe of Newton began sewing when she was four years old. Career opportunities in sewing, says Mrs. Wolfe, include "drafting patterns draping on the mannequin, teaching, coordinating fashion shows, writing, reviewing, public speaking...." and more. Photo was taken at Newton Free Library from an exhibit prepared by Mrs. Wolfe when she was chosen artisan of the month.

Photos by ELEANOR SIEGEL

An original pattern can costs between $25-100 plus notions, fabric, snaps, interfacing—"if there is a lot of detail such as handhemming, then it becomes more expensive." She arrived at what she should charge with assistance from "Pat" Fiandaca of Fiandaca Couturier. He was one of her former teachers.

Cost also put her in another phase of her business. In an effort to save money, some people wanted to do some of the work themselves. Mrs. Wolfe then began a school for adults and children. She charges $6 for two hours.

Because she herself enjoys learning, she joined the Costume Society of America, the American Institute of Textile Arts and is a founding member of the recently established Women Business Owners of New England.

As a pastime she enjoys collecting antiques that have to do with sewing. "I have a piece of fabric from General Pershing's uniform because my father worked in a factory which made the uniform and saved the piece—he gave it to me when I was a little girl." cPD She also swims, plays tennis and golf and has won a hole-in-one cup and tennis competition awards. Her interest in tennis led her to design tennis outfits.

Recently she was selected artisan of the month by the Newton Free Library where seven cases displayed her "Sewing Directions." Through the display, she hoped to point out "career opportunities for the creative designer. It wasn't theory, it was all applied knowledge—it was her style of growth.

Mrs. Wolfe continues to develope. "Someday," she mused, "I will teach a course on all the ways you can use the circles in sewing."

THE READERS WRITE.. Diane Taylor

This is the reader's column and readers are invited to send recipes or questions to Diane Taylor, c-o Transcript Newspapers, 420 Washington St., Dedham, Mass. 02026.

dear Diane: I have not been able to find a recipe for half-sour pickles. I would appreciate it if you would print one.

dorothy Holmes, Norwood

Dear Ms. Holmes, Here it is:

HALF SOUR PICKLES

3 doz. small to medium cucumbers
1 gallon water
1 cup coarse salt
6 cloves garlic
6-8 bay leaves
3 tablespoons whole all-spice few cloves
1 dry, hot pepper pod to a jar
4 or 5 tsps. syrup of dill

Wash cucumbers. In a large pot bring water, salt, vinegar to a boil. After two minutes add cucumbers. Cover with a weighted dish. Wehn well cooled, place in jars and add spices. Cover completely and let stand a few days until brine clouds a little. Then refrigerate.

Chicken goes Oriental on the hibachi grill

Dear Diane: Would you please give me some good recipes for Chicken Wings. I would like to have these for a barbeque.

T.M., Norwood

Dear Miss T.M., Here are two recipes we have enjoyed.

CHICKEN BARBECUE SAUCE

½ cup butter or margarine, melted
one-third cup Worcestershire sauce
one-third cup A-1 catsup
juice of two lemons
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
1 cup water
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
dash liquid smoke

Combine all ingredients and bring to a boil. Simmer 20 minutes. Pour generous amount of sauce over chicken before placing on grill. Baste frequently while cooking. Serve remainder of sauce over cooked chicken. Can be stored in refrigerator for future use.

"LITTLE LEGS" TEMPURA

8-10 broiler-fryer chicken wings
½ cup gingerale
1 egg, well beaten
½ cup plain flour
1 teaspoon soy sauce
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup vegetable oil

Remove tips from each chicken wing. Cut remainder of wing into two parts. Mix gingerale, flour, well-beaten egg, soy sauce, and salt very quickly and with as few strokes as possible. Dip each wing part in batter. Heat oil in large skillet at 350 degrees F. Fry "little legs" in hot oil for 8 to 10 min. Turn often to brown evenly. Serve hot with sweet and sour sauce, Oriental mustard or chutney.

KITCHEN CORNER

For months, you've spade, raked, planted, weeded and chased the rabbits and woodchucks from your garden and now it's time for your reward: basketsful of red, green and yellow vegetables — a credit to your green thumb.

As the bounty continues, you'll want to prepare them in varied ways. Add spices for tasty interest. There's caraway seed, for instance, for green cabbage, new potatoes and carrots. Dill weed or seed for leafy greens, cucumbers or green vegetables. Mixed pickling spice for sweet-sour beets and curry powder for butters for sweet corn or cauliflower. This just starts the list — your tastebuds will furnish further inspiration.

Stir-fried green beans, carrots and cherry tomatoes cooked in a skillet are as appetizing as their vivid colors would lead you to believe. Onion is a must for almost any vegetable and here rehydrated sauteed onion flakes can make a savory contribution. Basil and chives complement not only tomatoes, but green beans, peas, zucchini or whatever's coming out of your garden at this time. When the home garden is brimming over with red pepper, think canned relish.

Quick Ratatouille is a healthful and colorful combination — eggplant, tomato, zucchini and celery. This is tastily seasoned so that it's perfect as a relish when served cold as well as a hot vegetable.

HERBED SUMMER VEGETABLE SKILLET

3 tablespoons onion flakes
¼ teaspoon instant minced garlic
3 tablespoons water
4 large carrots
½ pound green beans
4 tablespoons vegetable oil, divided
1½ teaspoons basil leaves, crushed
1¼ teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon ground black pepper
2 cups cherry tomatoes

Rehydrate onion flakes and minced garlic in water for 10 minutes. Cut carrots into ¼-inch thick diagonal slices. Cut beans into 1-inch diagonal pieces; set aside. In a large skillet heat 3 tablespoons of the oil. Add rehydrated onion and garlic, carrots, beans, basil, salt and black pepper.

Cook and stir over moderate heat, until vegetables are just crisp-tender, about 15 minutes, adding more oil if necessary. Add tomatoes; stir-fry for 5 minutes. Sprinkle with chives. Serve at once. Yield: 4 cups. Approximate preparation and cooking time: 35 minutes

QUICK RATATOUILLE

¼ cup instant minced onion
¼ teaspoon instant minced garlic
¼ cup water
one-third cup salad oil
1½ pound eggplant, cubed (6 cups)
2 medium sized zucchini, sliced (3 cups)
2 cups celery cut in 1-inch chunks
4 cups tomato wedges
1½ teaspoons Italian seasoning
1½ teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon basil leaves, crushed
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper

Rehydrate onion and garlic in water for 10 minutes. In a very large skillet heat oil. Add onion and garlic, eggplant, zucchini and celery. Cook and stir until crisp-tender, 5 to 7 minutes. Add tomatoes, Italian seasoning, salt, basil and black pepper. Simmer, covered, stirring occasionally until vegetables are barely tender, about 6 minutes. Uncover; cook, stirring frequently, until liquid is reduced by half, 4 to 6 minutes. Serve hot or cold. Yield: 6 to 8 portions. Approximate preparation and cooking time: 45 minutes

RED PEPPER RELISH

12 large red peppers (9 cups chopped)
3 tablespoons salt
6 tomatoes, peeled and chopped
2 large onions, chopped
3 cups sugar
1 cup cider vinegar
2 tablespoons pickling spice

1. Halve, seed and chop peppers. Layer with salt in a large glass bowl. Let stand at room temperature for 3 hours.

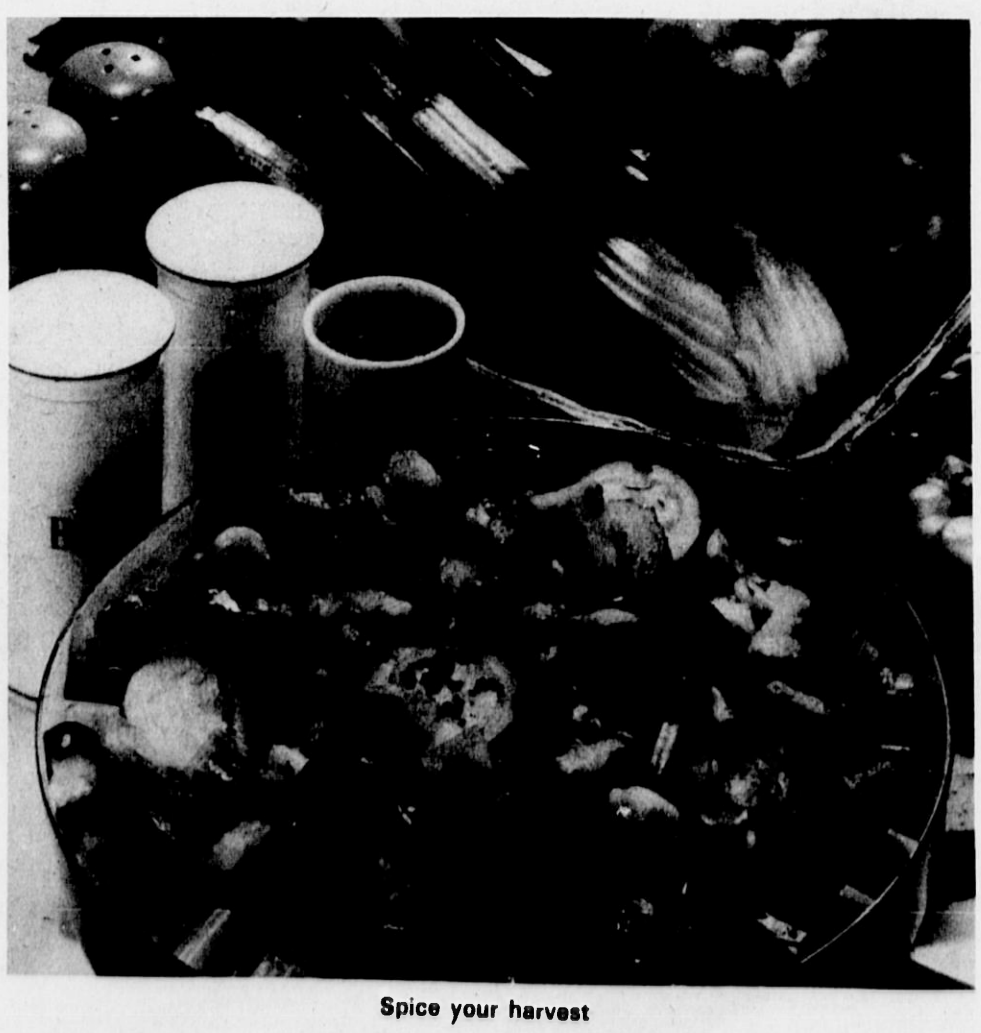

2. Drain peppers well and combine with remaining vegetables in a large kettle. Stir in sugar and vinegar. Put spices in cheesecloth bag and place in kettle.

3. Bring relish to a boil, stirring frequently. Lower heat; simmer 30 minutes.

4. Remove spice bag and ladle into hot Ball jars, leaving ¼ inch head space. Adjust caps.

5. Process 10 minutes in boiling water bath.

6. Yield about 8 half pints.

Spice your harvest

Volunteers offered training in evaluating children's services

The West Suburban Council for Children invites all interested citizens to train for a unique and interesting volunteer experience.

The Council, citizen arm of the Commonwealth's Office for Children, is mandated by the legislature to monitor and evaluate the delivery of children's services in the Newton, Wellesley, Weston, Needham area. It works closely with local agencies to improve the quality of services they offer.

Past evaluations of such agencies as the Newton Community Service Center, the Multi-Service Center, Freeport, Wellesley Community Child Care Center, Beginnings, and local day care programs , have formed the basis of recommendations to the state for continuation of funding.

The Council will offer training in September to volunteers interested in learning to evaluate and monitor programs for children and adolescents. For further information call Kathy Reilly, chairman, at 444-0862, or the Area Office at 965-9810.

Mishkan Tefila plans open house Aug. 28

An open house and coffee hour will be held at Congregation Mishkan Tefila, 300 Hammond Pond Pkway, Chestnut Hill, on Monday, August 28, at 7:30 p.m. to introduce new and prospective members to the programs and functions of the synagogue.

The membership committee, headed by Mr. and Mrs. Walter I. Lipsett, chairmen,and Dr. and Mrs. Philip B. Bern, co-chairmen, has planned a program in which people interested in joining a conservative congregation may see the synagogue and meet its members in an informal atmosphere.

Rabbi Richard M. Yellin, spiritual leader of the temple, will greet all visitors and answer questions about the synagogue. A walking tour will acquaint them with its facilities.

For further information call the synagogue office at 332-7770.

Marriott weekend end-of-summer fling

The Marriott Hotel will celebrate its ninth birthday over Labor Day weekend with a three-day Farewell Fling to Summer.

On Saturday (Sept. 2), there will be a cocktail hour prior to the big birthday dinner party, followed by dancing to the Big Band sound.

On Sunday, guests after a Sunday brunch will relax at poolside, play badminton or horseshoes or canoe and paddleboat on the Charles River.

In the evening there will be an outdoor steak fry followed by a Las Vegas night with special prizes including a New Year's Eve package for two, an Escape to the Marriott and dinner for two in the S&S Livestock Co. restaurant.

Monday will be a leisurely day with breakfast followed by swimming or exercising in the Health Club or just relaxing before leaving for home.

Intervention program available to young children with problems

Newton children with mental, emotional or developmental problems may be helped by the Early Childhood Intervention Program funded by the Massachusetts Department of Mental Health. This home-based service for children from birth through age 3 provides an individualized program for each child and his family developed by a multirdisciplinary team.

Comprehensive services include home visits, a bi8monthly parent support group and plans for a nursery program this fall. The program is available to children of residents of Newton, Needham, Wellesley and Weston. For further information call the Early Intervention Team at the Newton Guidance Clinic, 969-4925, Monday-Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Beth Israel offers pre-nursery service

Parents who are concerned about their toddler's moods, tantrums, sleeping and eating habits, or habit of saying "No", may find help in the Pre-Nursery Program of the Beth Israel Hospital Child Psychiatry Department.

Families with toddlers from 12-24 months will be considered for openings in the program which provides comprehensive treatment including a children's group, a parents' group, observations of the children and individual sessions for parents.

The children will play together two mornings a week in a specially prepared classroom where parents can watch them at play and discuss their observations with the teacher. The group and individual sessions for parents will be arranged at the outset.

Payment for this treatment program is one comprehensive fee which is subject to a sliding scale based on income. Third party payment may be arranged. Parents provide their own transportation to the program, which meets near Cleveland Circle.

For more information call Ava Bry Penman, 232-1080, director of the Pre-Nursery Program.

Temple Emanuel club runs workshop for Beth Israel Hospital

Several departments at Beth Israel Hospital are supplied with needed materials prepared by senior citizens of Temple Emanuel in Newton Centre.

The hospital volunteer workshop of the Temple Emanuel Golden Age Club meets regularly during fall, winter, and spring to prepare such items as shunt kits for kidney dialysis patients; collate articles for the nursing education and research, social service and psychiatry departments; and preassemble leather kits for occupational therapy.

"In virtually every sugical operation ...at Beth Israel Hospital, something made by the members of the club is used to help heal the patient," says Mitchell T. Rabkin, M.D., general director of the hospital.

After-school busing gets close review

By RICHARD WILLIAMS

A committee formed to study the needs of after-school transportation has some tough questions to answer.

Why does it take one bus that that holds 66 passengers to transport nine high school athletes to a meet in Taunton?

Why was a full-size bus used to carry one Day Junior High athlete from his school to Newton North High School for an inter-school meet?

Are two buses needed to transport the varsity and junior varsity lacrosse teams to practice fields in Newton, or could one bus make separate trips for each team?

Newton Centre resident George Levine raised these questions at the first meeting of Transportation Committee chaired by School Committeeman Howard Spergel.

Levine, who works for the Metropolitan Coach Service for Newton school children, said the above three examples of questionable use were indeed exceptions to the service contracted by the School Department..

Sue Baldauf, a street worker for the Human Services Department, told about the needs for transportation by Weeks Junior High School students who answered a survey in school last year.

Students would like to get to other parts of the city after school, and especially on weekends.

She said the MBTA informed her it will be increasing the frequency of service on the Watertown to Needham route to every half hour, but could not provide the evening service students requested.

Spergel said the School Committee also suggested contracting Metco buses to be used during the day in Newton, but this has not been further investigated.

Kenneth Sobel of Newton, transportation planner for a firm in Cambridge, suggested a study of how many trips are made a day for students, where they go, and how many students ride them.

The committee was set up after the School Committee considered the inequity of providing for $72,000 worth of busing for after-school sports, but only $4000 for after-school music programs that meet around the city.

The 10 committee members split into two groups, one to study how buses have been used in the past to provide for after-school needs, and the other to study the needs of the students.

The full committee will meet again some time in the middle of September.

Other members include Gail Brady of Emerson School, Jody Young of Newton Centre, Ernest Loewenstein of Newton Highlands, Maida Waldner of Newton Centre, Assistant Director of Support Services James Cameron, School-Community Coordinator Joseph Utka, and David Tannozzini, traffic planner from the City Planning Department.

Travel Talk
By Josephine Aria
Writing about Switzerland, Mark Twain said that of the two ways of entering the country—by horse and carriage or by sea—the latter is preferable because it leaves the traveler untired. "This", he said, "is the right condition of mind and body, the right and due preparation for the solemn event which closes the day—stepping with metaphorically uncovered head into the presence of the most impressive mountain mass that the globe can show—the Jungfrau. The stranger's first feeling, when suddenly confronted by that towering and awful apparition wrapped in its shroud of snow, is breathtaking astonishment. It is as if Heaven's gates had swung open and exposed the throne."

Dr. Barnard's thought-provoking medical novel

By PATRICIA MARVIN

Christiaan Barnard. "In the Night Season" Prentice-Hall, 261 pp. $8.95.

Cancer is no longer a taboo subject in fiction - numerous novels of late deal with it - and one of the most provoking is this novel by the famous South African heart surgeon whose heart transplants startled the world. In fact, Dr. Barnard not only questions the treatment of breast cancer, but also brings into his story moral and ethical questions, questions faced by doctors who must decide if life is to be prolonged beyond hope, and their role in euthanasia.

Barnard's novel is set in South Africa, adding a unique political and cultural dimension to his story. The protagonist is a general practitioner, Dr. Charles de la Porte, third generation landed gentry in South Africa, and his patient, Dr. Janice Case. Dr. Case is young, beautiful, very intelligent, and it has been determined, though she does not know it, that she has a malignant growth in her breast which has spread to her spine. All indications are that Janice, herself an outstanding physician, is dying. Dr. de la Porte makes the decision not to tell her of her cancer, for obvious as well as complex personal reasons.

This act is denounced as unethical medical practice and Dr. de la Porte is faced with a huge malpractice suit at the urging of another physician who discovers the truth months later.

A mastectomy is performed and chemotherapy begun. Dr. de la Porte defends his position to his attorney but hides the personal involvement with the patient Janice.

Flashbacks reveal that 15 years previous he and Janice were lovers when she was a fourth year medical student and involved in radical (Communist) activities in the university. As the years pass they each marry other partner but remain friends. more

In recent years Janice has built and presides over a hospital for the aged, with the help of her wealthy journalist husband. It is out of love and compassion for her, and the knowledge that her condition is hopeless, that has lead Dr. de la Porte to his decision.

Much of the novel is an attempt to create the full character of Dr. de la Porte, a man of competence, compassion and protectiveness, who must represent the status quo in white South Africa. Contrasting this portrait is Dr. Janice Case, who has in the past championed the rights of blacks and is now ministering to the aged, and the young and vigorous doctor who takes over her treatment, using the latest scientific and technological techniques. Both points of view are convincing, yet there is the moral question of action which remains unresolved almost to the last page.

Janice's condition worsens, and being medically knowledgeable to the extent that she knows she is dying, she attempts suicide by taking poison. Her young doctor saves her, but her own husband comes to Dr. de la Porte begging him to intervene, to let her die.

The ethical dilemma is dramatic and real, but whether this novel gives a satisfactory answer ultimately depends upon the reader. Dr. Barnard's disturbing novel is at the Newton Main Library or may be sent to any of the 10 branches of the library system by filling out a reserve request at any branch.

Patricia Marvin is supervisor of circulation in the Newton Free Library.

Debra L. Civetti, daughter of retired Air Force Technical Sgt. and Mrs. Nicholas Civetti of 44 Warwick Rd., West Newton, has received her first promotion in the U.S. Air Force.

Civetti, promoted to airman, recently completed technical training at Barksdale AFB, La., and is now assigned at Mildenhall RAF Station, England. She serves as an aircraft maintenance specialist with a unit of the U.S. Air Forces in Europe.

The airman is a 1976 graduate of Newton North High School.

Travel

Bird's eye view of Waikiki's golden crescent

Hawaii - a new kind of island experience

On January 18, 1778, Captain James Cook landed on the beach at Waimea, Kauai. He was so fascinated with the flora, fauna and native culture that he returned a year later. Two hundred years have past and visitors still find themselves returning to Hawaii for the same reasons.

America's 50th state stretches for over 1500 miles in the Pacific. However, the major islands are Hawaii, Molokai, Lanai, Oahu, Maui and Kauai.

Hawaii, known as the Big island or the Orchid Island is the largest and youngest of the islands. The volcano and Fire Goddess, Pele, inhabiting the island is not dormant, unlike other island volcanoes. You can visit Pele and others in the Volcanoes National Park, home of semi active craters bubbling with molten lava. This site is in contrast with the island's other famous attraction - million of orchids. In this land of eternal summer there is also eternal winter atop Mauna Kea's 13,796 foot peak, giving skiers an opportunity to be one-up on their mainland contemporaries.

Maui is a golden corner of paradise. The broad sloping beaches attracted whales whose antics in Lahania have become part of that port's charm. Thrill to a sunrise over the rim of Haleakala Crater (House of the Sun), world's largest dormant volcano. Cruise near Lahania in a glass bottom boat and watch for the prized black coral. According to legend, the Hawaiian demigod Maui fished the islands from the sea and scattered them in their present chain. When your tour ends here, you may say "Maui no Ka ot" (Maui is the best.)

It's a quick flight from Maui to Molokai, the Friendly Isle. Here the pace is relaxed. From the forest rimmed lookout of Palaau you see the Kalaupapa Leper colony, the home of saintly Father Damien. It's on this island where you'll find farms and ranches; arid plains and lush mountainsides- and places accessible only by foot.

And it's on to Waikiki, Honolulu and Oahu. Oahu is the island of welcome and Aloha, the melting pot of the Pacific, the beaches at Waikiki are a sun-worshippers paradise with its golden sands and turquoise surf. It's here on Oahu where the cultures and philosophies of the Pacific lands meet, creating a mileau of prehistoric artifact. Oriental ceremony, hula dancers, big businesses, little farms fill the sites and sounds.

There are a number of tour options available including a Pearl Harbor cruise, circle island tour, and the Polynesian cultural center.

A visit to Kauai, the Garden Isle, offers tropical vegetation. Her rivers, waterfalls, beaches and spectacular canyon Waimea have served as the setting for many movies.

When you decide to visit Hawaii or revisit the Hawaiin Islands you have a number of ways to enjoy this vacation. Choose your islands, include an opetional luau, mule ride, or surfing lesson. Opt for privacy in a condominium or stay at any one of the seaside hotels. And on the way home, plan a stop on the West Coast of the mainland. It's like taking a second vacation.

Hawaii is a new kind of island experience, one that belongs in a vacation planned by you.

Andover Newton begins search for successor to Dr. Pearson

A search is under way for a new president at Andover Newton Theological School in Newton Centre. The person chosen to fill the position will succeed Dr. Roy Pearson, who has been president since 1965 and plans to retire in August 1979.

The search committee named by the Andover Newton board of trustees includes eight trustees, two faculty representatives, two student representatives and two members of the Association of Andover Newton Graduates.

It is chaired by Rev. Roscoe C. Robison, trustee, alumnus and executive minister of the American Baptist Churches of Massachusetts.

Nominations are being sought from members of the Andover Newton community, from faculty and administrators of schools in the Boston Theological Institute and the Association of Theological Schools in the United States and Canada, from officials of the parent denominations, and from other supporters of the school.

A presidential profile drafted by the board of trustees calls for the successful candidate to be an ordained minister and member of the United Church of Christ or the American Baptist Churches, to have appropriate degrees and qualifications, to exhibit competency in areas of administration, leadership and development, to be familiar with the requirements of good theological education, and to have a demonstrated capacity to plan future programs and carry them through.

The committee requests that names of nominees be sent to Robison at TABCOM, 88 Tremont St., Boston, 02108, prior to Oct. 15.

Mishkan Tefila Brotherhood wins three awards for programs

The Brotherhood of Temple Mishkan Tefila, Hammond Pond Parkway, Newton, was the winner of three major awards during the recent conference of the National Federation of Jewish Men's Clubs Inc. held recently.

The Newton Brotherhood was awarded the Golden Torch Award (first prize) for its outstanding program in honor of Yom Hashoa, the Day of Remembrance of the Holocaust. The program that won the award included Holocaust poetry and writings, a cantata sung by a chorale and several other reminders of this infamous period in Jewish history. Chairman of the program, Herbert Lerman, and Jacob Birnbaum, brotherhood president during 1977-1978 and author of several selections included in the program book, were present to receive the national award.

The National Federation of Jewish Men's Clubs is an international organization of Conservative brotherhoods and men's clubs located throughout the United States and Canada. Its membership numbers more than 30,000 men, and it is a constituent arm of the United Synagogue Movement.

The Mishkan Tefila Brotherhood was also awarded second place for its activities in support of the youth of its community and honorable mention for best overall activities by a brotherhood in the year 1977-1978.

DeCordova has classes on king, papermaking

Eight new classes will be offered by the DeCordova Museum School in Lincoln for the fall term beginning Monday, Sept. 28.

Included are two lecture series, The Treasures of King Tut and the Art of Greece and Rome, and five studio classes: drawing and painting the figure, landscape drawing and painting, photographing people, papermaking, sculpture for teenagers, and sculpture for teachers.

Children 8-10 will be offered an unusual course, combining field trips with craft classes, called Exploring Concord's Heritage. This experimental course, which will meet after school on Mondays and Wednesdays, will introduce youngsters to both art and history.

Following field trips to sites such as the Concord Antiquarian Society, The Olde Manse, Orchard House and Nashawtuc Hill, the children will create their own heritage crafts including lanterns, chests, stencils, baskets and weathervanes.

Papermaking, the ancient art begun by the Egyptians 5000 years ago, will be explored in a special intensive workshop on Tuesday and Thursday, Sept. 19 and 21. Students who take the workshop will learn to make their own paper and discover how to set up a paper-making facility in their own homes.

Registration for the fall term begins Aug. 28. Undergraduate and graduate credit is available for over 100 of the classes under a new cooperative arrangement with the Massachusetts College of Art. For a free school bulletin or more information, call 259-0505.

Brandeis offers courses at Chestnut Hill temple

"Continuing Studies in the Suburbs," a two-month fall program of adult education featuring diverse course offerings, gets under way Oct. 4 on the campus of Brandeis University.

The schedule also will include a special lecture series and, for the first time, the presentation of courses at Temple Mishkan Tefila in Chestnut Hill.

H. Francois Wilkinson, director of continuing studies at Brandeis, said the adult education program is "open to and designed for Greater Boston residents who wish to explore new areas of knowledge, or who wish to study topics in which they had previous interest."

Courses range from "Great Short Poems in English" to "The Violent Universe," and include "Basic Fundamentals of Law," "Images of Japan," "An Unusual History of Boston," and "Realism in American Painting."

Sessions will be held evenings (one morning class) once a week and will be taught by Brandeis faculty members. Remaining courses span economics, philosophy, Egyptian civilization, literature, history, music and art.

The lecture series, "America and the Holy Land," will be sponsored in collaboration with the American Jewish Historical Society, which built its headquarters and library on the Brandeis campus a decade ago.

This eight-week program will explore American relationships to the Holy Land from the late 1700s to the present. It begins Sept. 28 and continues Thursday evenings, 7 to 9 p.m., through Nov. 16.

The "Brandeis at Temple Mishkan Tefila" segment will offer two courses: "The Palestinians," Wednesdays, 7 to 9 p.m., Oct. 4 through Dec. 13; and "Literary Masterpieces of Western Civilization," Thursdays, 7 to 9 p.m., Oct. 5 through Dec. 7.

The registration deadline is Friday, Sept. 22, but early enrollment is advised. The courses, lecture series, and temple program each have their own tuition fees. While the courses are given on a non-credit basis, certificates of attendance will be issued upon request.

Further information may be obtained by calling the Office of Continuing Studies at 647-2796. There is a reduced tuition rate for senior citizens.

'Fame' cast grows

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Robert Alda, Jose Ferrer and Louis Nye will costar in "The Hallmark Hall of Fame" production of Arthur Miller's original television play, "Fame." The trio will join Richard Benjamin in the hourlong show which will be directed by Marc Daniels for the 1978-79 season.

Fall Revival planned by Myrtle Baptist Church

A Fall Revival will be held at Myrtle Baptist Church, 21 Curve St., West Newton, beginning Sunday, Sept. 17, and continuing through Friday, Sept. 22. The guest evangelist Monday through Friday will be the Reverend A. Wilson Wood, pastor of Bethany Baptist Church, Columbus, Ohio.

Rev. Robert L. Littlejohn and the membership invite the community to come and share the messages Rev. Wood will deliver.

Guest churches and choirs will participate in the Revival. On Sunday, Sept. 17, at 7 p.m. the guest preacher will be the Rev. Samuel Bullock, pastor of Lincoln Congregational Church, Brockton, along with his choir. Other invited guests for Sunday evening are Bethel Baptist Church, the Rev. Gilbert Campbell, pastor; St. Paul A.M.E. Church, the Rev. Leroy Attles, pastor; St. John Missionary Baptist Church, the Rev. R. D. Kelley, pastor; and Emmanuel Baptist Church, the Rev. Richard Wright, pastor.

The invited churches for the rest of the week are: Monday, New Hope Baptist Church, the Rev. Madison Bryson, pastor; Friendship Baptist Church, the Rev. George O'Neal, pastor; Fellowship Baptist Church, the Rev. E. O. Braxter, pastor; Morning Star Baptist Church, the Rev. Walter Stevenson, pastor.

Tuesday, Shiloh Baptist Church, Dr. O. G. Phillips, pastor; Myrtle Baptist Church Senior Choir; Rush A.M.E. Zion Church, the Rev. Cofield, pastor.

Wednesday, Grant A.M.E. Church, the Rev. Joseph Robinson, pastor; Myrtle Baptist Church Young Adult Choir; Southern Baptist Church, the Rev. James Chance, pastor; Union Baptist Church, the Rev. Melvin Brown, pastor; Pleasant Hill Baptist Church, the Rev. Boykin Sanders, pastor.

Thursday, the Greater Framingham Community Church, the Rev. Cameron W. Byrd, pastor; Metropolitan Baptist Church, the Rev. William L. Cooper, pastor; Concord Baptist Church, the Rev. James Coleman, pastor; People's Baptist Church, the Rev. Richard Owens, pastor.

Friday, Ebenezer Baptist Church, the Rev. Rafe Taylor, pastor; New Hope Baptist Church (Portsmouth, N.H.) the Rev. Ralph Henley, pastor; Western Avenue Baptist Church, the Rev. Everette Frye, Jr., pastor; and Mass. Avenue Baptist Church, the Rev. Louis E. Sibley, III, pastor.

A freewill offering will be taken. All are welcome to attend any or all evening.

Rev. Wood was born in Clinton, S.C. He attended Bluefield State College, Bluefield, W.Va., and Lynchburg Seminary and College, Lynchburg, Va. He is president of Baptist Pastors' Conference, Columbus, and general chairman of the City-Wide Simultaneous Revival involving 43 Baptist churches.

He is assistant dean, Eastern Union District Association and executive secretary of the Ohio General Convention. A member of the Ohio Council of Churches; National Baptist Convention, U.S.A. and the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance, he is also active as the general chairman of the United Negro College Fund of Columbus, Ohio.

Rev. Wood is listed in the first edition of "Who's Who in Black America" and has been honored by the Ohio Baptist General Convention (1976) for outstanding leadership in the local church and in Ohio.

He has been a spokesnan for civil rights organizations and a member of the Mayor's Conmission on Hunan Relations for the city of Columbus.

Crystal Lake Swim Lessons Come to an End

The 1978 Crystal Lake swim lesson season will come to a close this week, serving 936 in daytime lessons and 52 in evening lessons. This summer, the lake instructors taught 36 Beginner I classes, 21 Advanced Beginner, 12 Intermediates, 6 Swimmers, 2 Basic Rescue and Water Safety (Junior Lifesaving), 2 Advanced Lifesaving and 1 Water Safety Aide Class training 7 swimmers to aid the instructors in teaching lessons. These Aides were Beth Mullen, Meg Doherty, Midge Conolley, Paul Connolly, Joanne Beatty, Jennie Szekely and Bernice Turner. The Water Safety Instructor Staff for this summer was Mike MacEwen, Sue Cutler, Sandy Yukes, Paul Syphers and Lori Schlager. All these people, including guards, contributed to a very successful summer and a successful syow of skills at the Crystal Lake Water Show held in early August.

Mile Swim

The mile swim was held on Wednesday at Farm Pond in Sherborn. The Newton Team placed 6th over all - out of 13 teams. In this event, each town swims 5 girls and 5 boys for a distance of a mile across and back on a pond. The girls placed 6th overall, with Gretchen Hayden placing 42, Jennie Szekely placing 29th and Karen Hayden showing a strong effort in placing 5th out of 46 girls swimming. The boys placed 5th overall, placing was Dave Colburn 40, Philip Schiller 33, Mark Hayden 32, Jeff Kennedy 19th and Scott Hayden 12th. These youngsters put together a strong effort and deserve a lot of credit for the strength and endurance in representing Newton in this Meet.

Newton Swim Team

The 1978 Newton Recreation Department's Swim Team season came to a close last Sunday with the completion of the A regional swim meet. The B regional swim meet was held on Saturday with Newton taking 2nd place out of 13 area teams. The team swam to several first place victories won by Bonda Appelbaum in breastroke and freestyle, Lionell Swim in butterfly and backstroke, Brad Schiller in freestyle and breastroke, Joe Dezotell in freestyle and Jennie Szekely in backstroke. Also swimming in the B regional meet was Mary Reynolds, Missy Green, Janet Mulvaney, Crissy Maxcey, Maribeth Bourgions, Vicki Cecchenelli, Robin Moyer, Hallie Haufman, Bobby Green, Cheryl Hager, Anne Tierney, Sharon Cullins, Vicky Daley, Crissy Daley, Jane Parsons, Jamie Holland, Tracey Green, Meg Doherty, Doreen Hager and Tracy Parsons. The A regions were held on Sunday in Framingham. Newton sent 14 swimmers and placed 8th out of 13 teams. The team captured 11 medals in the finals. Those who earned medals were Gretchen Hayden (10), 4th in the butterfly, Karen Hayden (13), 5th in butterfly and 3rd in freestyle, Kate Green (17), qualified 6th and pulled up to 3rd in freestyle, Scott Hayden (15), 5th in freestyle and 5th in breastroke, Neil Johnson (12), 6th in freestyle and 6th in breastroke, Marianne Fay (14), qualified 4th in breastroke and took 3rd in the finals, Joanne Fay (16), 4th in breastroke, Mark Hayden (16) and Marianne Fay (14), both qualified as 2nd alternates in backstroke. In the relay events, the A girls took 3rd place in the freestyle in a very close race. Girls in the relay were: Karen Hayden, Leslie Swift, Joanne Fay and Kate Green. A boys, Dave Colburn, Mark Hayden, Jeff Kennedy and Scott Hayden qualified 4th in the trials and finished 2nd in the finals, beating out 2 very fast teams from Natick and Canton, swimming their best freestyle times. Also swimming at the A regionals were Leslee Tocci, Philip Schiller, Dave Colburn and Sam Lobar.

Track meet Sat.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — One of the biggest turnouts of track talent is expected at the third Summer Olympic Development Meet to be held at Brown University Stadium Aug. 26.

The meet, sponsored by the Bruin Spiked Shoe Club, is aimed at giving youngsters not normally involved in interscholastic or intercollegiate programs a chance to compete in a track and field meet.

Last year, about 650 of the top track athletes from the Eastern area competed in the Olympic Development.

Coast guard gridders

NEW LONDON, Conn. (UPI) — The Coast Guard Academy has begun preseason workouts with 83 candidates in preparation for its opening football game with the Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, N.Y., Sept. 9.

Head Coach Bill Hickey said the Cadets will have 12 starters among 36 returning lettermen from last year's 5-4 team.

"I won't have one problem that faces most coaches and that is physical conditioning" Hickey said. "They arrived in first class condition."

Maine gridders

ORONO, Maine (UPI) — Eighty-five candidates were on hand Monday when the University of Maine at Orono began fall football practice.

The Bears, who open their season Sept. 9 against Dayton, began workouts with 20 freshmen prospects along with 32 returning lettermen.

Vermont baseball

BURLINGTON, Vt. (UPI) — The Burlington Expos are slated to meet Peru, N.Y., Sunday to open a two-out-ofthree game championship playoff for the Champlain Valley Baseball League.

Burlington clinched the Northern Division title Sunday by sweeping the Ellenburg, N.Y., Eagles.

The Expos won the first game 3-1 and then blanked Ellenburg 13-0 in the second behind Chris Nunnink's onehitter and a 15-hit attack.

Rams' roster at 50

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Rams cut their roster to 50 players Tuesday by waiving eight men including veteran defensive tackle Art Thoms and wide receiver Freeman Johns.

Others released were quarterback Brian Dowling, tight end Skip Chase, linebacker Ron Hostetler, cornerback Dwayne O'Steen, tackle Gus Coppens, and wide receiver Preston Dennard.

Mariners sign pick

SEATTLE (UPI) — Tito Nanni, an 18-year-old slugger who was the first pick of the Seattle Mariners in the June draft, was signed by the American League club Tuesday, according to Mel Didier, director of minor leagues and scouting.

Nanni, who was flown to Seattle from his Philadelphia home for the signing, will be assigned to Seattle's winter instructional league program in Arizona, which begins Sept. 15. Terms of the agreement were not announced.

Blues sign Walton

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Mike Walton, acquired from the Vancouver Canucks fr a draft choice, Tuesday signed his contract with the St. Louis Blues.

Crawford's career grew in Newton

By STEVE EPSTEIN

Doug Crawford is playing in the U.S. Professional Tennis Championships this week at Longwood and if you haven't heard his name before, he doesn't blame you.

Crawford has not exactly become a household name in the tennis world, and he admits he's lucky at age 28 to be invited to Longwood this year.

Doug is a native of Weston, Mass. but his tennis career has flourished in Newton. He has been a lifelong member of the Longwood Cricket Club, and his tennis skills were nurtured there.

He is the only member of the pro tour who makes his home in the Newton area, and right now he is only a part-time player at that.

Right now Crawford categorizes his play as "weekend tennis." He is trying to build a business to fall back on now that he is getting older and the odds of making it in the world of unknown 19 year-old tennis superstars are falling. However, at one time, Crawford was a viable member of the pro tour, if not an immortal name.

As a junior, Crawford had never played competitively on the national level. He stayed in New England and polished his skills, and planned to go on to play NCAA team competition at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. After a year of freshman play, Crawford left school to try his luck on the pro tour.

He started on the Florida WATCH circuit and soon began to play some satellite tournaments. These tournaments allow consistent winners to then advance to regular tour tournaments.

Finally, when the ATP Computer was developed, Crawford amassed enough points to gain a ranking on the computer. Crawford then played qualifying tournaments and got into some WCT events. By 1975, Crawford had risen to about 105th on the computer, and was a regular touring pro.

Between 1974-77, Crawford had some great triumphs—although they would be meager to a Borg or Connors. He played at Wimbledon twice, and reached the third round last year at Forest Hills after defeating Nikki Spear and Francisco Gonzales, before losing to top star Wojtek Fibak.

Crawford entered the French Open in 1975 and played well before eventually losing to tournament champ Adriano Panatta. He continued to play the Grand Prix circuit and also was king of New England tennis.

After a brief but trying stint with the Boston Lobsters, Doug won the New England Championship in 1976, the last time he entered this tournament. He also played on the NETS circuit (New England Tennis Stars) and after the first four tournaments in the winter of 1977, he was the leader in singles, doubles, and prize money won.

Still, this is ancient history to the 28-year-old bachelor who realizes that the tennis game is getting more competitive—and has seen his ranking drop to 258th on the computer due to inactivity. He has played very little in the last year, just getting back into shape in hopes of playing Longwood. He won a NETS tourney in Vermont a movth ago and then qualified for the Volvo Tourney in New Hampshire before being beaten by Nick Saviano. He is gald to get one more shot at Longwood.

His best performance here was in 1975, when he "got a good draw" and advanced to the second round before losing to Arthur Ashe. That was his best yar on the tour, when he earned in excess of $20,000. Crawford realizes that his may be his last Longwood, and also knows that due to his low standing on the computer he owes a lot to the club for inserting him into the draw as a special 'wild card' qualifier.

Crawford was never a superstar outside of New England, and his luck on the pro tour has been minimal by most standards, but he has enjoyed the opportunity to do the thing he loves best: compete as an athlete.

It is refreshing in the days of increased prize money and the business end of sports, to see a player travel to Vermont to play in a tournament with only $500 as a first prize. He may not be very good compared to even some of the unseeded players in this tournament, but Longwood and its inhabitants know who he is, and admire him for what he does so well.

Crawford puts his tennis career into excellent perspective. He says, "I was paid to see the world. I played in Europe, India, Hong Kong, Tokyo, Australia, Egypt and dozens of other places. Now, international tennis for me is in the past, and although I was never number one I wouldn't have it any other way."

Among the missing at Longwood ...

By STEVE EPSTEIN

The play continues throughout this week at the U.S. Professional Tennis Championships at Longwood, with great tennis being the order of each day.

However, the continuing controversy among players and spectators alike is not over the players that are here, but over those professionals who have chosen to skip this year's tournament.

In the past, Longwood has had the reputation of being one of the top tournaments in the United States. Continuously up until 1976, all of the top players appeared at Longwood. The banner year for the tourney had to be 1976 when Jimmy Connors, Bjorn Borg, Guillermo Vilas, Manuel Orantes, and Adriano Panatta all made appearances. This year only Orantes and Panatta are in attendance.

However, last year there were signs of the decline of Longwood. Neither Borg or Vilas bothered to come. This year, things are worse. Only four of the top 10 players in the world are here. Only top-seeded Eddie Dibbs is ranked in the top five and he is listed fifth. Of the top 50 players in the world, only 23 are here. This makes for a good tournament, but certainly not up to the standards of past years.

The question arises why the big stars of the circuit are avoiding Longwood this year. The answer is mostly two-fold. It has to do with a combination of the date and the surface.

Traditionally, Longwood has been scheduled to begin the week before the U.S. Open in New York. In the past, the Open has been played in Forest Hills, on clay courts. Longwood was a good tune-up for many top names in preparation for the Open, America's most prestigious tournament.

This year, the tournament has been moved to Flushing Meadow, N.Y. The surface there is an artificial turf which is hard like asphalt. Players have chosen either to take the Longwood week off to practice in Flushing, or to play other tournaments with the same surface as the Open.

Manuel Orantes, the defending champion at Longwood, commented about the different surface in New York: "It takes a week of practice on a new surface to get ready, so many players are not here." Orantes inferred that if he himself was not the defending champion, he would also have taken the week off to prepare for the U.S. Open.

He gave himself little chance of winning next week's Open due to his decision to play at Longwood this week. But he commented that each player had to "make the decision that was right for him" in deciding whether or not to come to Longwood just before the Open.

Harold Solomon differed with the local press' opinions on the Longwood field. Solomon said that the press was giving the tennis public a poor impression of this year's crop of players and said that the talent here this year is comparatively good.

Solomon stated, "Eight of the ten top players in the world on clay are here." Solomon failed to specify just who these players are, but obviously he must not consider one of the trio of Borg, Connors, and Vilas a top ten player on clay, since all three are missing.

Solomon is right in his statement that this year's Longwood field is better than most tournaments played this summer, but it still doesn't measure up to what it once was and can be.

Arthur Ashe, who has consistently been a supporter of the Association of Tennis Professionals, attacked ATP members who had snubbed Longwood. When asked if he was upset that some ATP players had missed the tournament Ashe commented, "If they're ATP members, yeah."

The ATP was formed to assure tennis players decent prize money by assuring tournaments that a certain number of top players would be present. The formation of this union did bring an increase in prize money, but now the strength of the association is questioned if ATP members are not playing prestigious tournaments such as Longwood.

Ashe inferred that the players that didn't play this week are biting the hand that feeds them, although when he was asked this question point blank, he said defensively, "You said that, I didn't." Ashe called this year a "transition year" in tennis, referring to the transition of some tournaments, including the U.S. Open, to harder courts, and asked the indulgence of the Longwood fans in the wake of this change.

In any event, Connors, Borg, and Vilas are off preparing for the U. S. Open instead of playing here in town. It is a shame that a tournament with this type of prestige must settle for less than the best. Prize money will not lure the big guys. The tournament prize money has already doubled in the last three years. As Ashe commented, "How many tournaments are there with $200,000 prize money? Not many."

The tournament has to seriously consider changing its playing surface, or better yet, change its date to earlier in the summer when preparation for another major tournament is not a factor in the minds of perspective applicants to the Longwood field. Manuel Orantes and many other professionals made a persuasive argument this year. They cannot play on clay the week before the U. S. Open and then play this important tournament on a different surface. It is unfair to ask them to do this, and as businessmen they will not. Given the choice, they will all go to New York.

It would be hard to change the surface here, and most tennis enthusiasts would rather not. However, the date change is not difficult, and it would ensure the continuing success of this tournament in Boston. Choosing another date is a can't-lose situation for the tournament organizers unless they pick the week before Wimbledon.

Cowboys with one kicker

DALLAS (UPI) — Dallas Cowboys' Coach Tom Landry mistakenly let it slip Tuesday that he had waived kicker Skip Butler, leaving rookie Jay Sherrill as the only place kicker with the club.

Landry said the rest of the Cowboys roster moves designed to reduce the team to 50 players would not be announced until Wednesday.

Pichard appointed

Charles E. Pichard has been appointed director of food and beverage at the Marriott Hotel in Newton, according to Colin Nadeau, general manager.

Pichard comes here from Dallas, where he was food and beverage manager for both Marriott hotels in that city.

He has held the same position at the Dulles Marriott Hotel in Washington.

A graduate of Florida State University, Pichard is a resident of Medway.

Charles E. Pichard

Anne W. Dayton

Mrs. Dayton named

Anne W. Dayton of Newton was recently appointed director of development and admissions of Chestnut Hill School.

A Newton resident for 10 years, Mrs. Dayton is a graduate of Smith College. Formerly a teacher of language arts at both elementary and secondary levels, she was appointed as first executive director of Newton Community Schools in 1974. She currently is a member of the Advisory Board of the Cultural Affairs Commission and is active as a member of Eliot Church and of the Newton Corner Neighborhood Association.

Before coming to The Chestnut Hill School she was with TDR Associates of Newton as an evaluator assigned to several Boston public schools.

Siegel is chairman

Arthur H. Siegel of Newton Centre has been appointed to serve as chairman of the Health Care Industries Committee of the Massachusetts Society of Certified Public Accountants Inc., for the term ending April 30, 1979.

A graduate of Columbia College & Columbia Graduate School of Business, Siegel is presently a partner at Price Waterhouse & Co. in Boston.

Siegel has been a member of the society since 1972 and presently serves on the society's Board of Directors.

Graduated mortgage plan allows early lower payments

On Friday, Aug. 18, at 8:30 a.m., a young Woburn couple did something very few young people are able to do nowadays — they signed a mortgage agreement allowing them to buy a home.

At a time when the cost of a single-family house is rising by almost $500 a month (a rise of $2200 between March and June, according to the Commerce Department) and the average price of a home rose to $61,500, the couple was able to purchase a home thanks to a new HUD-FHA loan program called the graduated payment mortgage (GPM) plan.

The plan, part of the Young Families Housing Act, sponsored by Sen. Edward W. Brooke, is to let people who would have difficulty making payments under a conventional level-payment mortgage have an opportunity to make lower than conventional payments during the early years.

The Fidelity Guarantee Mortgage Corp. of Boston made this mortgage plan available to New England consumers for the first time last week in the regional office of HUD, room 801, JFK Federal Building in Boston.

"This is an extremely significant event, especially for young people who feel that the American dream of owning a house has turned into an impossible nightmare," said Senator Brooke.

Silverman appointed

Richard N. Silverman of Waban has been appointed president of the restructured Hy-Sil, Inc., of Revere, and MADICO, INC. of Woburn by Van Leer, U.S.A.

The companies are owned by Royal Packaging Industries Van Leer B.V. of Amstelveen, the Netherlands.

Hy-Sil manufactures gift wrap and metallized film, and MADICO makes solar control film.

Silverman's family introduced gift wrap and its accessories on the American scene in 1903.

Silverman has been a Newton resident for over 50 years and is a graduate of Newton High School and Brown University.

Business briefs

David L. Means has been elected to the position of assistant vice president of the Brookline Savings Bank. He will be in charge of the Bank's Savings Division and will report directly to the president. He was previously employed by Newton Co-operative Bank.

Eric J. Weiner of West Newton, manager of the Cambridge Chamber of Commerce, recently completed his fifth Institute for Organizational Management at the University of Delaware. Over 400 voluntary organization executives from 30 states, the District of Columbia, and Canada particiapted in this professional development program.

Weiner concentrated on courses dealing with economic development and political action committees.

Joel B. Leighton of Lower Falls, certified association executive, has received the Key Award of the American Society of Association Executives (ASAE). Leighton, executive director of the Associated General Contractors of Massachusetts, with headquarters in Chestnut Hill, was one of six association executives selected to receive the award, ASAE's highest honor, at its convention in Boston. ASAE annually presents Key Awards to its members who have demonstrated the highest qualities of leadership in their associations, industries and professions, as well as in their civic and community activities.

Campanella elected

Boston College Executive Vice-President Frank B. Campanella has been elected to the Board of Trustees of St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

A graduate of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Campanella received a master's degree from Babson College and doctorate from Harvard University School of Business Administration.

Campanella is the author of "The Measurement of Portfolio Risk Exposure, the Use of the Beta Coefficient," published by D.C' Heath.

He advises the Boston College Institute for the Study of Religious Education and Service and is a director of the Boston College School for the multi-handicapped.

Frank B. Campanella

The Brookline Trust Company recently announced the appointment of Raymond Mannos to the office of vice president and director. A lifetime resident of Brookline and active in community affairs, Mannos attended Brookline schools and graduated from Suffolk University in 1962 with a B.S. in business administration. Most recently he was president and chairman of the board of the Town Bank and Trust Company in Brookline. He was with Town Bank for 16 years before accepting the position with Brookline Trust Company.

Shulman wins prize

Adults are tackling keyboard

Adults are joining kids in the annual back-to-school march, taking continuing education courses in greater numbers every year.

And piano lessons are among the most popular in the adult education repertoire. According to a recent Gallup survey, some fourteen million adult Americans regularly play the piano.

Increased leisure time is partly responsible for new-found adult interest in piano, but playing the keyboard also helps adults ease the tensions of modern living.

Piano playing is personally rewarding too, as novice adult musicians successfully meet the challenge of employing completely different skills than those used in their jobs.

"I can forget my day-to-day troubles and completely relax at the piano," explains one Midwest executive who had never played the piano before he started lessons a few years back.

Adults across the country echo his sentiments — indeed, a recent survey shows that 83 percent of all Americans wish they could play a musical instrument.

If you are one of those Americans, and you'd like to try your hands at the keyboard, don't let your age hold you back.

Age has nothing to do with an ear for music or achievement level—if your desire is there. And if you did take piano lessons as a child, chances are that your motor skills are just dormant, waiting for you to nurture them again.

Good dental care for children

Just before school begins, there's a whirl of activity. Shopping excursions are combined with trips to the doctor and the dentist, at which point many children become uneasy.

Wise parents will make an effort to ease their children's minds, and calm their irrational and unnecessary fears.

The need for some reassurance beforehand is likely to be particularly strong if this is the child's first visit. The American Dental Association has some excellent and most practical tips for parents to make use of prior to taking their children to the dentist those crucial first few times.

A good deal of the child's anxiety stems from fear of the unknown. The best way to conquer this is to prepare the child beforehand. Telling the child exactly what is involved clears the air, and allows the child to think about the situation for a while, bringing up any questions as they occur.

With toddlers particularly, the best way to make them comfortable about the upcoming visit is to act it out first, in a play situation. Play "dentist" with your child, reversing roles if the child desires, or help your child to play "dentist" with a favorite doll or stuffed animal.

Make sure your child knows that you will be there during the session at the dentist's, for that knowledge will be the greatest comfort of all.

If the dentist discovers cavities, your child in all likelihood will have to be prepared for the unfamiliar experience of the drill. Explain to your child exactly what is going to happen to allay his or her anxieties.

Another way of reassuring children in this situation is to make them feel that they are a part of the process. Some children like to use a hand-held mirror to watch the dentist at work.

Choosing a dentist is particularly important. You may decide to use your family dentist, or you may opt for a practitioner who specializes in work with children. In either case, don't be afraid to ask the dentist you have chosen any questions that may occur to you before the visit.

Of course, dental care is not something that takes place only in a dentist's office. Dentists themselves agree that the most important part of tooth care goes on in the home. Your dentist or hygienist will be glad to help you learn the proper way of cleaning teeth, so you can teach your children in turn.

Proper brushing is the key to healthy teeth, so help your children to use a toothbrush, which at first will seem rather unwieldy in such small hands. Also, encourage your children to learn to use dental floss, and show them the proper method for doing so.

Your dentist can tell you a great deal about food, and give you guidelines as to what is good for teeth and what is not.

Teaching your children good eating habits early will help them to establish a diet regimen that will stand them in good stead for years to come. For free booklets about teeth and dental care, write to the American Dental Association, Dept. M, 211 East Chicago Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Back-to-schoolers wear neat-looking separates

Much to the delight of both parents and teachers, the back-to-school set will happily forsake faded jeans and rumpled tee-shirts in favor of neat-looking separates for fall.

Classic look

The new, no-frills clothing includes long-sleeve turtleneck tops; menswear-type shirts; short, fitted wing-tip vests; classic blazers; both tunics and jumpers; swingy gored skirts and slim pants circled with striped belts.

The fabrics for school clothes are sportswear-oriented solids, conventional and stylized plaids of Acrilan acrylic, Monsanto polyester and blends.

Easy-care clothing

This season, the emphasis is on durability and comfort as well as on easy maintenance. Monsanto Wear-Dated clothes assure one year's normal wear, refund or replacement when returned, postage prepaid, with tag and sales slip to Monsanto.

Dormitory hot plate cooks will love versatile tri-pan

Rejoice, all ye dorm-dwellers who cope with one-burner cooking! The tri-pan is here — a three-sectioned, non-stick skillet that makes it possible to cook or heat several different foods at once.

Day or night favorite

This paragon of pans, made in France by T-Fal, is a boon at breakfast-time (bacon, eggs, hash browns all hot at the same time). It's great, too, for late-night snacks and impromptu parties.

Never a mess

Biggest boon of all is that patented super-slick interior featuring 100 percent pure PTFE. No soaking, no scrubbing, no mess—ever! One swish of a soapy cloth does it.

Triple the fun!

Impress your friends with a tri-pan party—and the following foods dear to every student's heart:

PIZZA DIP
(Makes about 2 cups)

1 can (8 ounces) tomato sauce
1 tablespoon instant minced onion
¼ teaspoon oregano
½ cup chopped stuffed olives
1 can (4½ ounces) deviled ham

Spoon mixture into one section of T-Fal non-stick tri-pan. Heat until bubbly. Serve with taco chips and potato chips for dipping.

COCKTAIL FRANKS IN BEER
Serves 4)

1 pound cocktail franks
1 tablespoon instant minced onion
Beer

GARLIC NUTS
(Serves 4)

½ pound mixed salted nuts
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Mix ingredients and spoon into section of T-Fal non-stick tri-pan. Stir gently with wooden or plastic spoon over medium heat until nuts are hot.

DORM PARTY featuring terrific food is a cinch to give when you've got the tri-pan. New three-sectioned, non-stick skillet from France can serve up three hot snacks on just one burner—with no clean-up problems to spoil the fun!

Healthful school snacks

After a long, busy day at school, many youngsters rush home in search of a tasty "pick-me-up."

If you're a concerned mother who's wondering if after-school "munchies" interfere with your children's dinner appetites, the American Bottled Water Association offers these light, low-calorie snack suggestions:

Young children will enjoy finding portions of fresh or canned fruit—pineapple, grapes, orange sections, or even melon chunks—waiting for them in the refrigerator. Another delicious, healthful treat is applesauce sprinkled with cinnamon.

Instead of the usual sugary and carbonated drinks, keep a container of fresh, clean-tasting bottled domestic water in the refrigerator.

BACK TO SCHOOL AND COLLEGE

Selecting a school is one of life's major decisions

Juniors and seniors going back to high school this fall will be asking themselves one of life's most important questions: "Where will I go to school after graduation?"

The answer will affect their earning power, career opportunities, and how and where they will spend the rest of their lives. Yet, many make the final decisions without investigating all the options, says Richard H. McClintock, president of ITT Educational Services, Inc., which is one of the country's largest networks of career training schools.

Ask questions

Whether you're planning to attend a junior or community college, a four-year college or university, or a post-secondary trade or business school, McClintock advises drawing up a list of questions to ask school officials, students, graduates and employers who regularly recruit at the school.

What are some of the most important questions to ask? "Find out the school's entrance standards," McClintock says.

"The school should enroll only those students who have the potential and motivation to succeed in their course of study. Also, check teacher credentials for academic training and work experience."

McClintock says another indication that the school can provide equality education is its accreditations, such as by state licensing, professional association approval, or by accrediting groups like the Association of Independent Colleges and Schools and the National Association of Trade and Technical Schools.

Talk to the school's placement director to find out if you'll receive assistance in finding a good job when you graduate.

"At proprietary schools like the business and technical schools operated by ITT Educational Services, ask to see the Placement Report required by the U.S. Office of Education for schools receiving federally insured loans, federal grants and Veteran's Administration approval," McClintock advises.

"This report specifies the number of students who have graduated from the school in each curriculum, how many requested placement assistance, the number who were placed in jobs related to their training, and their average starting salaries."

The placement department also should be able to tell you which employers visit the school regularly to interview students for jobs in your chosen field, McClintock says.

"Find out if the placement department surveys graduates and employers to determine if they are mutually satisfied," he adds. "Then talk to several employers and graduates yourself."

McClintock recommends visiting the school, both with and without classes in session to get a "feel" for the institution.

Check to see if textbooks and equipment are up-to-date and sufficient in numbers. Ask students what they think of the school and why they chose to go there.

"You also should determine what your education will cost," McClintock says. "In addition to out-of-pocket expenses for tuition and fees, room and board, books, supplies, travel and incidentals, consider how long you will be in school before you can begin working and earning a salary.

"The U.S. Department of Labor's Occupational Outlook Handbook, available at most libraries, can help you realistically estimate the starting salary in your field."

Headquartered in Indianapolis, ITT Educational Services operates 20 post-secondary business and technical schools in 11 states.

Last year, 94 percent of the ITTES graduates who were eligible, and requested placement assistance from their schools' placement departments, found jobs for which they were tained or training-related positions.

For a complete checklist of questions to ask when looking for a school, send 25 cents and a stamped, self-addressed business-sized envelope to "How To Shop For the Right School," P.O. Box 68326, Indianapolis, Ind. 46268.

New peanut butter fun

Almost every kid from three to 93 loves good old-fashioned peanut butter, whether it's spread thickly on bread with jelly for the classic "P and J" sandwich or just scooped out of the jar (by finger, if mother's not watching!)

Peanut butter is not only one of the country's most loved sandwich spreads; it also has the benefit of being a highly nutritious food, rich in protein.

Why not try some exotic new tricks with peanut butter that will delight the taste buds of students at lunch or during recess with their surprising combinations.

We've all had peanut butter and jelly sandwiches. But did you ever combine peanut butter with thinly-sliced hamburger dill pickles for a tangy new treat? Or, if you prefer your peanut butter sweetened, a peanut butter and banana sandwich is a true delicacy.

Peanut butter is the perfect topping for celery sticks, which are apt to be discarded by the lunchbox set if not "jazzed up" a bit. Peanut butter also goes well with apple slices, pears, even onions!

Or, for a great snack, pack off a small jar of peanut butter, some crackers and a knife and let the kids go to it!

Assertiveness training

Would you like to be able to stand up for your legitimate rights without putting someone else down?

Do you envy people who seem to handle even the toughest situations openly, honestly, and directly?

Do you find yourself doing things just because you feel guilty when you say "no"?

If your answer is "yes" to any or all of these questions, then the Ohrenberger assertiveness training workshop for women will interest you. The assertiveness training work shop will help you express your thoughts, feelings, ideas and needs. It will help you decide for yourself when it is worth it to you to be assertive and when it is not. Within the workshop you will have an opportunity to explore situations from your own life, using discussions, role-plays, questionnaires, and journals.

The workshop will have 10 to 12 members, and will meet one and a half hours a week for six weeks, starting in November.

On Sept. 9 at 1 p.m. and 3 p.m., as part of Autumnfest, Mrs. Raine will be conducting introductory sessions.

The workshop leader is Erica Siegel Raine. Mrs. Raine holds masters degrees from the University of Michigan in social work and education and is the former director of the Women's Resource Center of Middlesex and Somerset counties in New Jersey.

Mrs. Raine is currently on the staff of the Boston Psychological Center for Women.

The Green Thumb

HOME-MADE BUG KILLER: Although we have stronger pesticides than ever before, we still have plenty of tough insects to cope with. Killing insects of house plants isn't the easiest job in the world, even with high powered chemicals, which many of us do not like to use. If you're looking for a homemade, safe witch's brew that's death to mites, mealybugs and white flies, try the concoction used by Nina Christian, mentioned in the March African Violet magazine. She uses two herbs to concoct an organic spray: She boiled two tablespoons of finely ground coriander seeds (from a health food store) in a quart of water for three to five minutes. Then let it cool, stirring occasionally, and strain it through a coffee filter, adding enough water to make a full quart. To this she adds one-quarter teaspoon of pure anise oil (from the drug store), plus one-half teaspoon of liquid detergent as a mixer.

The solution is applied as a fine mist, covering the undersides of the leaves as well as the tops. Usually it takes a second spraying 30 minutes later to be sure to get any mealybugs that crawl out from hidden spots under the foliage. The spray kills by contact. An occasional spray of clear water prevents any buildup of oil and detergent. The "tea" has a pleasant fragrance, and Mrs. Christian reports it keeps for weeks in the refrigerator and can be heated before using.

NORFOLK ISLAND PINE: This foliage plant, (Auraucaria) is used as a Christmas tree in America and many other places throughout the world. You can also enjoy it year round as a striking foliage plant. It's a slower grower, seldom needs repotting. The Norfolk pine likes a moist soil so do not let the roots dry out at any time. Dry soils result in browning of lower branches, also shedding of foliage. Give it a bright window, protected from direct sun. You can start nez plants from seed sown in a loose mixture. Or you can start plants from tips two to three inches long, taken from the upright growth of plants. Oddle enough, cuttings taken from the side (or lateral growth) will root, but will not grow into a tree form. They grow flat!

Joseph O. Rousseau

A funeral mass will be said Thursday (Aug. 24) at 10 a.m. at St. Jean's Church, Watertown Street, for Joseph O. Rousseau, who died Aug. 20 at the age of 61.

Mr. Rousseau lived at 37 Pleasant St., West Newton.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ann S. Rousseau, two sons, Thomas and Ronald of West Newton; and a daughter, Jo-Ann of West Newton.

Mr. Rousseau is also survived by four grandchildren.

He was a past commander of the Franco-American War Veterans and was a veteran of World War II, with service in the Marine Corps.

Donations may be made in his memory to the Robert Davol Scholarship Fund.

Burial is in Calvary Cemetery, Waltham.

Rev. Charles E. Burke

A concelebrated mass was held Aug. 19 for the Rev. Charles E. Burke, S.J., at the church of St. Ignatius Loyola in Chestnut Hill.

Father Burke died Aug. 16 at the age of 72.

He was assistant administrator of the Jesuit community at Boston College and a tutor in Greek grammar.

Rev. Burke was born in Somerville. He was graduated from Boston College High School. He studied at Weston College where he was ordained to the priesthood in 1935.

From 1939 to 1965 he was principal of the Cranwell School, a Jesuit preparatory school in Lenox. For the next 11 years he served as associate pastor at St. Ignatius'.

Fr. Burke is survived by a niece, Mrs. Robert Bielarski of Fairfax, Va.

Burial was at Campion Center, Weston.

Benjamin Jacobson

Services will be held Thursday, Aug. 24, at noon in the Levine Chapel, Brookline, for Benjamin Jacobson of 2300 Commonwealth Ave., Auburndale, who died Monday, Aug. 21 in Atlanta.

Mr. Jacobson had formerly served as commissioner of the state Real Estate Board, assistant commissioner of the MDC, and executive secretary to Lt. Gov. Robert Murphy.

He owned a cleaning service in Harvard Square until the 1950s8, and sold it to enter the real estate business.

Mr. Jacobson was a member of the Temple Emanuel Brotherhood, Brandeis University Men's Association, and the Hundred Club.

He leaves his wife, Anna; a son, Donald L. of Miami; and a daughter, Arlene M. Warshaw of Atlanta. He also leaves four grandchildren.

Burial will be in Sharon Memorial Park.

David E. Reid

Services were held Saturday (Aug. 19) for David E. Reid of 1083 Walnut St., Newton Highlands. He died Aug. 15 at age 64.

He leaves his wife, Gertrude Winter Reid, and two daughters, Mrs. Renee Plummer of Fort Lee, Va., and Shirley Reid of Miami, Fla.

He is also survived by his sister, Mrs. Vera Fungaroli of Orlando, Fla., and his brother, Arthur Rantanen of Albany, N.Y. He also leaves two grandchildren.

Burial was at Fort Devens, Ayer, and gifts may be sent to Shriners Burn Institute, Boston.

Arthur J. Murphy

A funeral mass will be said at St. Bernard's Church, West Newton, at 10 a.m. Thursday, Aug. 24, for Arthur J. Murphy of West Newton.

He died Tuesday, Aug. 22, at age 84.

Mr. Murphy leaves his wife, Maude M. (O'Dwyer); one son, Donald E. of West Newton; and six daughters, Doris Sampson of West Newton, Isabel Donnellon of Brighton, Sara Hill of Sudbury, Virginia Ridge of Needham, Mary McGrath of Plymouth, and Judith Lynch of Hawaii.

He is also survived by 34 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Service note

Live a lot.

There are condominiums where people keep to themselves. And there are condominiums where people get together and do things. Knollsbrook Village is one of the latter. Chances are, twenty of the most active people you know already live here. And you'll be able to meet a lot more of them the first month you're here. Because Knollsbrook makes it easy for everyone to get together. With one of the largest clubhouses around. Indoor swimming pool. Three tennis courts. Plus pine woods, brook and pond. All the things that make condominium life worth living. With people who live life to the fullest.

Prices start at as little as $42,500 for a two bedroom, two bath home with screened-in porch. And one of the lowest mortgage rates in Boston.

Come. Live a lot. Instead of a little.

Medically, we know enough to save 5,000 babies a year from cerebral palsy.

If only we had the money.

It's easy to smile when baby is healthy. Dennis Hallinan/FPG

Doctors tell us that the incidence of cerebral palsy could be cut in half in five years.

All it takes is the money to fully use present medical knowledge, and to speed research projects.

You can help in a special way, with a legacy or deferred gift to United Cerebral Palsy. Learn the advantages by asking your local UCP association for the free brochure, "The Case for Making a Will."

Be generous. Think what your money can buy.

United Cerebral Palsy.

IT'S SO EASY...

Placing an ad in Classified is easy . . . thanks to the telephone! All you have to do is give us a call and let us know the type of advertising message you want to run. You will talk with a friendly Ad-Visor whose job it is to help you word your ad for best response. And you can charge the cost of the ad . . . which is surprisingly low . . . to your home address. It's so easy . . . why don't you make that call today?

Another chance for unclaimed money

A sizable amount of money — $253,000 — that had never been properly reported by Blue Cross-Blue Shield during 1950 to 1968 brings the total amount of unclaimed funds the state treasury is attempting to return to rightful owners to over $8 million, Treasurer Robert Crane has announced. That list will be released soon.

The fourth list of Newton residents who are due unclaimed money being held by the state appears below.

If your named appears on the State Treasurer's unclaimed money list, the easiest and most efficient way for you to recover your money is to write to: State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane, 12th Floor, McCormack Building, Ashburton Place, Boston, Mass. 02108, or telephone 727-5192 or 727-1157.

Dukakis appoints Dr. Mogul to medical registration board

Gov. Michael Dukakis recently appointed Kathleen M. Mogul, M.D., of Newton, as a member of the state's Board of Registration and Discipline in Medicine.

The board has responsibility for licensing all physicians in the Commonwealth and for investigating complaints against them. The board also has broad disciplinary powers for physicians who have violated either the board's rules and regulations or state laws. Each physician in the state must register with the board every two years.

The board is composed of five licensed physicians and two public members who receive a salary of $1000 per year plus travel expenses.

In making the appointment Dukakis said, "Dr. Mogul is a well-known, experienced psychiatrist whose presence on this board will greatly increase its ability to serve our consumers."

The governor went on to encourage people to take their complaints to the state's 27 boards of registration, saying that "these boards can play a valuable role in aiding our consumers to receive the quality care and services they need and deserve. They can only be effective, however, if we make use of them."

Mogul has a private practice in general psychiatry in Newton, and is a clinical instructor in psychiatry at the Massachusetts Mental Health Center. She has also served as a psychiatric consultant to the Florence Crittenton Home in Brighton and the Newton-Wellesley-Weston Multi-Service Center in Newton Centre.

Mogul received her B.A. from Barnard College and her M.D. from Harvard Medical School. She has served as chairwoman of both the Health and Safety Committee of Newton High School and the Mental and Public Health Committee of the Newton PTA Council.

Mogul replaces Valentina Donahue of Boston, whose term expired, and will serve until Jan. 1, 1981.

Community college offers 250 courses

Investments, labor studies, computer office skills, and photography are included among the new courses being offered in the fall semester of the Division of Continuing Education at Bunker Hill Community College in Charlestown which will start Sept. 5.

More than 250 courses will be offered.

In addition to the associate degree curriculum, certificate programs are offered in 12 skill areas.

Class hours will be 4-6:45 p.m. for the popular "Sunset Semester," 7-9:45 p.m. and Saturday 9-11:45 a.m.

Registration will be held on Aug. 22-23 from 4 to 8 p.m. Students do not need to be high school graduates.

Complimentary catalogs and other information may be obtained by calling the Division of Continuing Education, 241-8600, ext. 444.

The college is located on the MBTA Orange Line.

Council for Children helps form Parents Anonymous

The West Suburban Council for Children is assisting the development of a new group to help parents help themselves with family problems.

The Families in Crisis Committee recently had its first meeting.

Carolyn Zavarine, M.D., Newton's health commissioner, and Hill Grimmett, director of Freeport, an alternative housing project for Newton adolescents, joined seven other interested local citizens in assessing the needs of our community.

Dick Jobin, a representative from the state Children at Risk project, was on hand to share information and offer technical assistance.

This group has already begun the preliminary steps for the formation of a local self-help Parents Anonymous chapter.

According to Joan Kunitz, West Suburban Council's child advocate, there have been a number of recent calls requesting contact with Parents Anonymous in the Newton, Weston, Wellesley, and Needham areas.

Until now, such requests were referred to Cambridge or Framingham P.A. chapters. The local P.A. group should be functioning soon.

The Families in Crisis Committee has several other topics on its agenda. These include community education, mandated reporters training, and a community program aimed at prevention of ab8use and neglect by the use of well-trained "parent aides."

Anyone interested in learning more about the Families in Crisis Committee can contact Marie Ford Reilly, chairwoman, at the Area Office for Children, 474 Centre St., Newton Corner, 965-9810.

Service note

Airman Jerome D. Coffidis, son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Coffidis of 103 Randlett Pk., West Newton, has been assigned to Sheppard AFB, Tex., after completing Air Force basic training.

During the six weeks at Lackland AFB, Tex., the airman studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special instruction in human relations. Completion of this training earned him credits towards an associate in applied science degree through the Community College of the Air Force.

Airman Coffidis will now receive specialized training in the communications field. He is a 1978 graduate of Newton North High School.

Auto theft rate triple other states'

Massachusetts' highest-in-the-nation car theft rate is continuing to hit motorists in the pocketbook through high costs for auto comprehensive insurance, reports the Insurance Information Institute.

According to the FBI, the Bay State's auto theft rate is nearly three times the national average, higher than in New York, California, Illinois and Pennsylvania. In 1976, latest year for which complete statistics are available, 76,257 auto thefts were reported in Massachusetts.

Paid insurance losses on the theft of Massachusetts private passenger cars — whether the entire vehicle or parts stripped from the car — amounted to $60,642,632 in 1976. But this figure alone, said the institute, does not tell the full story of how the state's notorious stolen car rate is victimizing motorists year after year in the cost of insurance.

Optional comprehensive insurance covers not only theft but also fire, vandalism, glass breakage, flood and a number of other perils, all of which produced total paid losses of $86,220,282 in 1976. Thus, the $60,642,632 figure means that more than 70 percent of all comprehensive insurance losses in Massachusetts occurred under the theft portion of the policy.

On this basis, the institute notes that the cost of comprehensive insurance could be reduced materially in Massachusetts if the frequency of auto thefts were lowered, at least to levels approaching the FBI national average of 446 thefts per 100,000 population. In 1976, the Massachusetts rate stood at 1313 per 100,000 residents.

Increased public awareness and anti-theft activities by law enforcement agencies, the insurance industry and other private groups have brought about an encouraging improvement in the theft rates of a number of Massachusetts communities last year. Recent reports of the Registry of Motor Vehicles indicate a decline in theft for 1977, and insurance industry data on losses will become available later this year.

Additionally, the U.S. Department of Transportation recently proposed new auto manufacturing regulations to make car theft more difficult. The proposed rules would require separate ignition and door keys, modification of door lock buttons to prevent lifting by external devices, steps to reduce "hot wire" starting, and internal hood latch releases. The rules would become effective for 1981 model cars.

Discounts on the cost of comprehensive insurance are available to car owners who install approved anti-theft devices. These include alarm systems, hood locks, ignition kill-switches or armored switches and fuel cut-off devices.

The institute cautions that leaving your car unlocked invites theft. In many cases, thieves must work within seconds to avoid detection, and frequently a locked car will provide sufficient deterrent to discourage the theft. In addition to rolling up the windows and locking the doors before leaving a parked car, the motorist never should leave packages, clothing or luggage in the passenger compartment. And whenever possible, be sure to park in a well-lighted area.

Tax rate jumps $5

By ELIZABETH McKINNON
of the Graphic staff

Unless the Board of Aldermen makes changes in either the tax levy or the amount of surplus funds used to lower the tax rate increase, taxes will be up exactly $5 per thousand dollars of assessed valuation.

Mayor Theodore Mann last week announced the figure of $171.20, subject to Board of Aldermen approval of $2.8 million in pending financial items to be added to the city's budget, making a grand total of slightly.over $76 million.

The net amount to be raisedby the city would be $68.6 million.

The mayor presented his $5 tax rate increase to the Board of Aldermen at an informal supper meeting, original-

Aldermen hear pleas to delay $1 million Underwood project

By RICHARD WILLIAMS
of the Graphic staff

Proponents for the $1 million renovation project at Underwood School defended their plans for what might be the last time Monday night at a public hearing before the Board of Aldermen.

The hearing was brought on by members of the Newton Citizens for Neighborhood Schools (NCNS), who petitioned for the Board to postpone its approval of a bond issue for the renovation for 60 days.

The aldermen are expected to vote on the bond issue for the Newton Corner school Tuesday.

At least four of the aldermen are sympathetic to those who are not pleased with the School Committee's performance in regard to recent school closings.

According to Clerk of the Board of Aldermen Edward English, Ald. Carol Ann Shea, Cynthia Creem, Robert Tennant, and Rodney Barker have filed a resolution to ask the School Committee to formulate a "comprehensive plan" dealing with declining enrollment, surplus space, and especially to consider redistricting.

English said the resolution was filed Aug. 28, but has no direct tie-in with the delay request.

Elizabeth Cody of NCNS spoke strongly for delaying the bond issue until more information comes from the School Committee. No one at the hearing stated the renovation work should never be done.

Ms. Cody said, "In one area the autonomy of the School Committee must be redefined. It should not allow for the School Committee to remain in the real estate business."

Brian Yates, an NCNS member from Upper Falls, disagreed with the opinion of his group and urged the aldermen to pass the Underwood money soon.

Regarding the request for a 60-day delay to allow the School Committee to produce a long-range study, Yates said, "This School Committee lacks

School again!

Thirty-four buses will roll next Thursday morning as 13,900 students head back to school in Newton.

This will be two more buses than last year, in order to bus former Hamilton School students to their new schools — Williams and Angier.

Hamilton School is closed due to declining enrollment, and students at Emerson School in Upper Falls this year will be getting acquainted with Countryside School, where they will all be going next year when their school closes.

Newton North High School is ready to open on schedule for teachers Tuesday, with a heating, ventilating, and air conditioning system.

Assistant Superintendent for Personnel Hope Danielson said there will be about 45 new teachers in the 21 elementary schools and seven secondary schools. Some of these include former library teacher aides who have been upgraded . There will be an average of a half-time professional librarian in each elementary school.

Bowen School in Newton Centre will have at least one new person in the role of teacher. Joan Warner, former principal of Hamilton School, has accepted the offer of the administration to teach third grade there.

She had been the focus of collective bargaining sessions over the summer in which administrators sought a more palatable reduction-in-force clause.

Principals and otther administrators will be informed about the tentative agreement early in September and a date will be set for a ratification vote, former Newton Teachers Association President Richard Adams said.

The School Committee will consider the tentative agreement at its first meeting Sept. 11.

Superintendent of Schools Aaron Fink will deliver his annual address to the faculty Wednesday at 9 a.m. in the Newton North High School Lasker Auditorium.

Novitiate purchase clouds city park

The announced sale of 34 acres of the 60-acre Novitiate land on Winchester Street does not leave enough for a city park, according to the Newton Conservators, Inc.

The board of the Conservators, a private group that has been urging Mayor Theodore Mann to acquire 45 acres of the property, voted Aug. 22 to express "serious reservations" about plans announced by Combined Jewish Philanthropies (CJP), purchaser of the land from the Xaverian Brothers order.

CJP plans to retain the existing buildings, build an indefinite number of new structures, and use the property for community purposes and to house several Jewish social service agencies.

The land CJP is in the process of buying includes the entire frontage along Winchester Street about halfway to the river, plus a separate four-acre piece, containing playing fields, that is not contiguous to the rest of its property.

In addition, the CJP wants a right-of-way to the Charles River and a 200-foot easement on the riverbank.

Blind maneuver through city

By LINDA FRITZ
Graphic correspondent

Teaching the blind mobility in Newton is loaded with snafus, one of which is frequently finding the Chestnut Hill Mall off limits.

"While teaching, I have been asked to leave (the mall) by both the security guards and by the management," said Michael Scione, a mobility instructor at the Carroll Center for the Blind. Because of its design and construction, the mall is a valuable teaching ground for some students, he added.

The mall blames its insurance liability, Scione said. But since he has not been bothered while teaching there in the mornings, he believes the real reason is the cosmetic effect. The blind learning to maneuver about are uncomely, said the mobility instructor.

"The mall is not public property," said a member of the mall management office who wished to remain unidentified. "If there is an accident, we're liable."

According to the mall staffer, the mall is exclusively for shopping. Even politicians on the campaign trail have been asked to leave, he said.

While the mall management may be sticky about allowing blind mobility students to train, Scione reports Newton shopkeepers are on the whole most helpful. Many may be surprised to learn how the blind are trained to locate their stores.

Smell and sound are helpful tools. The blind learn to sniff out a bakery shop and to listen for a music store. But some stores must be located by their distance from a corner.

Young people working at stores sometimes unknowingly make shopping difficult for the blind, said Vicky Berg, Carroll's other full-time mobility instructor. "If they would only say, 'May I help you?' the person would be able to locate them"' she said.

Shopkeepers running sidewalk sales sometimes create a problem, Ms. Berg said. The blind use their canes by moving them continually back and forth to locate dangers. If the cane misses the obstruction, because the merchandise is protruding from a rack or hanging from an awning, they are in trouble, Ms. Berg said.

Anything hanging less than eight feet from the ground is a danger, Ms. Berg said. Tree limbs are frequently in this category, she said. Protruding rose bushes and fire boxes as well as telephones on poles also create hazards.

Glass windows and doors without kick plates are another problem, according to Scione. The legally blind with limited vision often look through the glass, but are unable to see the decals put on for the protection of the sighted, Scione said. One of Scione's students, before coming to Carroll, once unknowingly walked through a glass door.

At Carroll mobility instruction is always tailored to the student's needs and the surroundings he will return to

NCDF may join city suit

By LINDA FRITZ
Graphic correspondent

The city solicitor's office would like the Newton Community Development Foundation to join as its partner (NCDF) in its zoning violation suit against DiCarlo Brothers.

NCDF has a 50-unit apartment complex on Hamlet Street, Newton Centre, adjoining the DiCarlo junkyard.

Because of its abutter status, Newton Community Development Foundation's (NCDF) intervention by becoming a partner in the suit would strengthen the city's case, Assistant City Solicitor Kristen Apgar said. NCDF is the only abutter to have formally complained, she said.

While NCDF is aware of the Law Department's interest, the board has not yet decided if it wants the foundation to join the case, NCDF Director Alan Schlesinger said. A decision should be made shortly, he added.

NCDF has no right to intervene, according to Alderman Dominic Taglienti. At a recent Thompsonville Advisory Committee meeting, Taglienti objected not only to the possible prospect of the foundation joining the case, but also to the suit itself. The matter should be handled out of court between the community and the DiCarlos, Taglienti said.

Other members of the committee held strongly to the position that the property must be cleaned up. It is the members' jobs as citizens to support efforts to force a clean-up, said committee Co-Chairman Robert Gurevich. "It's a junkyard in the middle of Thompsonville," he said.

"Junkyard" is the key word. If the city can prove that the DiCarlo Brothers are using the south portion of their property to store junk, it should win its litigation.

Off to the races

The primary is the election in the 10th

By ELIZABETH McKINNON
of the Graphic staff

The new 10th Middlesex district was tailor-made for Joe DeNucci, say his opponents and supporters of other candidates.

The new district, a result of the cut in the House and the consequent redistricting, pits DeNucci, seeking his second term as a state representative, against another incumbent, William Stanley of Waltham, in the Democratic primary election Sept. 19. Stanley had a district to himself in Waltham before redistricting.

Hoping to capitalize on the similarities between DeNucci and Stanley is Newtonville's Joan Harrington, wife of lame-duck Rep. Peter Harrington, who decided not to seek reelection after his district was merged into the new 10th Middlesex.

By the numbers alone, Newton should have the edge in electing a representative, since registered Democrats in Newton outnumber those in Waltham about about 5 to 3.

It remains to be seen whether voting follows such a provincial line.

In Newton, the new district covers precincts 1 and 4 of Ward 1 (Nonantum); precincts 1 and 3 of Ward 2 (Newtonville); precincts 1, 3 and 4 of Ward 3 (West Newton); and precinct 4 of Ward 4 (Auburndale).

Three wards of Waltham, extending from the Watertown line to Prospect Street, Waltham, are part of the new district.

The district consists mainly of blue-collar working people, according to Stanley, who are generally conservative in their outlook.

The one bastion of the liberals, West Newton Hill, which supported liberals, now belongs to the 11th Middlesex District.

The primary Sept. 19 will determine the election, since there is no Republican candidate for the seat.

Harrington, 40, is the liberal versus two conservatives. Her main concern, she says, will be consumer and other issues "that affect people."

She would work toward strengthening the Department of Public Utilities to give it more power.

She has been in the battle to promote the prescribing of drugs by generic names rather than trade names as a way of saving money for those on low and fixed incomes. She is in favor of a new type of prescription pad for physicians that would give them a choice of name-brand or a generic-named drug.

Three TV sets taken during breaks

Three color television sets were taken during three housebreaks this weekend, police reported.

A home on Watertown Street, West Newton, was entered through a dining room window between 5 and 6 a.m. Sunday while the owner was asleep. A color TV and a stereo set worth $1200 were taken.

A house on Walnut Street, Newton Highlands, was entered sometime between Thursday and Saturday by forcing a kitchen window.

A man on Charlesbank Road, Newton Corner, returned home at about 2 p.m. Friday to see two men come from behind the house carrying a color TV. They left in a blue car on Nonantum Road.

Two holes were punched through cinder blocks and a bathroom window was broken in an attempt to enter Countryside Pharmacy early Saturday morning.

Officer Paul Cantiloro also found some pry marks outside the Fox Travel Agency door.

Some tools were found in a mailbag that were later discovered to have been taken from a truck parked outside the pharmacy in on Winchester Street, Newton Highlands.

ACA to have candidates' night

The Auburndale Community Association is sponsoring a candidates' night on Monday, Sept. 11, 7:45 p.m., at the Auburndale Congregational Church, corner of Grove Street and Woodland Road in Auburndale.

Candidates for various local, state and federal offices will be present to discuss issues related to the election.

One of the new deer delivered to the Webster Deer Park only two weeks ago may have been one of the victims of another dog attack last week. Shown here, with the doe when it was released in the Deer Park, are James McDonough of the Mass. Fish and Wildlife, assistant Peter Myrick, and David Hardy of Newton, caretaker for the park.

Deer herd attacked again

By RICHARD WILLIAMS
of the Graphic staff

Five deer were added to the Webster Conservation Deer Park herd two weeks ago to bring it up to its full complement of eight, but a vandal and a dog entered the Chestnut Hill land last week, resulting in the loss of three deer.

Three groups cooperated to restock the Deer Park after two dogs attacked and killed three deer in December 1977.

For five days there were eight deer in Newton, but on Tuesday night, Aug. 22, someone cut through a chain at an unused gate in the park fence and let in a dog.

According to Steven Nottonson of Newton Centre, one of the volunteers who helped restock the park, seven deer escaped that night. Four were captured in the area, two were found dead, and one is missing and presumed dead.

Nottonson is a director for the New England Chapter of Safari Club International, a group that promotes hunters' rights and conservation of wildlife.

The Conservation Commission accepted his offer to restock the Deer Park at no cost after the last deer slaying by dogs.

He arranged for the deer with Ben Kruser of the Massachusetts Audubon Society and James McDonough of the state Department of Fisheries and Wildlife.

Nottonson said this week that the cooperation of the three groups on this project is a "first" in the state, since one group often opposes the views of the other two.

The Deer Park is visible from Hammond Pond Parkway in Chestnut Hill and the entrance to the Webster Conservation Area on Suffolk Road.

Remaining in the park now are one buck, three does, and one female fawn. The new stock comes from Drumlin Farm, owned by the Audubon Society.

Nottonson, who has watched the deer in Deer Park since 1948, said conservationists "are trying to maintain the park for Newton citizens to see wildlife up close."

He asks residents who visit the park to report anything suspicious to the police, in order to prevent another dog incident.

Services for the elderly topic of hearing Sept. 25

West Suburban Elder Services, Inc. (WSES), the area agency on aging, home care, and nutrition program, would like to encourage any and all interested persons and agency representatives to attend and comment at a public hearing scheduled for Monday, Sept. 25, at 2 p.m. at Newton Community Services Center, 429 Cherry St., West Newton.

The hearing will be about the 1979 area plan for progress toward a comprehensive, coordinated service system for older persons residing in this planning and service area. The planning and service area includes the communities of Belmont, Brookline, Needham, Newton, Waltham, Watertown, Wellesley and Weston.

WSES is a social service agency whose purpose is to help persons 60 years and older to remain in their own homes and communities, in dignity and comfort, for as long as possible. Toward meeting this goal, WSES offers a variety of programs which are funded mostly from six federal sources: Title XX of the Social Security Act, Titles III, V, VII and IX of the Older Americans Act, and Title VI of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act.

Some money comes from local sources. These local funds are vital to WSES operations because they enable them to obtain federal Title III dollars on a three-to-one matching basis. All these funds (except CETA) are channeled through the state Department of Elder Affairs, which established and monitors the statewide system.

Services provided by WSES are information and referral, case management, community visiting aides, homemakers, transportation and a nutrition program.

For fiscal year 1979, seven new and second-year programs are being proposed for the benefit of the area's elder residents. Programs include legal services, outreach, counseling, dental screening, supportive services for cancer patients, adult-day care, and nutrition-health education.

These and the other on-going programs offered by WSES are detailed in the area plan. If you would like to receive a copy of any or all of the summaries of the various proposed programs, please feel free to drop by the WSES office on or after Sept. 12 at 51 Spring St., Watertown, or call 926-3311 and we will send a copy to you.

If you need transportation to and from the hearing, please call WSES at 926-3311 by Sept. 7 to arrange a ride.

Harrington politics 'not welcome' at Nonantum cookout for elderly

State rep candidate Joan Harrington and her husband were asked to leave the Nonantum Xmas Party Association's cookout for the elderly at the Hawthorn Playground Sunday.

The annual event has been traditionally an occasion for politicians to campaign for votes.

The association's chairman, Anthony "Fat" Pellegrini, said after the incident that the Harringtons had not been invited, and only invited people were allowed in the park.

According to Harrington, she and her husband were "walked out" of the park by two policemen, after Pellegrini had announced on the microphone that they must leave.

Joan Harrington is opposing incumbent A. Joseph DeNucci for state representative from the 10th Middlesex District. Pellegrini and much of Nonantum are supporting DeNucci.

The Hawthorn Playground is a city-owned park, and questions arose immediately as to the legality of the Harringtons' ejection.

Police Chief William Quinn said this week that police reports on the incident say that police officers Mario Marino and Aubrey Hill urged the Harringtons to leave to avoid a scene and walked with them toward the gate but did not "escort" them out.

Harrington said several persons at the cookout protested to Pellegrini about about actions.

Pellegrini said he had a permit issued by the Recreation Department for the whole playground for the day and that Harrington was "not welcome" at the private event.

The incident has already resulted in the introduction of a measure before the Board of Aldermen by Ald. Richard McGrath recommending a review of the policies and procedures for granting permits for private use of public parks and other properties.

The matter will be discussed at a special meeting of the Public Health & Safety Committee Sept. 13.

Health Planning Council open Board meeting Sept. 6

The regular meeting of the board of directors of the Health Planning Council Greater Boston will be held on Wednesday night, Sept. 6, 7:30 p.m., at the Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge, Memorial Drive, Cambridge.

The board will hear reports from committees for changes in the health care delivery system for the 2,300,000 residents in the Greater Boston area.

Also, as part of the regular agenda, the board will take action on applications certificates of need as well as a number os Health, Education and Welfare ants for a variety of health-related projects.

The Health Systems Development Committee will bring its recommendations for revision of and additions to the Health Systems Plan. Also, elections will be conducted to fill two board officer vacancies, treasurer and provider vice president.

The Health Planning Council is a regional health planning organization with a federal mandate to develop long-range plans to better meet the health care needs of the residents of 65 towns and cities in the Greater Boston area. The 30-member board is comprised of 18 consumers and 12 providers of health care and meets monthly to oversee and govern the planning process.

The work of the Health Planning Council is reflective of the health needs of the residents of Greater Boston. Everyone can participate in the planning process. For more information on the board meeting, or how to participate in the work of the council, please call Nancy Larsen at 426-2022. All meetings of the Health Planning Council are open to the public and residents of the area are urged to attend.

Ray Thibault retires after 30 years on police force

Raymond J. Thibault, a 30-year veteran of the Newton Police Department, recently retired from active duty. Two hundred of his associates and friends tendered him a "goodbye" party at the guard room of Newton Police headquarters. With Thibault was his wife, Geneva, and his daughter, Janice. Thibault was presented with a police radio scanner and a plaque.

Chief William F. Quinn, in making the presentation, commented that the scanner would keep him in touch with the everyday workings of the department.

Mayor Theodore Mann presented him a key to the city and praised Thibault's aptitude for hard work and devotion to duty.

Officer Thibault was born in North Attleboro, and moved to Newton at an early age. Upon graduation from Newton High School he saw service with the U.S. Army Infantry during World War 2, entering as a private and being discharged as a first sergeant. He served in the European Theater and earned the Infantryman's Badge and was awarded both the Bronze Star and Purple Heart.

Following his discharge, Thibault entered police service with the Newton Police Department and was assigned at first to patrol duties. He was later assigned as ambulance driver and then as night desk clerk at headquarters. Subsequently, Chief William F. Quinn, upon being appointed chief, named Thibault as his administrative aide.

In that function, he has represented Chief Quinn in directing police department fund raising for several charities.

Thibault's education since high school included courses at University of Michigan; St. John's College, Annapolis, Md; Glassboro (N.J.) State College; and the Judge Baker Guidance Center for the Studies of Youth Problems.

Raymond Thibault

In addition to his studies in the police-community relations field at St. John's and Glassboro, he was a member of the planning committee for programming at both schools and staff member of the New England Police-Community Relations Institute held at Newton College of the Sacred Heart. Currently, he is enrolled in the Law Enforcement Development Program at Boston College.

Thibault is a member of the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Disabled American Veterans; treasurer of the Newton Police Memorial Association; and treasurer of the Newton Branch of the Massachusetts Police Association Union.

He was one of the first police advisors to the Hundred Club and now as he retires he is becoming a member.

(The Hundred Club is composed of citizens who have joined together to assist financially the family of law enforcement and firefighters killed in the line of duty.)

He is married to the former Geneva Dinitte of Newton Highlands and they are the parents of Raymond, Jr., a graduate of Boston College; Kenneth G., now of California at Los Angeles Tech.; and Janice M., a student at Lasell Junior College.

Thibault will remain active as an elected member of the retirement board for the next three years. He will be associated with his family business at the Walnut Food Shop in Newton Highlands.

High-steppers Josephine Zanco and James Fleming of Waltham are two of the more than 1200 people enjoying the Nonantum Xmas Party Association's annual cookout for the elderly at Hawthorn Playground Sunday. Nine busloads of senior citizens attended the lavish event, for which Chairman Anthony "Fat" Pellegrini had to replenish steaks and "good spirits" a few times because of the huge turnout. The Garden City Bus Co. donated seven buses for the affair, and the city donated a rubbish truck to help clean up afterward. A city worker volunteered his time to man the truck. Over 200 people worked on planning and carrying out the event.

Senior citizens parking stickers availble now at centers

The new orange and black senior citizen parking stickers are now available through the Newton Department of Human Services.

A sticker allows eligible senior citizens age 65 and over to park free in metered municipal parking lots in Newton.

All eligible senior citizens must obtain this new sticker by Oct. 3. Those applying for the first time can get a sticker at any time during the year. The new parking sticker will expire June 30, 1979.

Stickers may be obtained weekdays at the Newtonville Senior Drop-In Center, 41 Austin St., and the Newton Highlands Senior Drop-In Center at the Hyde School on Lincoln Street between 9:30 and 11:30 a.m., and 1 and 3:30 p.m. Senior citizens unable to visit either drop-in center during these hours should call the Department of Human Services for other arrangements.

To be eligible for a sticker, an individual must be a resident of Newton and at least 65 years old. Individuals must bring their Massachusetts driver's license and their Massachusetts car registration (both of which must have the same Newton address).

Copies of the rules and regulations governing the program and a list of municipal parking lots where senior citizens are eligible to park will be distributed with the sticker.

The Senior Citizen Parking Sticker Program is coordinated by the Newton Department of Human Services in cooperation with the Council on Aging.

McDonald's has club for senior citizens

McDonald's of Newton has developed a special program for the Newton senior citizens as a way of showing appreciation for all their services to our community.

Known as the "55-plus Golden Arches Club," the program offers a free soft drink or hot coffee to the members with any purchase, at any time during business hours.

Registration will be Tuesday, Sept. 5, through Oct. 31, at the two Newton Senior Drop-In Centers. You may also register at McDonald's, 197 California St.

Senior citizens who have been members must reregister.

State Bar Association makes legal and nonlegal referrals

The Lawyer Referral Service telephones at the Massachusetts Bar Association (MBA) are constantly ringing. Last year over 36,000 calls resulted in 12,000 referrals to attorneys.

Since the majority of callers didn't need the services of a lawyer, a resource directory was developed in response to the needs of the consumers.

The directory, containing a comprehensive listing of both legal and nonlegal agencies and institutions, was compiled by the MBA Lawyer Referral Service and WBZ's Call for Action.

The directory contains 21 section categories ranging from business and financial aid to welfare. The agency index lists over 360 agencies and the subject index covers over 600 topics.

The directory will be updated constantly to maintain the value of the information.

The Lawyer Referral Service encourages persons who think they have a legal problem, and do not now have an attorney, to call the Massachusetts Bar Association.

In addition, for citizens who need information about agencies or help cutting through red tape, the Lawyer Referral Service telephone number is 523-0595.

Booth reservations being taken for Harvest Fair

Newton's Annual Fall Harvest Fair will be held on the Newton Centre Green on Saturday, Oct. 7, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Reservations are now being taken for booth space at the Fair. Booth fees range from $10 for Newton craftspeople and $15 to non-Newton craftspeople. There will be no charge for nonprofit organizations who plan to operate booths. To reserve booths, send pertinent information to the Harvest Fair Committee, care of the Newton Recreation Department, 70 Crescent St., Auburndale Ma 02166.

Judy Posner and Nina Harper, cochairmen, have designated Oct. 7 an all-Newton Day, and hope that local organizations will take this opportunity to participate in the Harvest Fair and publicize their fall programs.

Jobs available at Fish & Wildlife

There are six job openings available under the Young Adult Conservation Corps Program (YACC) at the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, One Gateway Center, Newton Corner.

People are needed to be mail room clerks, general office helpers, and clerk-typists.

Those eligible for participation in the YACC program will be unemployed youths 16 through 23 years of age.

Youths must give assurances that they have not left school for the purpose of entering the corps, if they are between the ages of 16 through 18.

For information, contact the Department of Employment Security, 264 Centre St., Newton Corner.

Riding lessons given at Ponkapoag Center

The YMCA Ponkapoag Outdoor Center will be starting its sixth season of horseback riding programs on Sept. 11 with small group instruction for beginner and experienced riders.

Located at the MDC Blue Hills Reservation in Canton (Route 128, exit 65), the center uses two outdoor riding rings in addition to the miles of Reservation trails.

There are several different programs offered by the Y. Weekly daytime and evening classes for adults and afternoon lessons for 10 - 15-year-olds are available at the 10-horse stable. For those who don't want to take the whole series of lessons, there are riding clinics and residential youth camps on weekends.

Horse care is an important part of the riding program. Learning how to groom and saddle are included in the riding activities.

Registration is necessary for all the programs. Information may be obtained by calling the Ponkapoag Outdoor Center at 696-4520.

Tuesday bus service for senior citizens resumes Sept. 12

The Tuesday transportation program which provides free rides for senior citizens to medical appointments in Newton and rides to necessary social service appointments will resume on Tuesday, Sept. 12.

Senior citizens who wish to obtain Tuesday rides should call Robert Bardsley at the Department of Human Services at 552-7170 between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. As rides can only be given on a space-available basis, senior citizens should call to make reservations at least 48 hours in advance.

Howard J. Lipton, director of Human Services, encourages senior citizens to schedule medical, dental and social service appointments on Tuesdays, when possible, to take advantage of the transportation service.

The Tuesday transportation program is coordinated by the Department of Human Services and the Council on Aging in conjunction with the Newton Recreation Department.

Intervention in Cambodia?

Sen. George McGovern's proposal for an international military force in Cambodia to try to halt the mass killings there seems a million light years away from his one-time vehement opposition to U.S. involvement in Vietnam. There is, of course, a considerable difference.

An international force would not take sides as did the United States. But an international force, to be effective, must be essentially accepted by both sides of a conflict as a means of saving face. In other words, the combatants must really want peace. That does not yet seem to be the situation in Cambodia.

Atrocities against Cambodian people have apparently come from two sources. The most serious have come from Cambodians themselves, the relatively new Communists acted when they first gained power. One method to insure allegiance is terror, punishment for the slightest deviation and wiping out of any oppositionists.

The forced evacuations of the cities, re-education camps from which few return, slaughter of the weak and dissident are all part of the program. Vietnam, under Communist rule, may have been almost as brutal toward the South Vietnamese.

The second disaster for the Cambodians is the Vietnamese. There are border squabbles, raids and mini-invasions. No village is secure. Vietnam's leadership in Hanoi apparently fears an unfriendly Cambodia on its flank, a Cambodia that might be closer aligned to the giant in the north, China, from which Vietnam has kept its distance.

But could a peace-keeping force do anything to halt the slaughter? At this time it seems doubtful. U.S. officials at least understand the quagmire of Indochina. There is reason to doubt that there would by many volunteers for such a force, especially in Asia where there should be the most concern. Non-Communist Asians would probably prefer to let the fighting go on as long as they kept aloof.

The horror stories coming out of Cambodia via desperate refugees tend to discredit the one-time portrayal of Cambodians as gentle, singing, soft-spoken people who just want to be left alone to raise rice, smoke opium and look beautiful. Currently, there seems little chance of appealing to the better nature of either Cambodian or Vietnamese Communists.

Rather than a peace-keeping force, the United Nations might try to send a mediating team. But at this juncture the chances of success appear slim.

Senate race destroys State GOP

By J.J. Smith, state columnist

When the personal troubles of junior United States Senator Edward W. Brooke surfaced earlier this year, Bay State politicians in both major parties smelled blood and figured that, finally, the nation's only black senator was vulnerable.

In the minds of most observers, Senator Brooke is struggling for survival politically. Oddly enough, the paradox is that his fight is tougher in some respects in his won GOP primary September 19 than it looms in the November 7 statewide election.

Former Boston radio talkmaster Avi Nelson, a man of lofty moral tones when vocalizing on the airways, is the Repulican now seeking to unseat the nation's highest elected black official. Nelson, accused often of being a racist by some of his radio listeners, sparked a massive cross-over campaign that lured some 12,000 diehard anti-busing Democrats to switch registrations so they could vote for him in the GOP primary.

Senator Brooke, obviously, has tried through necessity to do likewise and, while a late started, see starter, seems to have largely negated Nelson's vote gain through this ploy with his own cross-over campaign. Interestingly enough, the big losers in this strategy for the Republican primary are two Democrats — gubernatorial candidate Edward J. King and Boston City Councillor Albert L. (Dapper) O'Neil, candidate for sheriff of Suffolk County.

Ed King, a conservative with compelling financial credentials, is the ex-boss of Massachusetts Port Authority and the former head of the New England Council. Dapper O'Neil, despite his detractors is a beloved guardian of the "little people's" rights. Each man will lose the 10,000-odd Boston conservative cross-overs lured from Democratic inner city strongholds by Nelson's strategy. The magnitude of this loss to King and O'Neill (these were almost cinch votes for each) may be appreciated when one realizes that Endicott (Chub) Peabody defeated incumbent GOP Governor John A. Volpe by a mere 5,324 votes in the 1962 election.

Nelson's effort for cross-overs was successful until largely negated by Brooke's counter-strategy. The core of Nelson's strength, of course, lies among GOP conservatives, and among Democrats primarily upset by forced busing and affirmative action programs.

The perception that Brooke can be beaten is still there, but many acute followers of the political scene feel that, barring some late bomb-shell, he has hit the nadir and started back up.

As mentioned above, Avi Nelson as a talkmaster set high moral tones for all politicians, and held them to standards far above the rest of us mere mortals. Left unexplained, until the stories broke in the Boston news media, were two background incidents that protrayed Nelson more as a man on the make than a man with a mission.

A few weeks ago, a U.S. Post Office official said flatly that a 1972 mailing designed to elect Avi Nelson to Congress was "outright fraud." Subsequently, higher-ups over-ruled that official and said that the fraudulent mailing wasn't criminal in nature. Of course the man that fraud was directed against, Martin Linsky, who defeated Nelson in that 1972 primary, felt it not only fraudulent but "a deliberate attempt to deceive the primary voters. (The ploy failed....Linsky won that fight.)

Then, of course, there was the disclosure in August 1976 in the Boston Globe that Avi Nelson and his wife, Laura, were involved in the commodity options scheme, a sophisticated and unregulated form of speculation in which many individuals lost money. Laura Nelson was listed as president of The London Commodity House of Boston, Inc., and, the story alleged, Avi was acting in a co-managerial capacity.

No final resolution of the serious charges made against the Nelson's firm resulted because it finally closed its doors about the time the commodity options racket was making headlines from coast to coast. Nonetheless, the operation of the commodity house failed to emulate the high moral recommendations and pronouncements made on the air by Avi Nelson to those troubled days.

Nelson, of course, repudiated even the conservative chieftains in GOP ranks when he decided to challenge Brooke. Party leaders felt, and rightly, that vast sections of America would consider it a reflection upon the Republican party if Brooke were rejected in the September primary. Senior Republicans are not alone their belief that Brooke's defeat in either the September primary or November election would doom the two-party system in Massachusetts.

The irony is that Nelson's conservative support is too narrowly based to permit him to win in November, although he's trying to shed that conservative label by describing himself as a moderate and embracing doctrines espoused by the late John F. Kennedys, that's a whole new moral tone entirely, entitled "anything to win."

Better late than never, George

WASHINGTON — It was like reading that Barry Goldwater had defected to Communist China, or hearing that Madalyn Murray O'Hair had seen the light and become a born-again Christian, or being told that former Marine Corps Commandant Gen. Lewis Walt had grown shoulder-length hair, donned love beads, and burned all his Vietnam medals. But there it was in black and white, in a four-column story in the Washington Post headlined: "McGovern Backs Anti-Cambodia Action."

McGovern? George McGovern, the Democratic senator from South Dakota? Yep, the same guy.

It seems that during a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee hearing, McGovern had suggested the possibility of assembling an international military force — excluding U.S. troops — to stop the genocide being committed by the 1 communists in Cambodia. Noting that this carnage makes Hitler's mass murder of Jews look "tame" by comparison, the senator asked Robert Oakley, the deputy assistant secretary of state:

"Do we sit on the sidelines and watch a population . . slaughtered, or do we marshal military force and put an end to it?"

The State Department quickly threw cold water on McGovern's idea. Within 24 hours, press spokesman Tom Reston declared:

"The United States does not intend to initiate an effort to resolve the terrible human rights situation in Cambodia by military force." He said: "Although the United States has no means of direct influence in Cambodia, we will continue to do everything in our power through consultations with other governments, through efforts at the United Nations (Note: Reston obviously has a droll sense of humor) and in other international forums, to focus international attention on the inhuman situation in Kampuchea in order to seek an end to the monstrous human rights violations there."

So what is one to make of all this? Well, first there are the obvious ironies. In February 1975, when he was lobbying hard for $222 million in military aid to help the pro-Western government of Cambodia resist the communist onslaught, President Ford asked an almost-identical should-we-just-sit-on-the-sidelines-and-watch-the-slaughter . . ype of question. In a message to Congress, Ford said:

'Thiuestion that must be faced squarely. Are we to deliberately abandon a small country in the midst of a life-and-death struggle? Is the United States, which so far has consistently stood by its friends through the most difficult of times, now to condemn, in effect, a small Asian nation totally dependent upon us?"

The answer, from a sufficient majority in Congress to defeat this aid request — a majority that included George McGovern — was a resounding "Yes!" McGovern said the Cambodian people would be "better off" without more U.S. military aid, and that they could work out political arrangements "in their own way." We all know what happened. Cambodia was swiftly lost to the communists, and the genocide McGovern now deplores ensued.

Although he was originally a hawk ("With increased inputs of military power, I now feel that a military victory of sorts might be possible" — U.S. News and World Report, Jan. 3, 1966), McGovern built his political career opposing increased U.S. military inputs in Vietnam and anywhere else in Indochina where people sought to oppose communist aggression.

In April 1975, when President Ford moved to save some . . 50,000 South Vietnamese from communism after the fall of Saigon, McGovern viciously assailed this rescue operation, calling it the "final blunder" of the Vietnam War. The senator said that it would be "in the best interest" — although he didn't say how — of those who had fled communism if they would return to their communist-captured country. Sixty percent of these 50,000 refugees were children.

Big is better in government

By RICHARD BULLWINKLE

Next year will see the Massachusetts Legislature with one-third fewer members. This reduction was conceived under the guise of economy and efficiency in government.

What really happened is that representative government has become almost too costly for a person in modest financial circumstances to be a candidate. At the same time, the size of a district has been increased to such a degree that a state representative without paid staff finds the task of serving his constituents monumental.

The reduction will, if it hasn't already done so, create an elitist position of the representatives' role.

It will certainly be much easier for lobbyists to have their persuasive positions presented to this smaller law-making body, and control of critical legislation can be accomplished with fewer numbers.

Part of the problem at the Legislature is that better than 60 percent of past bodies were made up of people who were lawyers and insurance men and considered it a part-time venture at most.

Very few members derived their sole income as legislators because the pay was, and is, so low.

Until the pay scale is set at a level sufficient to attract more qualified candidates and until staff and resources are equitably distributed among all members, not just a favored few, the quality of the Great and General Court will be uneven.

This reduction in the House has moved government further from the people. The operative term in discussing what has happened is "control."

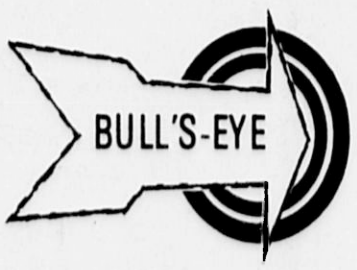

Control of the voting fabric, instead of sharp and defined shapes and colors in its makeup, has been blended, blurred and absorbed into larger controlling interests.

The voters' role is to elect those who will represent them, and if those sitting are inadequate, inefficient or worse, then it is their responsibility to purge those members. Reducing the size of the House does not abrogate that responsibility. .

To take the argument of reduction to absurdity, why couldn't the United States Senate and House of Representatives each have only a single member from the Bay State? Don't laugh. There is action in both bodies attempting to tinker with these numbers.

Which brings me to the local level, Newton city government. Alderman Ethel Sheehan, once again with feeling, is suggesting that our legislative body, the Board of Aldermen, be reduced by one-third or one alderman-at-large from each ward.

The reasons cited are the unwieldy size of 24 members, the lack of accountability of some members who seem not to take part in the work, and economy.

Politics takes many forms, some healthy, some not so healthy.

Spirited public debate of many divergent interests and areas, carried on in a public forum, in my opinion, is one of the strongest arguments for representative government.

All views get presented, and that diversity is a strength.

Think how insidious government might become if all those sharply variant shades and hues of a society's conscience and opinion were suddenly blended into a bland blob that stood for very little. Arguments would come as to degree, not differences.

And who is asking for this reduction in the size of the Board. The people? What people? All the years I've campaigned in this community I've never heard this concept advanced.

I have heard that because of the large size of the Board not every voter is aware of every candidate's qualifications. But one of the electorate's responsibilities in a free society is to know for whom they are voting.

I believe the Board should be unpaid because serving on it is a public service. This is not to say the Board is unworthy of pay.

Paid or unpaid, the Board puts in long, arduous hours on very complex items. Being an alderman is a unique education.

Representative government should be responsive, sensitive and responsible to those it seeks to serve, and its makeup should reflect the community.

A few parting thoughts relative to government's costs — When the Board of Aldermen undertook the latest increase for the mayor and Board, a nine-member, cross-section panel of citizens was chosen to deliberate that action over a few months.

To acquire a new public works director (without any long or deep citizen input), the Board is seeking $40,000, more than the mayor earns.

I wonder if anybody thought to sit down with any of the contractors living and working in the city who may have an insight into what and whom should be sought.

I know that when data processing or insurance or systems analysis assistance was required by the city, citizen help was sought and acquired quickly.

Maybe that might help here. Richard Bullwinkle is a former West Newton alderman.

'Considerate people'

To the Editor:

I hope that you print this letter because it concerns some very considerate people in Newton who care a lot about kids.

When I qualified in the 100-meter hurdles for the National Junior Olympics back in July, I tried to find sponsors to help pay my expenses. The Junior Olympics were to be held in August at Lincoln, Neb., and I would have to be there at least four days. It would cost a lot.

As time went on I was disappointed to find that many organizations preferred to sponsor groups rather than individuals. I began to wonder if I would be able to go.

It was then that I met Representative Joe DeNucci, someone who is genuinely interested in kids. He put me in touch with several service organizations and stuck with me until I had received enough funds to meet my expenses.

I received generous donations from the Nonantum Childrens Christmas Association, American Legion Post 440, The Newton Elks Lodge 1327, the Cousens Fund, the Newton Rotary Club and one of its members, Mr. George Goodman.

Thanks to these people I was able to cover my travel and living expenses. The National Junior Olympics was an experience I was lucky to have. I hope that this letter helps people realize how important it is for kids who demonstrate a special talent to know that the public is interested enough to support them.

Hopefully other Newton kids will have the chance to participate in similar events because people are willing to help.

Role of blacks in Colonial history told in new book by Newton man

A book on black history in Plymouth should soon be available for schoolchildren.

Educator Robert C. Hayden of Newton recently contracted with Parting Ways, The Museum of Afro-American Ethnohistory, Inc., to produce the narrative.

The volume will be entitled "Parting Ways," after the location of the black settlement, which was near a crossroads from which roads led to Plympton, Kingston, and Plymouth Center.

Covering the period from the founding of Plymouth through the present, the book will describe the role of Afro-Americans in Plymouth's history and culture; describe the connections between Parting Ways, West Africa, and the West Indies; show the interdependence of blacks and whites during the Colonial period; demonstrate the strength of the black family both in and out of slavery; and tell of the aspects of African culture which survived in America despite the forced removal of blacks from their African homelands.

Robert Hayden

Hayden is a project manager at the Education Development Center in Newton and was formerly executive director of Metco in Boston. His writings include "Black in America," "Seven Black American Scientists," "Eight Black American Inventors," and "Nine Black American Doctors."

Hayden will donate royalties from the book toward establishing an Afro-American museum at the site in Plymouth where four freed black soldiers settled after the Revolutionary War.

Mofenson lauded by teachers' group

The Massachusetts Teachers Association recently issued a statement praising Representative David J. Mofenson for his "strong support of legislation affecting education and teachers."

William H. Hebert, executive director-treasurer, and John M. Sullivan, associate executive director for government and community affairs wrote, "On behalf of more than 65,000 teachers and administrators in the schools of the Commonwealth, we thank you for the support you have given to education and to teachers while serving as a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives."

The MTA singled out Mofenson's role in maintaining the fiscal autonomy of school committees, confirming teacher protection under the tenure statutes, clarifying the agency fee law, renewing final and binding arbitration for police and firefighters, maintaining local post-secondary vocational education programs, and defeating a levy limit on local control (tax cap).

NSO thanks Newton

To the Editor:

The Newton Symphony Orchestra would like to take this opportunity to welcome subscribers and friends, old and new, to our 1978-1979 concert season. Our 13th year promises to be one of exciting programs, the finest performances, and superb guest artists, within easy reach of all, at Meadowbrook Junior High School.

We would like to thank at this time Mayor Theodore Mann and the many Newton residents who contributed so much to the tremendous success of our benefit pops concert last May 31. We are also delighted that through the cooperation of the music department of the Newton Public Schools, the performance of Paul Michael Glaser, narrating Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals" and Copeland's "Lincoln's Portrait," was videotaped for the lasting musical enjoyment and education of students in the Newton school system.

In the coming season, the Newton Symphony Orchestra will perform Dec. 3, Feb. 4, Mar. 18, and April 29. Music lovers can call 965-2555 for ticket and program information.

Two face car theft charges; two others charged with attempt

Two men were charged with larceny of a motor vehicle Sunday morning in Newton Centre, and two other men were charged with attempted car theft early Saturday morning at Four Corners.

Officer Harold Hollie spotted a Cadillac going the wrong way on Langley Road in Newton Centre at about 4 a.m. Sunday.

The driver of the car refused to stop for him, and sped down Centre Street, onto Commonwealth Avenue where it hit a city bench, and onto Homer Street where it struck a utility pole.

The car stopped a short distance later on Homer Street. In the trunk of the car was found a .22 caliber rifle.

Keith E. Joyce, 23, of 28 St. Paul St., Brookline, was charged with larceny of a motor vehicle, operating under the influe nce of liquor, and unlawful possession of a firearm.

Angelo Christodoulo, 22, of 32 Madison Ave., Newtonville, a passenger in the car, was also charged with larceny of a motor hicle, and unlawful possession of a firearm.

Sgt. Robert Greeley and Officer George Macnair were parked in front of South Pacific Restaurant in Four Corners Saturday morning when they saw two suspicious men near a car in front of a travel agency.

Police allege the men forced a coathanger into the vent window of a 1973 Chevrolet Blazer.

Charged with attempted larceny of a motor vehicle were James G. Flynn, 20, of 12 Priscilla Rd., Medway, and Daniel W. DiRusso, 20, of 976 Walnut St., Newton Highlands.

Sen. Brooke wants 1980 Olympics moved from Russia

Sen. Edward W. Brooke recently joined in signing a petition urging the removal from Moscow of the 1980 Olympics.

Citing Soviet trials of dissidents, including Anatoly Shcharansky, Ida Nudel, Mariya and Vladimir Slepak, the senator said "It would be contradictory to the spirit of the Olympics to hold them in a country whose government has shown anew the contempt it has for basic human dignity.

"The trials of the past several months indicate that under the facade of supposed 'liberalization' lies the callous disregard for human rights that created the Gulag Archipelago," he said.

Brooke is a cosponsor of S. Res. 519, a resolution calling on the U.S. Olympic Committee to take action to seek a site for the 1980 Olympic games outside of the Soviet Union.

Travel

A FAIRYLAND COME TRUE! Malaysia, a land where Sultans still reign beneath swaying palms, delicately curving arches, fantastic oriental tracery. According to top travel agents this beautiful, exotic and unspoiled country is the destination to head for, before it is discovered by hordes of savvy travelers.

Where do travel agents travel?

Have you ever wondered what places a top travel agent might recommend to the traveler who's looking for a somewhat off-beat destination? Here are some suggestions for an unusual vacation.

One destination over which a top travel agent waxes ecstatic waves ecstatic is Malaysia. It is still exciting and unspoiled, in an age when too many past-paradises are fast becoming commercial! The hotels are truly luxurious and the cuisine marvellous.

At the same time, a visit to Malaysia is an excellent opportunity to see and experience a vastly different culture and lifestyle. There is a plethora of things to see: fascinating temples and mosques, rubber plantations and tin mines.

One can glimpse the equipage of a Sultan while casually strolling in the street, and watch barbers performing by the riverside or Indians telling fortunes with cards squatting on their mats.

Another place recommended for the curious voyager, who doesn't mind vacationing in a somewhat less-than-deluxe fashion, is Cuba.

Having just returned from the first travel agent trip to Cuba since the revolution, one agent is most enthusiastic about this island, so long off-limits to the American traveler.

Scenically, Cuba is a typical Caribbean island with a Latin culture. It has beautiful beaches, clear blue seas, and fabulous weather, at lower prices in high season then you can find anywhere else in this sun-drenched area.

If you're old enough to remember Cuba in the pre-Castro days, the new Havana may be something of a disappointment to you, though fascinating and exciting nonetheless, in a totally different way.

Club Med, the vast complex of resort villages as summer camps for sophisticated adults, rates high marks as a unique vacation.

Couples and singles, the young and the young-at-heart: all are equally welcome. The latest addition to this international resort phenomenon is located in the Bahamas, on Paradise Idland, which is just as idyllic as its name implies.

Sound exciting? Or perhaps, you'd rather visit Cuozumel or Grand Cayman Island? Or Israel? Or the Peoples' Republic of China? Or Alaska? Or any of 100,000 other places on the face of the globe?

Whatever your pleasure, and especially if you don't know just what you want turn to your expert travel agent for advice. . .

Back to school

Fink said this week he will address the climate of the schools and what is needed to sustain the initiative in education.

The superintendent will greet new teachers and staff at Day Junior High School Tuesday, Sept. 5, at 8:30 a.m.

After-school buses

School Committeeman Howard Spergel is heading the Transportation Committee which had its first meeting this summer to look into the needs of busing for after-school activities, such as sports and music.

Spergel's committee will meet again in the middle of September after members have had time to study the needs of students and methods of providing transportation.

Calendar

School will begin Thursday, Sept•7, at 8:45 a.m. for8elementary students, all 6535 400 which is tha fewer n last year. The 7244 secondary students, about 250 fewer than last year, will begin classes on different days.

Following are the secondary school schedules for Thursday, Friday, and Monday, Sept. 7, 8, and 11:

Newton North High School: Thursday, sophomores only, 8:15 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.; Friday and Monday, all grades, 8:15 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Newton South High School: Thursday, sophomores only, 8 a.m. to 2:35 p.m.; Friday, sophomores only, 8 a.m. to 1:50; Monday, all grades, 8 a.m. to 2:35 p.m.

Bigelow Junior High School: Thursday, grade 7, report at 8:25 a.m.; Friday, grades 8 and 9, report at 8:25 a.m.; Monday ' all grades, report at 8:25 a.m.

Day Junior High School: Thursday, grade 7, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.; Friday, grade 8 report at 9 a.m., grade 9 report at 12:30 p.m.; Monday, all grades report at 8:30 a.m.

Meadowbrook Junior High School: Thursday, grade 7, 8:45 to 11:20 a.m.; Friday, grades 8 and 9, 8:45 to 11:25 a.m.; Monday, all grades, 8:45 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Warren Junior High School: Thursday, grade 7, 9 a.m. to noon, grades 8 and 9, 1 to 2:20 p.m.; Friday and Monday, all students report at 8:30 a.m.

Weeks Junior High School: Thursday, grade 7, 8:10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.; Friday, grade 8, 8:10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.; Monday, all grades, 8:10 a.m. to 2:25 p.m.

Holidays

The first no-school day will be Monday, Oct. 2, Jewish New Year, followed by Monday, Oct. 9, Columbus Day; and Wednesday, Oct. 11, Yom Kippur.

Thanksgiving recess starts at noon Thursday, Nov. 23, and school resumes the following Monday.

Christmas vacation starts at the close of school Friday, Dec. 22, and school resumes Tuesday, Jan. 2.

Martin Luther King Day is Monday, Jan. 15, and winter vacation is the week of Feb. 19 to 23.

Good Friday is April 13, and the week following is spring vacation.

Memorial Day is Monday, May 28.

School will be closed Monday, May 28, for the celebration of Memorial Day.

The last day of school is scheduled for Tuesday, June 26.

There are five extra days of school scheduled. If less than five snow days are used, school will get out earlier. If there are more snow days used, the School Committee said it would extend school to Friday, June 29, if necessary.

Tax rate

ly planned as a closed meeting. That decision was reconsidered in light of the state's open meeting law.

The figures presented by the mayor last week for financial items pending, which will have to be paid for during fiscal 1979, were more than $500,000 higher than the supplementary budget request presented only a week or so earlier.

The earlier supplementary budget request of $2.3 million included money for collective bargaining "and contingency," Blue Cross-Blue Shield, street renovation, and school maintenance.

The new list asks that new taxes be raised to cover many items that in past years would have been paid or bought from "free cash," which this year amounts to $720,000. Another $1.8 million will be collected during the year, but cannot be spent as it comes in.

After the tax rate is set, the "free cash," or what is left of it, cannot be spent until it has been recalculated. Recalculation by state law cannot take place until March 31, except in cases of health and safety emergencies.

The Board of Aldermen must decide how much, if any, of the free cash to divert toward keeping taxes down, but first the mayor must propose a specific figure. Some years, the Board has left only $300,000 or $400,000, but this year mayoral assistant Jane Pitt said she wants to keep a "healthy surplus position."

Some aldermen at the meeting cast about for ways to reduce the $5 tax rate increase by using a large portion of the free cash and hoping for large turnbacks from departments.

But Acting Public Works Commissioner Charles Thomas warned that there would not be a large turnback from his department, where most unspent money would be counted on to come from.

Ald. Richard McGrath takes issue with the notion held by some department heads that if they are able to scrimp on one account, they should be allowed by the Board to transfer the unspent money to a different account to pay for something not budgeted.

McGrath believes that if money is not spent on, for example, a new truck, it should be returned to surplus rather than transfer it to a different account and spend it.

Any tax rate arrived at in Tuesday night's Board meeting will have to be submitted by the Board of Assessors to the state Department of Revenue for approval. There is usually a difference of only 20 to 40 cents per thousand between submitted and approved figures.

Ald. Mark White at the supper meeting noted that the tax rate will be going up $5 this year, when the city received the most money back from the state in at least five years, but last year the tax rate increase was minimal and the year before last was about what is projected for this year.

White said that it appeared to him that city expenses, not insufficient state funds, were to blame for the increase in taxes.

This year the net state return to the city was about $760,000 more than last year.

Mann replied that the projected 5 percent increase for city employees alone would mean $5 on the tax rate. Last year was the second year of two-year contracts for which money had already been provided.

After restating his disappointment with state reimbursements, the mayor added, "I'd blame the federal government for not curbing inflation, but there's no point in blaming somebody."

Bus schedules

Students taking the bus to school should be at the bus stops five minutes before the time listed for the first stop, Assistant Director of Support Services Jam8es Cameron said when releasing the bus schedules recently.

Afternoon bus stops are in the reverse of order of the morning ones. All students who live in the Day Junior High School area are close enough to walk.

Most elementary school students walk to school. Transportation is provided to some students at the following schools for safety reasons: Angier, Williams, Memorial-Spaulding, Countryside, Bowen, Burr, Ward, Hyde, and Underwood.

Following are the bus schedules for the secondary schools:

TEMPLE ISRAEL
The Membership Committee cordially invites individuals and families who are considering temple affiliation to an OPEN HOUSE
Wednesday, September 6, 1978
7:30 - 9:30 P.M.
★ Meet our new Senior Rabbi Bernard H. Mehlman; Associate Rabbi Ronne Friedman; Religious School Principal Lillian Beauvais; Cantor Murray E. Simon; Librarian WiltonWilton - and many other members of our professional staff.
★ Take a guided tour of our facilities, including the synagogue, religious school, auditorium, library, social hall, chapel, outdoor terrace and biblical garden.
As a Reform congregation, Temple Israel draws upon a reservoir of a rich and varied past. Open to rradition, we also encourage creative innovation.
Because Temple Israel is a large congregation, its dues structure is lower than that of many smaller congregations, and High Holy Day seats for the entire family as well as Hebrew and Religious School tuition are included with membership.
A sliding dues scale enables young families and single persons to participate fully in its programs.
This past spring, the Board of Trustees voted to reduce the cost of the first year of membership to one-half of the regular fee.
Registration is now taking place for Hebrew School, which begins September 7, and Religious School, which begins Sunday, September 10. The school office is open weekdays from 9:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M., and Mrs. Beauvais is available to speak with students and parents to discuss the curriculum, and to answer questions. Inquiries concerning membership may be directed to Mr. Bernard I. Pincus. Please call for an appointment.

Newton Centre physician to be featured in national magazines

Dr. Leonard J. Cibley of Newton Centre, senior obstetrician and gynecologist at the Waltham Hospital, will be featured in two articles dealing with the identification and treatment of vaginitis infections to be published in the August issue of Vogue and the October issue of McCalls.

Dr. Cibley recently presented two papers in Paris at a meeting of the International Society for the Study of Vulvar Diseases. At that meeting, he was accepted as a member of that society.

Dr. Leonard J. Cibley

Dr. Cibley lectures extensively throughout the country on the latest advancements, treatment and diagnosis of gynecological problems. His publications include articles in leading medical journals covering topics from surgical photography to sexuality and the mentally retarded.

As one of the leaders in the use of laser beam surgery in gynecology, Dr. Cibley produced and directed "CO2 Laser," a film that is being used as a teaching tool for gynecologists throughout the world.

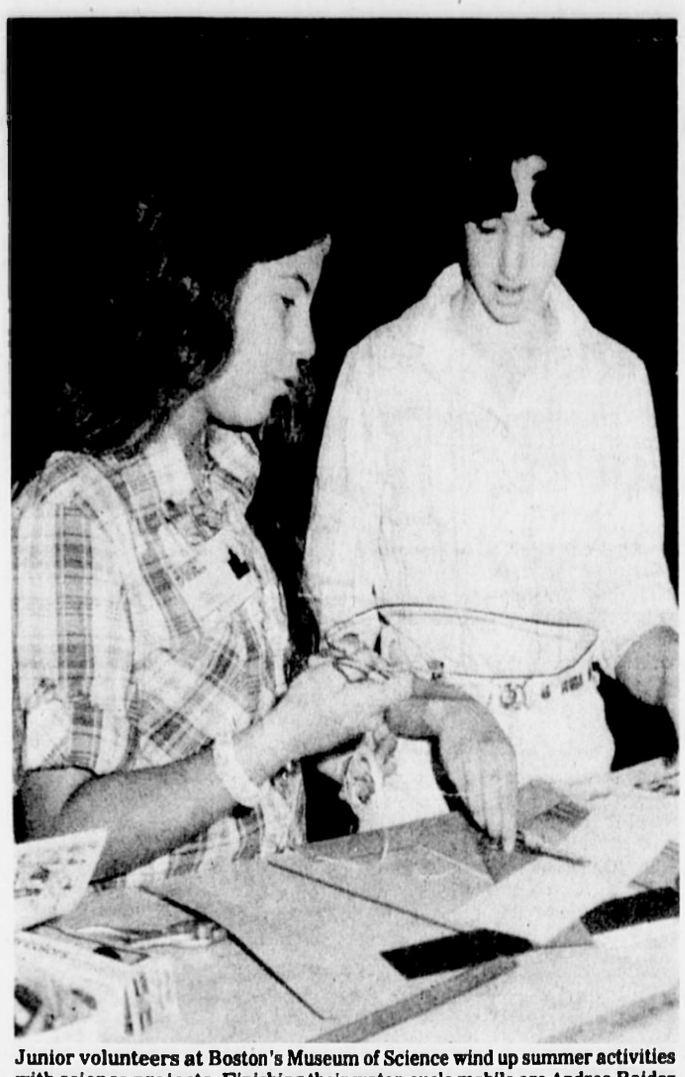

Dr. Cibley is well known in the field of colposcopy, the most modern method of detecting abnormalities such as cancer and pre-cancer conditions in the cervix. At Boston City Hospital, he is chief of colposcopy and chief of the dysplasia clinic.

Dr. Cibley is the assistant director of continuing medical education and associate professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the Boston University School of Medicine, as well as a lecturer at Harvard Medical School.

Racers sell Devine

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — The Indianapolis Racers said Tuesday they have sold left winger Kevin Devine outright to Binghamton of the American Hockey League.

Devine scored 19 goals and had 23 assists in 76 games for the World Hockey Association Racers.

Business briefs

Faye Goldstein of Newton has been elected to be a New England representative at the national White House Conference on Small Business, scheduled for January 1980. Delegates were chosen recently at a regional conference in Boston and will travel to Washington, D.C., at their own expense to formulate national policy regarding small businesses.

Robert B. Dannies Jr., formerly of Newton, has been promoted to vice president, trust division, at First National Bank of Boston. He is a graduate of Wesleyan University and joined the bank in 1966 as a management trainee.

Cynthia Q. Thorne, coordinator of admissions and financial aid at Newton-Wellesley Hospital School of Nursing, recently attended the 10th annual Institute in Financial Aid Administration. Sponsored by the College Board, the conference covered student needs, aid sources, and office management.

Patricia Hurley, director of student employment at Boston College, was a staff member at the above-mentioned Institute of Financial Aid Administration.

Selling the government

BY DONALD LAMBRO

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The federal government is spending at least $1 billion a year solely to promote, communicate and sell its programs and sometimes itself to the American people.

Each year, hundreds of millions of tax dollars are spent to run an "army" of nearly 20,000 public information and public affairs workers, moviemakers and broadcasters, writers, editors and advertising specialists. This army gets larger and more expensive every year.

Salaries for top government press officers — some of whom have been elevated to the rank of assistant secretary — now peak at $50,000 a year. Most make more than $30,000 a year.

Ernest Lotito, head of the Commerce Department's public information office, earns $47,500 a year and says, "I'd take the job if it paid $5,000 less."

Despite numerous audits and surveys, no one in the government knows precisely how much is being spent for all public information programs.

However, officials in several sectors of the government, including the Office of Management and Budget and the Civil Service Commission, privately maintain the annual cost is now between $1 billion and $1.5 billion.

The estimates include $500 million for audio-visual programs, over $200 million for advertising, and about $400 for all other public relations and public information programs, including the salaries of the employes to operate them.

While much of the government's public information function fulfills necessary and often vital educational and communication needs, a large proportion of it appears extravagant or unnecessary.

Literally hundreds of "news" releases are issued daily to promote statements and speeches by agency officials. Costly exhibits are placed in federal office buildings displaying larger-than-life pictures of department and agency heads.

Agencies are providing news broadcasts and voice feeds to radio stations around the country, implementing expensive video-tape and playback systems, and running ambitious film and audio programs as well.

Virtually no agency of government, no matter how tiny it may be, is without a public relations program. Even President Carter's government reorganization task force, formed to cut waste from a "bloated" bureaucracy, has a press operation and regularly issues material touting its accomplishments.

The Defense Department has one of the largest public information and public relations forces in the government, costing more than $25 million a year (excluding advertising for recruitment). Within its operation is a press and public affairs staff of 316 persons in the Pentagon, plus more than 1,200 military and civilian workers scattered among the services and Defense agencies.

Despite its smaller size, the Department of Agriculture virtually matches Defense with a 1,000-worker information-media force costing $26 million a year.

USDA's information army includes 311 public information officers and specialists, 90 writer-editors, 50 general information officials, 19 illustrators, and 59 film specialists.

USDA writers turn out a mountain of material each year — everything from the annual USDA Yearbook (often used as a giveaway campaign item by members of Congress who get allotments of the book each year) to literature on "How to Grow Strawberries" and suburban lawn care.

The Health, Education and Welfare Department, Washington's largest department in terms of expenditures, has a "public affairs" staff of 459 whose salaries and activities cost $25.4 million a year.

The total includes 96 media information specialists, 57 writers who turn out speeches, articles and statements, 90 who work fulltime on HEW publications, plus 44 who handle film and broadcasting projects.

The Commerce Department, which surrounds many unrelated agencies like the U.S. Travel Service and the Census Bureau, has a yearly public affairs budget of $5.6 million.

Commerce's Office of Public Affairs, serving just the office of the secretary, has 20 employes and a budget of nearly $800,000.

Learn English, typing drawing in Newton Continuing Education

Registration for evening classes in Newton Continuing Education will take place at Newton North High School on Sept. 20 and 21, from 7 to 9 p.m. Nonresidents may register on Sept. 21 only.

These classes are open to anyone 16 years of age and older. Tuition for most courses is $15; driver education, typing and shorthand, and trade extension classes are more.

Newton senior citizens 65 years of age and over may take these classes free of charge. This includes classroom instruction in driver education, but not the behind-the-wheel instruction.

Students desiring to earn high school credits at evening school nust obtain approval from their local school authorities.

Brochures for Continuing Education may be obtained at the following locations: Newton North High School, Room 1565, Newton South High School main office; all branches of the Newton Free Library; and City Hall.

There are two 10-week semesters. The fall semester runs from October to December and the spring semester from March to May.

The following courses are offered:

Figure drawing, Thursday; French (Beginning), Thursday; home gardening, Thursday; interior decorating, Thursday; Italian (Beginning), Monday; math for advancement, Wednesday or Thursday; modern dance, Monday or Wednesday; oil painting, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday; opera adventures, Thursday; and social dancing, Tuesday.

Also Spanish (beginning), Monday; Spanish (intermediate), Wednesday; Yoga, Monday, Tuesday, or Thursday; creative drawing, Monday; English language skills, Tuesday; decoupage, Tuesday; enameling on copper, (Beginning), Wednesday; (Advanced),

, Monday; Driver Education, (classroom) Tuesday and Thursday; and Driver Education (behind-the-wheel).

Also, cake decorating, (beginning) Monday; (Advanced) Wednesday; crewel embroidery, Thursday; decorated ware, Tuesday; furniture refinishing, Wednesday or Thursday; draperies, Tuesday or Thursday; tailoring, Tuesday or Thursday; knitting and crocheting, Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday; sewing (beginning), Tuesday or Wednesday; and sewing (advanced), Monday or Thursday.

Business Courses

Computers, Monday; typewriting (beginning) Monday and Wednesday or Tuesday and Thursday; typewriting (intermediate) Monday and Wednesday; shorthand (beginning) Monday and Wednesday; office machines, Thursday; law for layman, Wednesday; fundamentals of investing, Monday; and shorthand transcription, Tuesday.

Shop Courses

Know your car, Thursday; auto shop, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday; auto body, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday; machine shop, Monday and Wednesday; cabinetmaking, any night, Monday-Thursday; and electricity for the handyman, Wednesday.

"English for the Foreign Born" is offered at three levels, beginning, intermediate and advanced level, no fee, Monday and Wednesday.

Apprentice training: enrollment in these classes is made only upon the referral of the State Department of Education. Students are required to spend 150 hours per year in related classes.

Classes on Tuesday and Thursday include bricklaying, carpentry, electric code, painting, plumbing and sheet metal.

Trade extension courses are given in electrical code and plumbing.

Registration for apprenticeship and trade extension takes place the night of the first meeting, Oct. 3.

For further information call the office, 552-7483 mornings, or evenings when classes are in session.

School lunches

Lunches begin Sept. 7 in secondary schools with "manager's choice." Menus for Friday, Sept. 8, through Friday, Sept. 15, will be printed in next week's Newton Graphic.

Elementary school lunches start Sept. 18.

Don't forget immunizations

If you've bought the new shoes, pencils, lunch bags and all the rest of the school paraphernalia, good.

But don't forget your children's immunizations.

For starting school, a child must have proof of having been immunized against diphtheria, pertussis (whooping cough), tetanus, polio and measles.

Dr. Carolyn Zavarine, Newton health commissioner, also advises that children be immunized against mumps and rubella (German measles).

Be sure, by consulting your family physician, that boosters are up to date for the immunizations your children have had and that they have had all that are required.

MBTA to permit student transfers

Students will be permitted to transfer between urban and suburban MBTA public transportation routes beginning Oct. 1.

The long-standing restriction against transfers between the "urban and suburban" divisions of the MBTA is a holdover from the pre-1964 days when the public transportation authority was the Metropolitan Transit Authority which covered 14 "urban" cities and towns, and private transportation companies handled buses in the other 65 "suburban" communities.

In proposing removal of student transfer restrictions, the MBTA Fare Policy Committee said that the artificial barrier on the use of student transfers constitutes an inconsistent and inequitable practice which complicates the fare structure ... and perpetuates a distinction between urban and suburban fare areas which no longer serves a meaningful purpose."

Shaw Prep School announces courses

George McDonough, acting headmaster of Shaw Prep in Back Bay, announced that registration for high school level classes has begun.

The Shaw Prep School, a private comprehensive high school, begins its 16th year of operation.

Courses are offered for college preparation, nurses schools, business and technical institutes, and art schools.

Shaw is located opposite the Prudential Center, and provides numerous educational services for students from many parts of the world, as well as the United States.

Information about registration can be obtained by calling 262-0383.

Mob infiltration in R.I. claimed by candidate

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Attorney general candidate Walter R. Stone says organized crime has a stranglehold in Rhode Island that begins within the state prison system.

Going against the wishes of Gov. J. Joseph Garrahy, Stone Tuesday made public his own copy of the 1,000-page transcript of Peterson Commission hearings into prison unrest of one year ago.

Stone served on the panel which Garrahy created to investigate the justification for a six-month maximum securty lockup.

Stone, a Democrat, said the documents, including sworn testimony from administrators, guards and inmates, should be the basis for a grand jury investigation into criminal activity within the prison. He promised one if elected.

He cited extortion, narcotics trafficking, assaults, and special treatment for a small number of inmates.

Police chief asks drivers, parents to do their part for child safety

Chief William F. Quinn announced that on school opening day, Sept. 7, his force will be supervising approximately 90 school crossings, with coverage at the following hours: 8:15-8:45 a.m., Monday-Friday; 11:15 a.m.-12:15 p.m., Monday-Friday; 11:15 a.m. -12 p.m., Tuesday and Thursday; 3-3:30 p.m., Monday-Friday.

"We appeal to all motorists to exercise extra caution as they drive during these hours," the chief said. "Pedestrian routes change, new and younger children are walking sidewalks and crossing many streets not previously used. School buses will be stopping and perhaps creating some vehicular tie-ups."

The chief added, "All motorists should be reminded that when a school bus stops, and has its flashing lights on, ALL TRAFFIC STOPS. The only exception is on a divided highway — Route 9, Boylston Street, Commonwealth Avenue, etc."

"This year we ask parents to familiarize their children with the routes the children will take to and from school. We have noticed children crossing busy streets at points away from supervised crossings, and in many instances crossing streets that have pedestrian control lights without using the lights or waiting for the 'walk' cycle," he said.

"We recommend that a parent or parents walk the route to and from school with their children, placing stress on driveways, crossings, and difficult areas and introducing their children to our police personnel. For those who walk to school, it is important that parents discuss with their children safety procedures while traveling to and from school. This might include the use of proper crossings, looking both ways before crossing any street, and staying on the sidewalk.

"On arrival at school in a car, please let children out of the car at the curb on the school side only. Always be sure car doors are closed before pulling away. We also recommend seat belts and car seats for infants. At dismissal time, please park on the school side of the street only. Avoid picking up children in the middle of the street. Bicycle-riding students should obey all traffic signs and signals and follow all the rules of the road as they apply to any vehicle."

The chief concluded, "This year, as in the past, our Department of Safety Services, with Lt. Charles Feeley and Safety Officers Robert Braceland, Paul Golden, and William Sheehan will work with the children in school on pedestrian, bicycle, and bus safety."

Free pamphlet on car pool safety

For many Newton parents a new school year brings the need to organize car pools. Methods to help make a car pool safe and worry-free are outlined in a pamphlet, "Car Pool Survival Tips."

Free copies of the pamphlet are now available at the Newton libraries or may be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: A Safe Ride for Every Child, 25 Margaret Rd., Newton Highlands, Ma 02161.

French and Spanish taught to children

Children of Newton are invited to enroll either in the Spanish or the French Saturday Schools which will resume their classes on Sept. 23 and Sept. 16.

Both schools are community service-oriented and cater to any child of four years and up of the Greater Boston area.

The principal goal of the schools is to expose their pupils to the Spanish and the French languages and cultures in their world wide context through a variety of activities and material.

For further information please call Dr. Day at 489-1240 after Sept. 6.

Boston Children's Theatre drama classes start Sept. 11

Registration in the Boston Children's Theatre's fall term of creative drama classes for children ages 8-17 will be held at the Boston Children's Theatre, 791 Hammond St., Chestnut Hill, Sept. 11-15 from 3 to 5 p.m.

Classes will begin the week of Sept. 18 and continue for 10 consecutive weeks. Classes are held after school on weekdays and on Saturdays for all levels. The material covered in the 10-week course will include pantomime, improvisation, speech and work on scenes.

The Children's Theatre opens its 28th season with a Chinese musical fairy tale, "The Wonderful Tang," opening Oct. 21, followed by "Hans Brinker," "The Hobbit," and "Beauty and the Beast." Performances are given on Saturdays and weekdays during school vacations at New England Life Hall. Subscriptions and group rates are now available.

For information write the Boston Children's Theatre or call 277-3277.

Lifetime Learning program expands this fall

Newton Community Schools, in collaboration with the Retired Seniors Volunteer Program, is expanding the Lifetime Learning program for senior citizens this fall.

A general registration and information meeting for this weekly program will be held at the Newton Community Service Center, 429 Cherry St., West Newton, at 10 a.m. Sept. 5. For those unable to attend, registration will also be accepted on Thursday, Sept. 7, at 10 a.m., and on Tuesday, Sept. 12, at 9 a.m., at the center.

The main thrust of the program is in academic areas such as archaeology, comparative religions, leading American authors, nutrition and world food problems.

Seminars will be led by lecturers and professors from local schools and universities. Included are Dr. Edward Josephsen, senior lecturer in the Department of Nutrition and Food Service at MIT, and Rev. Donald Thompson, retired Unitarian-Universalist minister.

The leaders in each of these areas and the group members will cooperatively develop content and method. Regular group sessions will start on Tuesday, Sept. 12, and will continue each succeeding Tuesday until Nov. 21.

One set of groups meets from 9:30-10:30 a.m.; the second set of groups meets from 11 a.m. to noon.

There is socializing and refreshments from 10:30-11 a.m. The fee for the semester is $5, which entitles enrollment in one or two groups.

Because of the enthusiastic approval which the program received last spring, Newton Community Schools feels encouraged to expand and to improve the Lifetime Learning Program.

As one participant, Irma Devore of Newtonville, said, "Lifetime Learning is stimulating. The worst thing about being retired is the feeling of uselessness. This program shows that we still have a spark of life."

Lifetime Learning is under the coordination of Dr. Edward Landy, chairman of the Newton Community Schools Commission.

BCON to host all-day old-time clambake

The Black Citizens of Newton (BCON) will host its third annual clambake on Saturday, Sept. 9, at the Newton Country Day School grounds, 785 Centre St.

The family social event will be from 1-8 p.m. and will include steamed clams, lobster, chicken, steak, and athletic contests and games.

All of BCON's friends are invited to attend. Call Bill Ramsey, 969-9647, for further information. Admission is $12.50.

BCON is organized to foster and defend the civil rights of its members and other black citizens in Newton, to work for the eradication of racism, prejudice and discrimination, and to advocate social changes which will allow its members and other Newton black citizens to live in peace, dignity, and harmony under their constitutional rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

"The English Gentleman"

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — An English gentleman decided to commit suicide. True to his class, recounts Maj. Douglas Sutherland, he got out the Game Book in which real sportsmen keep a record of everything they shoot and entered his own name under the category "various". Then he pulled the trigger.

Considering the circumstances, lesser men might have dispensed with this final formality, but Sutherland, who claims to inhabit one of the coldest castles in Scotland (gentlemen tend to disdain central heating), is not interested in them. His new book is confined strictly to the endangered species represented by the title, "The English Gentleman."

The casual reader, chuckling from anecdote to anecdote (when the Bath Club and the Conservative Club merged the result became known as the Lava-Tory) can't be blamed for suspecting Sutherland is more interested in good humor than good breeding. But the book was published by Debretts, whose guide to the peerage is the standard work on bluebloodstock, and the foreword is by the holder of a unique and ancient title, Sir Iain Moncreiffe of That Ilk.

Sir Iain, who knows many of them, offers the assurance that the English gentleman has not disappeared, as many think these egalitarian days. He is simply getting harder to find. Sutherland offers clues on how to recognize one, but it isn't always easy.

For example, a gentleman found walking in Picadilly in somewhat shabby clothes explained to a friend:

"It does not matter how I dress in London. Nobody here knows me."

Later the same friend visited him in the country and found him no better attired.

"It does not matter how I dress here," said the gentleman. "Everybody knows me."

Sutherland implies that those who consider the gentleman mildly anachronistic forget his real achievements, such as inventing "abroad."

"The gentleman ventured into Europe because he had to find something to do between the end of the foxhunting season and the beginning of the shooting seasons," he said. "Thus it came about that he pioneered golf at Le Touquet, gambling at Deauville and boar shooting in the Ardennes.

"It was because the hard weather made hunting impossible after Christmas that he invented the improbable sport of sliding down Swiss mountains precariously balanced on two narrow boards. All that is changed now. The Americans started the rot with their lavish tipping and their eccentric habits like not changing for dinner which has had the effect of raising the price and lowering the tone so far as the English gentleman is concerned."

Tenth district

She also favors the idea of a formulary of interchangeable drugs.

Harrington was in favor of the bill for displaced homemakers women who for whatever reason find themselves needing to work but untrained for today's job market.

The bill was enacted but never funded. Funding is needed to provide career counseling, job retraining and other support services.

Though she is categorized as a liberal, Joan Harrington would not parrot liberal views in her voting.

"I would listen to my constituents' views and unless they bothered my conscience, I would vote that way. You have to be true to yourself, though. But it would be my obligation to listen — a representative is one who listen as much as studies."

As a veteran of 15 years in other people's campaigns, Harrington has picked up considerable knowledge of issues outside the limited 10th district.

She is tremendously worried about the problem of disposing of nuclear waste, for example, and objects to expansion of nuclear power facilities until much more research has been done. She says, too, that nuclear power is not necessarily cheaper, when all other costs are taken into consideration.

Harrington is opposed to abortion personally, but would not vote for an amendment prohibiting use of public money for abortions. It would be like Prohibition, she feels, and lead to criminal activities.

William Stanley, 41, is a Waltham city councillor and finishing his first term as state representative.

He recognizes perhaps more than anyone else that his and DeNucci's points of view are close. But he points to somewhat unexpected votes by DeNucci — to decriminalize marijuana, for example — as instances in which DeNucci is inconsistent in his voting, perhaps because of unfamiliarity with the matter.

Stanley voted in favor of the bottle bill, which would have required deposits on beverage containers and reuse of bottles. DeNucci was opposed.

"People want somebody who not only does constituent service but also studies each measure and knows the consequences," Stanley said. The district requires "tremendous" constituent service, he said.

Stanley is on the Urban Affairs Committee and is greatly interested in housing, especially housing for the elderly. He feels that large housing projects for familes are not advisable and that leased housing scattered through an area is better because low-income families are not so easily identifiable.

"I'm not in love with Dukakis," Stanley said, "but he has put us on the right track financially." Now he wants to pursue better management of state finances.

He voted for giving the Welfare Department more money to go after welfare fraud and keep a tighter control on disbursements, but the measure was defeated. That vote took courage, Stanley said, because on the face of it, the vote appeared to be throwing good money after bad, when it was really a vote to try to encourage good management.

Stanley says one step toward a meaningful property tax reform might be a graduated income tax. "It's not a bad idea — the feds do it" he said. "It seems a fair way of doing things."

If elected, he will work again for raising the legal drinking age. He is the parent of teenagers and says he sees what problems drinking causes. He would also try locally to get better police enforcement of laws against public drinking.

Stanley gives the impression of carefully thinking out what he is going to say and how he makes decisions.

He is opposed to abortion for anybody and is Opposed to any proposal to use public money for abortion.

Joe DeNucci is one of those people who radiates a certain force as he walks through a crowd.

At a recent party for him in Waltham, he moved from guest to guest with ease, remembering names and patting the elderly people on the arm as he passed.

He spoke confidently to the gathering, outlining his feelings about health care, government, alcoholism, and a variety of other matters.

DeNucci, a member of the Public Safety and Health Committee, wants to institute sliding-scale fees for nursing homes, which now are reluctant to take Medicare patients because of the low fees allowed.

DeNucci is in favor of putting a cap on taxes, but not through Proposition 2 ½, which would not provide enough money. Better management and establishing priorities for the money available is the way to control spending, he says.

Judges and the courts come in for criticism from DeNucci. He feels that judges should be made accountable by a review process every few years. "The courts have too much say in how we run our life," he said.

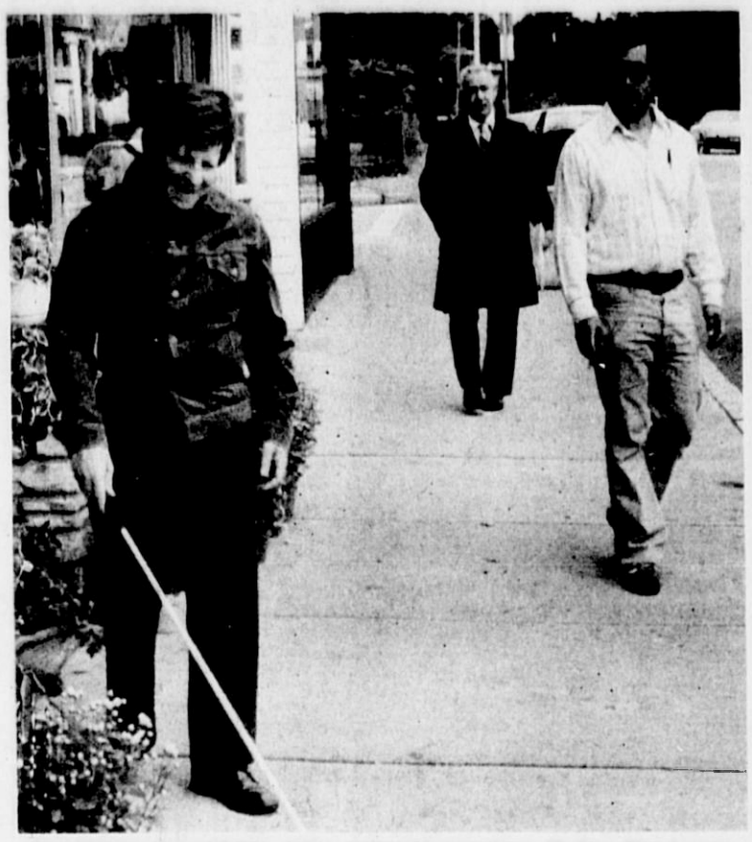

He is in favor of sunset legislation that would automatically end state programs unless they could be proved to be worthwhile.

The increased money given to cities and towns by the state this year was "intended to reduce the property tax," he said, "but that probably won't happen.

Alcholism among teenagers, with whom DeNucci is closely associated through his membership on the Newton Youth Commission and other youth activities, is a serious problem, he says. He would also vote to raise the drinking age if the matter comes before the Legislature again.

DeNucci is proud of his constituent service record of his two years in office. He spends a large majority of his time on constituent service.

DeNucci clearly loves being a state representative and the people clearly love DeNucci. Now 39, he spent 16 years working as a page and then an aide at the a State House. He seems to be have been born into politics.

Tony Sacco of Lexington (left) picks his way down Walnut Street near Newtonville Square under the watchful eye of mobility instructor Michael Scione (right) of the Carroll Center for the Blind.

Blind

when he leaves the center. For those who must learn to maneuver around a commercial area, Newton Corner, Newtonville, and Newton Centre are the training grounds.

In the three village centers, the wheelchair ramp can present problems to the blind, especially if the slope of the grading is too gentle, Scione said. The ramps are cut at a 45-degree angle to the apex of the curve, making it difficult for a blind person to determine the end of the sidewalk. Unkowingly, Scione said, he finds himself in the street crossing diagonally to the traffic — one of the most dangerous ways to cross a street.

Traffic in Newton and all through the Northeast makes life for the blind difficult, according to Scione. Red lights and stop signs are frequently ignored, he said.

The situation will become even worse, Scione predicts, if Massachusetts adopts a right turn on red light regulation. In other sections of the country where the regulation has been in effect for years, drivers must stop when a pedestrian is moving in the intersection, he said.

But in Massachusetts, where the driver reigns over the pedestrian, it will mean trouble for the blind, Scione said. With such a regulation, he said, a person will find himself crossing against two active lanes of traffic.

Although traffic in the Newton area creates a problem, there is at least public transportation and a lot of sidewalks, Scione said.

While Newton is fortunate to have public transportation, traveling within the city is hampered by long waits and the necessity for making several bus changes," Scione said. His complaint has been echoed by the city's youth street workers and by the executive director of Housing Services.

Sidewalks present a teaching problem in Newton. When a student is ready to leave the Carroll grounds, he moves to Boston College Law School, and then to residential streets. Finding a large enough area with sidewalks running four or five blocks east and west is a big problem for the mobility instructors, Ms. Berg said.

While Newton has its limitations for the blind, Scione and Ms. Berg do not believe a city should totally change the environment to suit the blind. For this reason, Scione feels lights with bells are unnecessary, except at dangerous crossings.

"The constant ringing is obnoxious," Scione said. A person having mastered mobility should be able to analyze the traffic to know when to cross, he said.

Teaching mobility is a profession. Both Berg and Scione came to the field through an interest in teaching. Both were classmates at Boston College's master's program in mobility instruction.

Ms. Berg only joined the Carroll staff in July. She also has previous experience working in Manhattan.

Scione has worked at Carroll for four years. Previously he worked in Connecticut and in New York City. Scione recalled being mugged during one of his mobility classes in Manhattan — just one of the snafus of working in New York. But that is another story.

In the 1950s, according to Mrs. Apgar, the DiCarlos won a nonconforming use for the south portion. The use was to store construction material, not junk. The city contends the current use is now different, and therefore a zoning violation, Mrs. Apgar said.

In the north portion, the DiCarlos lost a case several years ago thereby prohibiting them from using the section for commercial use. According to Mrs. Apgar, the DiCarlos' attorney promised this section would be cleared.

Whether or not the DiCarlo Brothers will be forced to raze a two-story garage is still questionable, Mrs. Apgar said. They do have a building permit for a three-car garage, she said. The legal question is whether a two-story building fits that category' she said.

Police sharpshooters capture five trophies in New England competition

The Newton Police Defensive Weapons Team, led by Sgt. Robert MacDougall and honorary captain Frederick Fraini, captured five trophies in the 46th Annual New England Police Revolver League Competition. Each man won individual awards, and the team won first place in Class II team competition.

The competition was held in North Attleboro for over 400 federal, state, county and municipal police officers or members of security forces.

Officer Frederick Fraini competed for the 25th year. In each year he has won an award by being in the "Top Ten."

Fraini, a 30-year veteran of the Police Department, first competed with the late Officer Joseph Smith and Retired Sgt. David Dalton, and with John F. Lovely and Joseph Greeley, each of whom were New England or national champions and were in demand for sharpshooting exhibitions throughout the New England states.

Sgt. Robert MacDougall has 11 years' service with the Newton Police after one year's service with the Dennis police. He captured two first-place and two second-place awards for National Match Course Rapid Firing at 25 and 50 yards.

Team captain Fraini, competing in a National Match Course, won a first-place award in rapid and slow firing, scoring 280 of 300 rounds, bringing Fraini's awards and trophies over 25 years to and even 150.

Officer Clifford Chaisson, a former military police officer and 10-year Newton police officer, also captured second place in a National Match at 25 and 50 yards for rapid and slow firing. Chaisson has competed four times previously and has placed second in this competition three times.

The fourth member of the team, Donald Claflin, a three-year Newton officer competing for the first time, placed second in a National Match.

Chief William Quinn said, "These men represented our department and acquitted themselves in fine fashion. We are proud of their accomplishments, but what is more important, they are maintaining a tradition of exceptionally qualified instructors in defensive weapons."

Chief Quinn added these men also check the ability of our gun permit holders.

Thompsonville agrees on improvement priorities

By LINDA FRITZ
G aphic correspondent

After several tries, the Thompsonville Advisory Committee was finally able last week to raise a quorum and pass its priorities for its community development program.

In the area of beautification, the committee wants to landscape Thompsonville's commercial district at Langley Road, Jackson Street, and Route 9. Improvements here will include the traffic island, known as Veterans' Park. For safety, short cement posts will be considered at the corner where Barrow's Custom Interiors is located.

Sidewalks and curbing are another priority. The committee wants them installed on Jackson Street, Madoc Street at Langley Road, and on Cypress Street near the Bowen School. . A one-lane road for Beecher Terrace is also on the committee's agenda. Removed from the list was Carlisle Street. The water department dug it up, and it should properly repair it, committee member Alderman Dominic Taglienti said. It should not need community development money, he said.

Improving the water pressure was the final priority item. It is especially low on Beecher Terrace, Co-Chairman Pamela Taglienti has said at an earlier meeting. It is so low that one has to coordinate all water uses, even flushing the toilet, she said.

The committee plans in the future to meet with Water Commissioner Paul Giunta. It also hopes to meet with members of the state Department of Public Works to look into possibility of solving the traffic problems at the jug handle on Route 9.

Bicyclist, two others injured in three automobile accidents

A Newton Centre boy was hurt Sunday when his bicycle was hit by a car. There were two other accidents over the weekend in which people were injured.

Mark C. Kiley, 14, of 78 Hamlet St., Newton Centre, was taken to Newton-Wellesley Hospital after his bicycle was hit by a car in front of 268 Jackson Rd., Newton' at 5:15 p.m. Sunday.

Martin A. Kumins, 32, of 146 Edgemere Rd., West Roxbury, was driving the car that hit Kiley and . was cited for operating to endanger and operating left of center.

A pedestrian was hurt Sunday night in front of Li'l Peach on Washington Street, Newton, after she reportedly ran into traffic.

According to police reports, Helen C. Davis, 26, of Barton Road, Wellesley, was hurt when she ran into the street at about 11 p.m. The driver of the car, Richard E. Tobin of Mendon, N.Y., was not charged.

A Newton man was cited for eight counts of violations of motor vehicle laws following a chase through Waltham and Newton early Monday morning.

Daniel J. Moody, 17, of 81 West St., Newton, was cited for operating under the influence of liquor, speeding, and driving on the wrong side of the road after his car allegedly sideswiped an oncoming car on Waltham Street.

According to reports, Waltham police were chasing the car driven by Moody when it crossed into Newton on Lexington Street. The car wove around several side streets, back into Waltham, back into Newton, and allegedly hit a stone wall on property at 195 Waltham St., belonging to Lawrence Marino.

Mary A. Richard, 56, of 91 Howard St., Waltham, was shaken up after the accident in which her car was hit. .

A passenger in the car driven by Moody, Robert Fulton, 27, of 173 Davis Ave., Brookline, was treated for an injury to his left eye.

Here's what happens when you take aluminum to Reynolds

Local residents can help save energy and resources and earn some extra money by participating in the first step of the aluminum recycling process.

The Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Company's permanent recycling facility at 50 Tower Rd., Upper Falls, is open Tuesdays through Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. to pay consumers 17 cents a pound for their used aluminum.

"At the recycling center, the aluminum is inspected and weighed," according to E.J. Kelly, Reynolds district manager, "and the recycler is paid 17 cents a pound, on the spot." The aluminum is then run over magnetic separators, compacted and blown into trailer trucks capable of transporting 18,000 pounds of the metal at a time.

The aluminum is trucked to plants and shredded into popcorn-size chips to remove moisture and make the load denser. The chips are shipped to a smelting plant in Alabama or Virginia, where they are melted.

Molten aluminum is tapped from the furnace and poured into large ingot molds, which are transported to fabricating plants, rolled into sheet and manufactured into new aluminum cans or other aluminum products.

Recycling aluminum in this way saves 95 percent of the energy used in its original production. Aluminum does not deteriorate and can be recycled again and again.

One problem recyclers often face is correctly identifying aluminum cans. Aluminum cans are lightweight, with rounded, shiny bottoms. The most reliable way to identify an aluminum can is to put a magnet on the side of the can. If the magnet does not stick, the can is a valuable aluminum one.

Other recyclable aluminum items include clean foil, frozen food trays, pieplates and snack containers. Aluminum items such as siding, gutters, storm door and window frames and lawn furniture tubing are worth 17 cents a pound if all non-aluminum parts are removed, the aluminum is cut into lengths not exceeding three feet, and it is not mixed with cans.

Posters illustrating the aluminum recycling process are available at the Reynolds recycling center. School groups interested in a quantity of posters and in other educational material Reynolds offers should call 484-3538.

Robinson heads UMass counseling

The appointment of John D. Robinson of Newton as director and chief psychologist of the University Counseling Center at the University of Massachusetts at Boston has been announced by Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs LeVester Tubbs.

This new position was formed by the merger of five counseling services at UMass-Boston.

Previously Robinson served as associate professor and chairman of the counseling psychology program at the American University in Washington, D.C., clinical assistant professor of psychiatry at George Washington University School of Medicine, and as a special assistant, Office of the Secretary, U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

During this time, he assisted in the development of community mental health centers throughout the U.S.

He also is the first and only black clinical psychologist in the history of the U.S. Navy.

A native of Houston, Robinson earned his B.A. in zoology and biochemistry, and M.A. in counseling psychology at the University of Texas at Austin, and his Ed.D. in counseling psychology at UMass-Amherst.

Great skinny-dipping controversy

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Tradition and women's rights are butting heads down at the YMCA in a case which might be best known as "The Great Skinny-Dipping Controversy."

The tradition in question is the local YMCA's "nude swim," the time-honored policy of sealing off the swimming pool to the general membership so adult males can swim sans suits.

Two female members of the "Y" have challenged the scheduling of the male-only nude swim on weekdays between 11:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. The women think the pool should be open during the lunch hour to all adult members with swim suits.

Many of the YMCA's male members are furious about the attempt to invade their aquatic sanctuary.

"Why don't they go swim in the river?" grumbled Lester Ginanni, vice president of the YMCA's Board of Managers and a skinny-dipper himself.

The members — including a judge, a minister, the local district attorney and affluent businessmen — have hired a lawyer to help keep the "men only" rule in force at the Olympic-sized pool on the 1st floor of the downtown YMCA.

There are, according to the local YMCA's application for United Way funds, 298 female members at the downtown "Y" and 3,500 males.

Last November, Eileen Barrett and Linda McKenna, both 26, asked the YMCA's Executive Committee to allow women members to swim at lunchtime.

They argued that many women members were professionals who worked downtown and could swim most conveniently during their lunch breaks.

They also argued that during the 2½-hour nude swim, women members must walk up two stories, across a gymnasium and down two stories to enter the women's locker room. At other times, women enter the locker room by way of the pool.

The committee rejected the request.

The "Y" board and an ad hoc committee later separately rejected the request and two compromises proposing that men be allowed to skinny dip three days a week but share the pool or two, or start or end the nude swim at 12:30 p.m.

In December, Ms. Barrett filed a sex discrimination complaint with the Pennsylvania Human Relations Commission.

In March, the women challenged a 1972 loan the YMCA received from the Small Business Administration, arguing that the "Y" was violating SBA regulations barring discrimination.

The SBA found in early June that the "Y" was in violation of its regulations and the Civil Rights Act of 1964. A hearing is expected in the case.

J. Thomas Menaker, the YMCA's attorney, said the women's efforts to use legal means to win the fight have ruled out a compromise.

---

Just why the YMCA won't grant the request depends upon the spokesman.

Jim Kuntz, the YMCA's executive director, said the pool is overcrowded.

William Sutphen, chairman of the local board, said it's not a question of overcrowding but of the "Y's" right to schedule events to satisfy its members.

Ginanni says the women's membership is cheaper because the women have less use of the facilities.

Menaker said it isn't a question of overcrowding or scheduling or contributions, but of elminating the nude swim. "The men would have to wear suits. They don't wish to."

Ms. Barrett and Ms. McKenna believe their request is being blocked by a small group of influential businessmen who remember the good old days when the YMCA was a male domain invaded, only occasionally, by a charwoman.

"They want to maintain the image they have of the 'Y' as a men's club, an athletic club for wealthy businessmen. They have been successful so far because they are influential in the community and because they are financial supporters," said Ms. Barrett.

The women said past scheduling problems involving other facilities have been settled by the use of reservations, but never by discrimination.

Menaker, however, said the YMCA is a "private membership organization" exempt from anti-discrimination law.

"There is no law against the 'Y' discriminating. You can have discrimination without having a violation of the law. If that were not the case, you would have no more Girl Scouts, no more Boy Scouts," he said.

---

But the position of the local "Y," and Menaker's argument, have been questioned by the national council of the YMCA.

Despite its name, the Young Men's Christian Association does not limit its membership to men — just as many of its members are non-Christian and many are no longer young.

The YMCA is entirely separate from the Young Women's Christian Association.

Nationwide 39 percent of the YMCA's members are women. And according to the national organization's bylaws, the YMCA has a policy of nondiscrimination.

According to Robert Jenkins, an attorney for the national council, the national board is investigating the Harrisburg case.

"Discriminating against women, if in fact this is what is happening, is not the policy of the national board. The 'Y' has female members and female programs and we have always tried to keep in step with the timber of society," he said.

Ancient instruments win popularity

Ancient instruments are winning new popularity in an age punctuated by futuristic electronic music.

One of the most popular of the music makers from days of yore was the recorder, which is nothing more than a fancy whistle. Basically, the recorder is a wooden cylinder with a mouthpiece, thumb hole and seven finger holes. Anyone who is musically inclined can learn to play it if they are patient.

Even though the recorder is a simple instrument, some artists have become virtuosi. David Munrow is an outstanding example.

Munrow brought together his Recorder Consort and Members of the Early Music Consort of London in a noteworthy album, "The Art of the Recorder" (Angel SB-3861).

Instruments used in this twoLP album vary from baroque violin and baroque cello to rebec, citole and chitarrone. And also there is that rare voice from the past, the counter tenor (James Bowman).

In putting this album together Munrow chose music dating back to the 13th century as well as early Purcell and Vivaldi. The third side is devoted to music by Handel, J. S. Bach, Couperin and T. A. Arne. And the concert ends with modern music, such as Benjamin Britten's "Scherzo" and Paul Hindemith's "Trio from the Ploener Musktag."

Stay up with Jerry and watch the stars come out.

Weddings

Frances Acerra marries Edgar Martin, Jr., Quincy

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Martin

Miss Frances Adrienne Acerra, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Acerra of Newton and West Yarmouth, became the bride of Mr. Edgar Winslow Martin, Jr., of Quincy, on Sunday, August 6. Rev. Anthony Moore performed the late afternoon ceremony at St. Bernard's Church, West Newton, and a reception was held at the Chestnut Hill Country Club.

The bride attended Lesley College. Her husband, a graduate of Blaine Hair School, is a hairdresser. His parents are residents of Boston.

After a wedding trip to Lake George, N.Y., the couple will live in Quincy.

Maria Gavaller married at Presbyterian Church

Mr. and Mrs. Steven Schwede

Miss Maria Haydee Gavaller and Mr. Steven Schwede of Caracas, Venezuela, were married July 1 at the United Presbyterian Church of Newton. The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Bela Gavaller of Newton.

Dr. Monty B. Burnham performed the ceremony and Miss Cristina Gavaller was maid of honor for her sister.

The bride attended Newton College. She and her husband both hold the master of business administration degree from Babson College.

Mr. Schwede, son of Mr. John P. Schwede of Caracas and Mrs. Olga Schwede of Pompano Beach, Fla., is employed by General Telephone and Electronics in their financial executive development program.

Following a trip to New York City, the couple is living in Everett, Wash.

Lori Solowsky, Mr. Stern, married at Sidney Hill Club

Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey Stern

Miss Lori Mae Solowsky of Framingham and Mr. Jeffrey Lawrence Stern of Newton were married on August 5 at the Sidney Hill Country Club. A reception followed the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Solowsky and the groom's parents are Dr. and Mrs. Melvin W. Stern.

Miss Deborah Bluestone was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Ellen Solowsky, Miss Marlene Polansky, Mrs. Nanci Solowsky, Miss Linda Train, Miss Joanne Train and Miss Laurie Salz.

Mr. Bradley Stern was his brother's best man. Ushers were Dr. Alan Solowsky, Mr. Jay Solowsky, Mr. Stephen Krasner, Mr. Alan Gruskin, Mr. Ken Galle, and Mr. Ronald Train. Adam Solowsky, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer.

The bride is a graduate of Newton South High School, class of 1974, and attended Fairleigh Dickinson University for two years. She was graduated in 1977 from the NortheasternTufts Dental Assistant program and is employed by S. S. White Dental Supply.

Her husband, a graduate of Thayer Academy in 1973, attended Fairleigh Dickinson for three years and was graduated from Boston University with a degree in biology in 1978. He plans to study dentistry.

The couple will live in Framingham after a trip to Bermuda.

Arboretum presents fall, winter schedule

The fall and winter schedule of courses and events at the Arnold Arboretum is now available free to the public.

Among the many short courses offered at the 265-acre arboretum are classes in orchid growing, use and propagation of ornamentals, children's horticulture, Christmas decorations, fall fruiting shrubs for spectacular color, and how to attract birds to the garden.

Horticultural walking tours of Mt. Auburn Cemetery, Harvard Yard, and a special winter walking tour of the Arboretun itself are also planned.

For a brochure, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to The Arnold Arboretum, The Arborway, Jamaica Plain, 02130.

Temple Sinai to hold open house Sept. 6

Temple Sinai at Coolidge Corner (Charles Street and Sewall Avenue), will hold an open house for prospective members in the library on Wednesday, Sept. 6, at 7:30 p.m.

This is an opportunity to meet Rabbi Frank Waldorf, Marjorie Berkowitz, school principal, and a small group of involved members.

For further information call the temple office at 277-5888.

Wellesley Hospital sets goal of 1000 trained in CPR

The American Heart Association's Heartsaver course will be offered four different times in October by the Newton-Wellesley Hospital, in an effort to train 1000 area residents in CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation).

Certified instructors will teach the course on Thursdays, Oct. 5, 12, and 26, from 7-10:30 p.m., and on Saturday, Oct. 21, from 9 a.m.-12:30 p.m. in Allen Riddle Hall, dormitory of the School of Nursing.

The complete Heartsaver course includes a lecture and three hours of practice in doing mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and cardiac compression on a life-size mannikin. Participants need to attend only one session.

Reservations may be made on or after September 1 for the October classes. Call the hospital's Community Relations office, 964-2800, ext 395, then mail the $2 fee (checks made payable to the Newton-Wellesley Hospital) and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Community Relations office, 2014 Washington St., Newton Lower Falls 02162.

Reservations will be held for 10 days after receipt of telephone calls. The course will be offered through May, with reservations accepted after the first of each preceding month.

Those who have already taken the course may refresh their skills at this program. Instructors and mannikins will be available for practise, and no reservation or fee is required for those already certified.

Travel Talk
By Josephine Arria
Located on the Seine River 70 miles northwest of Paris, Rouen, France has long been of great historical interest. An important British military base in World War I, many of Rouen's fine buildings were damaged during the war, though some such as the Church of St. Ouen and the 14th Century Tour de la Grosse Horloge (clock tower) were unharmed. Rouen became the capital of Normandy in the 10th Century; it was here that William the Conquerer died, and where Joan of Arc was tried and burned. Rouen is also the birthplace of Gustave Flaubert, who had much to say of his hometown in his masterpiece Madame Bovary. Another popular topic of conversation these day is BARCLAY INTERNATIONAL TRAVEL SERVICE, INC., 305A Washington St., Newton Corner. ## Living is easy for Newport's wealthy

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — Life is cozy for the 300 families of the leisure class who summer in Newport. But to the rest of the world, the summer colony is anything but typical.

The elegant families live in 10-bedroom "cottages", dip their toes in the exclusive water at Bailey's Beach, attend small 24-guest dinner parties five nights a week and go to $100 per-person balls.

Newport's wealthy insist they are a conservative bunch, far different from their predecessors who lived in outrageously extravagant mansions and threw luciously lavish parties.

"The members of the summer colony are really warm people, they just want to relax with their own friends," said Jane Pickens Langley Hoving, a former singing star and unsuccessful candidate for Congress.

"I don't consider Newport a jet set place like Southampton (N.Y.). The people are simple and more conservative here. I know that doesn't sound true to the outsider, though," Mrs. Hoving said.

As the new wife of Walter Hoving, the president of Tiffany's and former head of Bonwit Teller in New York, she is a noted Newport hostess, whose Chinese picnics are "the rage of the summer season."

The Wiley T. Buchanans live in one of the first "cottages" built on posh Bellevue Avenue, a tree-lined boulevard selected by the industrialists of the bygone Gilded Age for their huge summer mansions. For instance, the three-floor, ninebedroom Victorian mansion "Beaulieu" was built in 1853.

'The members of the summer colony are really warm people, they just want to relax with their own friends.' — Jane Pickens Langley Hoving.

"When we first came here (in 1961) the impression was that Newport was filled with rich, old people. But now there are a lot more young people here who have their own homes, not great big homes. Everything is a lot more low-keyed," she said.

Mrs. Buchanan said she didn't know if Newport is the most exclusive summer resort in America, "but it's certainly nice. Everybody you meet here has already arrived. Nobody's impressed."

By "arrived," Mrs. Buchanon said she doesn't necessarily mean wealthy. "You can be accepted here even if you don't have all that much money. It's more background."

To belong in Newport summer society, you need to get on a telephone and mailing list compiled before each season by Carey, Richmond & Viking, Real Estate and Insurance.

The cardboard list conveniently slips over the cover of the local telephone directory. It includes the six social clubs.

There's Bailey's Beach for sun and surf; the Newport Casino for tennis and parties; the Clambake Club for dinner; the Newport Country Club for golf and tennis; the Ida Lewis Yacht club for boating; and the Newport Reading Room — the oldest men's club in America — for backgammon, bridge, and pool.

The "Season 1978" list also has a category called "telephone numbers of your friends."

The following 2½ pages detail 239 names and addresses of such blueblood-sounding people as Countess Anthony Szapary, Mrs. and Mrs. Chauncey Beasley, Mr. and Mrs. Livingston L. Biddle II, Count Alexander dePortales, and Mr. and Mrs. Oakley Rhinelander.

The Russell Barnett Aitkens, who live in a copy of a French chateau on Bellevue Avenue, divide the year between Newport, New York and Palm Beach, Fla.

"Newport's rather a cozy place. I see all these people all winter long. We're all intimate friends. There are no feuds, I see the same people in New York and Florida," Mrs. Aitken said.

The summer colonists say the current summer season is just as socially strenuous as ever. The whirl of dinner parties, luncheon picnics, and $75-perperson Newport Preservation Society balls keeps them busy.

For "coaching weekend", Mrs. Aitken had 150 people for cocktails in honor of "the whips," or coach drivers, on Friday. Mrs. Hoving followed with a dinner party. The Preservation Society hosts a ball Saturday at The Breakers. Mrs. Buchanon is having 120 people over for Sunday brunch.

Candy Van Alen invited "dozens of people" to watch the coaches from the terrace of the Newport Casino on Bellevue Avenue Saturday. Her husband, James, a member of both the Astor and Vanderbilt clans, is president of the National Lawn Tennis Hall of Fame.

'Everybody you meet here has already arrived. Nobody's impressed.' — Mrs. Wiley T. Buchanan.

"Everyone says it's been far and away the best summer ever, with music and coaching," said Eileen Slocum, a descendant of Sam Houston who has weathered "at least 57 summers in Newport."

The seaport's elite agree that one major aspect of their summer life has changed. More and more tourists now venture into their enclave to poke and peer at how the rich spend their time.

Last summer, more than 700,000 tourists tramped through the eight mansions on or near Bellevue Avenue. Even without the America's Cup races which padded last year's crowds, the Preservation Society of Newport County, which owns the mansions, reports this summer's attendance is 8 percent ahead of last year's.

"I think it's great the society's taken care of those mansions that we couldn't keep up, or else they'd turn into those wretched condominiums," said Mrs. Slocum, who lives in her family's massive stone house on Bellevue Avenue.

The Breakers, overlooking the sea on Ochre Point Avenue, was built in 1895 by Cornelius Vanderbuilt. It looks like a 16th Century Italian palace and is perhaps the most popular tourist attraction.

Another popular mansion, Rosecliff, cost $2.5 million to build in the early 1900s. Its opulent interiors were used in the films "The Great Gatsby" and "The Betsy." It currently is closed to filming and partying because of restoration problems.

The Preservation Society rents entire mansions out to parties during the after-tourist hours. Marble House, for example, can be reserved for a wedding, debutante ball or whatever for $1,500 a day.

'There are a lot of young people who now live here all year around Newpoet is a new kind of living city.' — Harriet Reed

"I don't understand how Newport got to be such a terrific tourist center all of a sudden," said Mrs. Van Alen. "But the tourists don't bother me at all, they're well behaved for the most part."

But some of Newport's younger elite are bothered by the idea of gawking tourists. They complain of discarded beer cans and hamburger wrappers along the fashionable avenues.

"What the tourists don't realize is that Newport is no longer a summer colony of really rich people living the easy, carefree life," said 23year-old Harriet Reed, whose family has been summering here for 40 years. "There are a lot of young people who now live here all year round. Newport is a new kind of living city."

On any sunny summer Sunday, 12-mile-long Ocean Drive is clogged with traffic. Buses filled with tourists stop to look at elegant 30-room mansions on lush lawns and rocky shorelines.

Security is becoming a problem at Bailey's Beach on Ocean Drive. Manager Jack Gleason said his staff watches to ensure only the 300 member families enter the grounds.

For members of Bailey's Beach, often called the world's most exclusive playpen, life revolves around the club. There are three club-sponsored balls a season, but members can use the facilities for private bashes.

THE READERS WRITE.. Diane Taylor

This is the reader's column and readers are invited to send recipes or questions to Diane Taylor, c-o Transcript Newspapers, 420 Washington St., Dedham, Mass. 02026.

Dear Diane, Can you help me come up with something quickly using leftover chicken.
— R.W. Roslindale.

Dear R.W.: Here's an easy dish that takes just minutes:

SAUCY CHICKEN
(4 Servings)

¼ cup butter
1 teaspoon curry powder
¼ cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
Dash white pepper
1 cup milk
1 cup chicken broth
1 can (3 oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained
2 cups diced cooked chicken

Melt butter and stir in curry powder. Cook 1 minute. Blend in flour and seasonings. Cook in milk and chicken broth. Cook over medium heat until thickened, stirring constantly. Add mushrooms and chicken. Heat thoroughly. Serve over cooked noodles or rice or toast points.

Dear Diane, I'm searching for a Chinese salad recipe. — P.F. Norwood

Dear P.F.: Here's an oriental salad that also features cottage cheese.

ORIENTAL VEGETABLE SALAD
(8 Servings)

1½ cups (12 oz.) cottage cheese
¼ cup sour cream
2 teaspoons soy sauce
1 can (16 oz.) bean sprouts, rinsed and drained
1 can (8 oz.) water chestnuts, sliced
3 cups finely shredded cabbage
½ cup sliced celery
½ cup thinly sliced green pepper
½ cup sliced green onions
1 teaspoon seasoning salt
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Combine cottage cheese, sour cream and soy sauce; mix well. Add remaining ingredients; toss lightly. Chill. Serve on crisp salad greens.

Oriental vegetable salad

Dear Diane, My kids are always hounding me for pudding.
I running out variations. Got any ideas. —
T.S. Dedham.

Dear T.S.: If your kids are also nutty about coconut and fruits, try this:

CREAMY COCONUT PUDDING
(6 Servings)

¾ cup sugar
1 envelope (1 tablespoon) unflavored gelatin
½ teaspoon salt
1½ cups milk
1½ teaspoons vanilla
1 can (3½ oz.) moist flaked coconut
½ pint (1 cup) whipping cream, whipped
Sweetened fresh fruits

In a saucepan combine sugar, gelatin and salt; stir in milk. Stirring constantly, cook over medium heat until sugar and gelatin are dissolved. Remove from heat and stir in vanilla. Chill until partially set. Stir in coconut. Fold in whipped cream. Spoon into individual dessert dishes; chill until firm. Unmold into sherbet glasses; garnish with fresh fruit in season.

KITCHEN CORNER

What to do with all those tomatoes . . .

By BARBARA GIBBONS

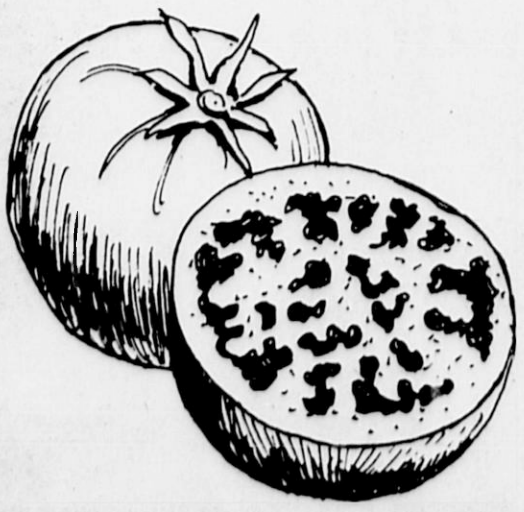

When the first real tomato ripens on the vine — or arrives in the supermarket — it's such a culinary happening that we just can't imagine ever being bored with them. By September we have salted and peppered enough tomatoes to last a lifetime. But still they come! Salt and pepper are no longer enough.

So today we've got a trio of slim recipes that are practical during the too-many-tomatoes season. The rest of the year tomatoes — real tomatoes — are either unavailable or too expensive!

..GREEK MINTED MARINATED TOMATOES

4 tomatoes, vine-ripened, peeled and diced half a small onion, sliced into rings garlic salt and pepper to taste
1 tablespoon chopped fresh mint (or 1 teaspoon dried mint)
half-teaspoon dried oregano
1 tablespoon olive oil (or salad oil)
2 tablespoons lemon juice
optional: 1 ounce feta cheese, diced or crumbled

Combine all ingredients except cheese. Cover and chill. Sprinkle cheese on top and serve. Makes six servings, 45 calories each (feta cheese adds 15 calories per serving).

..MEXICAN SALSA
(Hot and spicy raw tomato relish)

6 tomatoes, vine-ripened, peeled and diced
1 onion, peeled and minced
1 rib celery, minced
1 green bell pepper, seeded and minced
2 to 4 tablespoons green chilies, canned, chopped (or add chili powder to taste)
3 tablespoons wine vinegar
half-teaspoon dried oregano
1 and one-half teaspoons cumin seeds, crushed
(or half-teaspoon ground cumin)

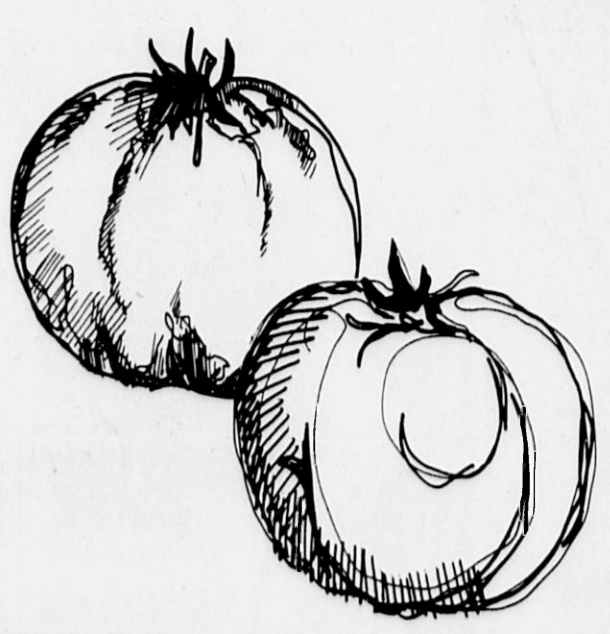

Stir together and refrigerate 24 hours before serving. Spoon chilled relish over broiled chicken, fish or lean hamburgers. Store in refrigerator. (Recipe may be halved.) Makes one quart or 16 servings, about 15 calories each serving.

REAL TOMATO ASPIC

2 envelopes plain gelatin
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons cold water
three-quarters cup boiling water
1 tablespoon honey
(or sugar substitute to equal 4 teaspoons sugar)
1 teaspoon salt
pinch of hot pepper or chili powder
2 tablespoons minced onion
2 ribs celery, minced
4 tomatoes, ripe

Combine gelatin, lemon juice and cold water in blender container. Wait 1 minute until gelatin is soft. Add boiling water. Cover and blend. Scrape sides of container and blend again, until all gelatin granules are dissolved. Add remaining ingredients and blend smooth.

Chill until partially set, then spoon into a shallow pan or ring mold. Chill until firm. Makes eight servings, 35 calories each with honey, 25 calories each with sugar

Low-calorie mayonnaise, tartar sauce, French dressin9, coleslaw ... for these and others plus diet tips, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 35 cents to SLIM GOURMET SALAD IDEAS in care of this newspaper, Sparta, N.J. 07871.

Unitarian School registration opens Sept. 5

Registration for the First Unitarian Society's fall church-school program will be at the church, 1326 Washington St., West Newton, Sunday, Sept. 10, at 10:30 a.m.

Grades 1 and 2, Experiences with Living Things: Exploring and learning about the interrelatedness and independence of living things in the natural world. Experiences will include experiments, books, records, and films.

Grades 3 and 4, Feasts and Festivals, Fables and Folklore: A study of the origin, history and meaning of major religious festivals, rituals, legends, and traditions of other cultures. An examination of the ways feasts and festivals satisfy some of the spiritual needs of people as they wonder about the mysteries of life.

Grades 5 and 6, Decision-making: A multimedia educational program encouraging children to determine which of the complex, often conflicting values used in decision-making are most important to them.

Grades 7 and 8, Unitarian-Universalism as a Valuing Religion: Explores UU beliefs from the 15th century to the present. Some of the questions which will be examined: "What is religion?", "What have other UU's believed throughout history?", and "What do I believe?". Curriculum includes films, books, and visits to UU historical sites and churches.

Grades 9-12, Senior High Seminar: A series of mini-courses beginning with the Old Testament and reflecting the interests of the participants will be given.

For further information call Rosemary Smurzynski at 527-3203.

Hebrew College classes start Sept. 6

Registration is now under way for classes at Hebrew College, the college's extension department, and the Ulpan. Classes in all three begin Sept. 6.

A wide range of course offerings in Hebraic and Judaic . disciplines is available, including Bible, Hebrew Literature, Jewish History, Talmud, Jewish Thought, Jewish Education and Contemporary issues. Students may take approved courses at Hebrew College and receive degree credits at their own school.

Regular courses at Hebrew College are open for auditing to anyone with sufficient facility in the Hebrew language.

For those who would like to learn to speak Hebrew fluently and quickly Hebrew College has Ulpan classes for beginners, intermediates, and more advanced students. In these classes students learn to speak, read and write Hebrew, in Hebrew, with experienced Israeli teachers in a friendly atmosphere.

For those who do not speak Hebrew, the college's extension department offers courses in various aspects of Jewish knowledge on Monday evenings.

High school students who have not had the benefit of an intensive elementary Hebrew background may now study at the "Prozdor" Hebrew High School, a division of Hebrew College. Registration for the Prozdor and Mechinah (preparatory classes) is in progress. Classes start Sept. 6.

Persons interested in any of the fall semester courses are encouraged to call as soon as possible, as space is limited. The academic year in all departments starts on Sept. 6.

For information about any Hebrew College program, call 232-8710.

Local woman on way to diploma through CETA

Elvira Stephenson of Newton recently received a certificate of completion of a nine-week intensive program in reading and language development sponsored by the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA). The program was under the direction of Margaret Bradley.

Ms. Stephenson is also involved in a work experience program at the Carroll Center for the Blind.

She will continue her education through a general education diploma (GED) program under the direction of Marjorie Gibson.

Open house at Temple Shalom

Temple Shalom of Newton announces an open house and coffee hour for Newton and residents of adjoining areas interested in temple affiliation on Thursday, Sept. 14, from 7:45 to 9:30 p.m.

The reception will be held in the temple youth room at 175 Temple St., West Newton, and will feature inspection tours of the sanctuary, school building, library and other facilities.

With the approach of the High Holy Days and the commencement of religious school, many families begin to think about temple affiliation. We welcome all families from Newton and neighboring areas who would like to learn about membership at Temple Shalom.

Prospective members will have an opportunity to meet with Martin B. Dropkin, president, Rabbi Murray I. Rothman, Rabbi Scott B. Saulson, officers and trustees of the temple, and the presidents of the brotherhood, sisterhood and other temple auxiliary groups.

Temple Shalom, a Reform congregation, was founded in 1950. It has an approximate membership of 700 families, and each year welcomes several new families as members.

Cold Frames Workshop: Get extra mileage from your growing season by learning to construct and use these simple and useful garden devices. Saturday, Sept. 23, two sections: Beverly Farms and Herweg residence, Dedham, 10-noon ($8).

Other courses beginning in September are: Introduction to Nature Photography, Professional Florist Training, Introduction to Horticultural Therapy and Healing with Plants. A walking tour of the Emerald Necklace is also slated.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society is a non8profit organization celebrating its 150th anniversary in 1979 and is located at 300 Mass. Ave., Boston, across from Symphony Hall.

A record $2 billion spent for cancer test

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American Cancer Society is putting $2 million — the most it has ever invested in a single test — behind efforts to learn if a substance produced in the body can slow the growth of cancerous tumors in humans.

The Cancer Society said it hopes to have some indication within six months whether the substance, called interferon, will work without the harmful side effects of some other antitumor agents.

Interferon, a protein substance that occurs naturally in the body and is also produced by a virus-infected animal cell, has been shown to shrink tumors in animals and has already helped some humans.

Dr. Jordan Guttermam of Houston's M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Clinic and Dr. Thomas C. Merigan Jr. of Stanford University Medical Center in Palo Alto, Calif., are hoping to prove whether interferon:

—Will stop growth of human tumors at a faster rate than it interferes with normal cell growth.

—Activates the normal body defenses against infection and cancer, giving the tumor host, the cancer patient, a double punch against cancer.

—Circulates in the blood stream, keeping an active patrol at the cellular level against cancer cells, upsetting their viability at first contact.

The three to six-month test of interferon will involve 150 randomly selected cancer patients divided into two groups — one will get interferon in treatments that will cost $25,000 to $30,000 a person and the other will not.

The Cancer Society each year collects more than $100 million from Americans interested in fighting cancer. But this is the most money the Society has put into a test of a single antitumor substance.

In a telephone interview Gutterman said if the testing is successful, there will be positive proof interferon can keep some killer tumors from growing to a lethal size — choking vital life processes and killing the host.

The victims will live longer and perhaps have a normal lifespan.

State has grant for transportation of elderly and handicapped persons

State Rep. David J. Mofenson (D-Newton), House chairman of the Committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs, recently announced that Massachusetts had been granted $515,000 for the third year of funding for a program which provides special vehicles for transporting elderly and handicapped citizens.

Transportation vehicles for elderly and-or handicapped citizens are provided by a grant program of the Urban Mass Transportation Administration of the U.S. Department of Transportation and administered by the Executive Office of Transportation and Construction (ETOC) of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The program (16-b-2) provides financial assistance to private nonprofit organizations that transport elderly and handicapped persons where mass transportation is unavailable, inappropriate, or insufficient. It provides 80 percent of the cost of transportation equipment; local non-profit organizations must provide the remaining 20 percent funding in cash from non-federal sources.

Mofenson explained who may apply and what is available. A private nonprofit organization incorporated under Chapter 180 of the Massachusetts General Laws, or chapter of the American Red Cross are eligible to apply. Copies of the Chapter 180 Articles of Incorporation must be filed with the Executive Office of Transportation and Construction. The local organization must also be able to execute a binding contract with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and apply to the Executive Office of Transportation and Construction in order to be considered for funding.

The Commonwealth has been allocated $515,000.00. This year two types of vehicles are being offered — a 8-12-passenger converted van or a 15-20-passenger transit vehicle. Certain types of communications equipment are also eligible for the 80 percent federal funding. All equipment purchases are made through EOTC.

The Executive Office of Transportation and Construction has been accepting applications on a continual basis beginning June 1978. Review of applications will be on Oct. 15, 1978. Another review is scheduled for June 15, 1979. Applications received after Oct. 15, 1978, will be part of the June, 1979, review.

An interagency advisory committee of 10 state agencies reviews all applications and makes recommendations to the Massachusetts Secretary of Transportation. The review considers each applicant on the basis of selection criteria established by EOTC. Priority will be given to those agencies that coordinate with other agencies and outreach beyond their present client group. Upon completion of the review process by the Interagency Advisory Committee, EOTC submits a recommendation to the Urban Mass Transportation Administration for award to those organizations that have best satisfied the selection criteria.

Mofenson said there are some other obligations of agencies if their applications are approved. "Along with providing the 20 percent cash match and entering into a contract with EOTC, you must hold title and operate the vehicles purchased under the program. You are responsible for operating and insurance costs. You must comply monthly reports on your transportation program to the Executive Office of Transportation and Construction. You must make the vehicle available to the general elderly and handicapped population," he said. Mofenson said that private nonprofit organizations in the Newton area interested in participating in the program should contact his office at 727-1321.

the moral and intellectual capacity to do it."

"It abandoned one school (Emerson) in eight minutes, and left three others twisting slowly in the winds of uncertainty," he said, referring to the possible closing of Carr, Horace Mann, or another north side elementary school sometime in the future.

Kathy Tullberg, chairman of the Underwood PTA ad hoc committee for renovation, said before the 21 aldermen and over 100 citizens present that the renovation is needed to give the school the "treatment it long deserved."

Nearly $100,000 has been spent on architectural plans since the improvements to Underwood were first conceived eight years ago, she said, and further delay would cost at least $50,000. !

She noted the addition of several rooms to the school has been deleted, and now only renovation work remains.

The plans have passed all city review committees at least once, and many of them twice.

"Defeat of the proposal (for the $1.05 million bond issue) will have one sure effect.

"It will put off the renovation and leave kids in a school inadequate for their educational program'" she said.

School Committee Vice Chairwoman Nancy Mann read a statement for Chairwoman Honora Kaplan, who was out of state.

Mrs. Mann said the enrollment in the Underwood area and all of the city has been studied, and Underwood is not a possible candidate forclosing.

Asked to respond to charges by Robert McDonald of the Emerson district that the School Committee had pitted neighborhood against neighborhood in a battle for individual schools, Mrs. Mann said that some schools can't be closed in the foreseeable future, and others can.

Continuum career service moves office to Newton

Continuum, a career education program for mid-life women, has moved to larger headquarters at 785 Centre St., Newton, on the campus of the Newton Country Day School.

Assisting in the move were five Newton staff members, Doris Der-Marderosian, counselor, of Auburndale; Joyce Picard, counselor of Newton Centre; and Susan Jacobson, director of admission, Rita Schore, executive director and co-founder, and Wynne W. Miller, program director and co-founder, all of Waban.

Continuum, chartered in 1974, is a school licensed by the Department of Education of the Commonwealth, offering a nine-month educational curriculum which prepares women for entering or re-entering the job world. It combines on-the-job experience, classroom learning and workshops. The non-profit program was formerly located in Waltham.

Women in the program which begins on Sept 25 may choose three consecutive internship positions of about three months each, during which they will also participate in career counseling sessions and skill-building workshops.

Continuum also offers a short-term career-counseling service on a one-to-one basis for men and women. This new service, available by appointent, will cover vocational testing, skill assessment, evaluation and recommendation.

Further information about the program and career counseling service may be obtained by calling 964-3322 or writing to Continuum, 785 Centre St., Newton, 02158.

Job Bank needs help

The Newton Job Bank at 429 Cherry St., West Newton, continues to assist Newton's youth, ages 13 to 22, in finding employment appropriate to their ages, experiences, expertise, and geographical locations.

In addition to serving adolescents, the program also serves businesses and individuals by providing a clearinghouse of young people looking for employment.

In its ninth year of operation, Job Bank has filled over 18,000 jobs. Funded by the City of Newton through the Department of Human Services, the program is operated by the Newton Community Service Centers, Inc.

Jobs listed have included babysitting, lawn work, snow— shovelling, housecleaning, painting, party help, clerical work, typing, dishwashing, waitressing, cashiering, warehouse work, custodial work, and a variety of one-time, part-time, and full-time positions.

Listing of jobs is encouraged from all sections of the city in the hope of placing local adolescents suitable positions.

The successful operation of this activity is dependent upon the community — without jobs listed, teenagers cannot be placed; without applicants, jobs cannot be filled.

The Job Bank has the endorsement of the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce.

ly to private ownership of the isolated four acres of fields, which they see as an area that should be kept green and pleasant to the eye because it is visible from most of the rest of the property.

They want to prevent the construction of tennis courts, a parking lot, or a pool on that site.

If the Novitiate becomes a public park, as the Conservators wish, the group feels that no easement would be necessary on the riverbank, since the CJP agencies would have as much right as any members of the public to use the riverbank.

The purchase of the four-acre parcel and the riverbank access may become bargaining points for the Board of Aldermen when CJP requests a special permit for use of the property which is zoned single-residence "A."

A large stand of tall pine trees now lines Winchester Street along the Novitiate property. The Conservators want written-in protection of the trees.

The Conservators have been working for city acquisition of the property for more than three years and have gathered support from all parts of the city.

Plans announced by CJP have been indefinite as to use of the property except to say that it will accommodate recreational facilities and provide office space for CJP-sponsored agencies.

The property is within 20 minutes of most of the western suburbs, the organization noted in a statement.

Red Cross is counting on you -to help.

Lawyers denounce Carter-Burger charges

By DALE SINGER
United Press International

Many of the nation's leading lawyers object to indictments of their profession by the president and chief justice. If the courts move slowly and justice does not always triumph, they say, the blame must be laid at least in part on the federal government.

A UPI survey showed general agreement with President Carter's complaint that too many lawyers take too much time and charge too much money for too little justice.

Most lawyers concurred with one prominent Texas attorney who said justice has become "a rich man's game."

But Carter's charge last spring before the Los Angeles Bar Association that the practice of plea bargaining robbed Americans of justice was denounced by judges and lawyers alike, including Leon Jaworski, special prosecutor of the Watergate and Korean bribery scandals.

Jaworski condemned Carter's broad criticism of the profession as "a grave mistake on the part of any man who is supposed to lead the country." He said the nation would never have had the answer to Watergate without "perfectly fair and proper plea barganing."

The lawyers reserved their harshest responses for Chief Justice Warren E. Burger.

He called half of the nation's trial attorneys incompetent and then went further at the American Bar Association convention in New Orleans, saying "inadequate performance" by trial lawyers was "one of the major reasons for congestion and delay in the courts."

San Francisco attorney Charles Garry, best known for his association with the Black Panthers, agreed there are incompetent attorneys but added:

"I place the blame on the courts. If only 10 cases have been reversed in recent years for incompetent counsel, what can you say? I have never heard that Chief Justice Burger ever reversed a case because of incompetent counsel, so where does he get off?"

L. Ray Patterson, dean of Emory Law School in Atlanta, conceded Burger's charge has some merit. "If you have even one lawyer who is incompetent or gives an adequate representation," he said, "you have too many."

In Philadelphia, Common Pleas Court Judge Marvin Halbert took none too subtle aim at Burger himself, saying:

"There are no more unqualified attorneys in the bar than there are unqualified doctors, than there are unqualified plumbers, than there are unqualified justices of the Supreme Court."

Criticism of lawyers isn't new, of course.

Anyone wanting to score points against the legal profession can cite Shakespeare, Dickens or Benjamin Franklin's Poor Richard, who wrote nearly 250 years ago: "Necessity knows no law; I know some attorneys of the same."

But lawyers aren't about to run from a good fight, and they've mounted a vigorous counterattack in self-defense against the one-two punch of Carter and Burger.

"By resorting to litigation at the drop of a hat," Carter said in Los Angeles last May, "by regarding the adversary system as an end in itself, we have made justice more cumbersome, more expensive and less equal than it ought to be."

But, lawyers said, most people don't use the legal system unless they have a problem they can't solve themselves.

Los Angeles attorney Grant B. Cooper noted that when human beings are involved, discord naturally follows, and the legal process is needed to deal with both facts and friction.

"It someone can change human nature and devise a system that will take rancor, revenge and hatred out of the hearts of litigants in a broken marriage," Cooper said, "the problem will be solved."

Quintin Johnstone, a Yale Law School professor, said lawyers are unpopular because they are involved in arguments, and not everyone can win.

"I think lawyers have gotten a black eye on Watergate, unjustifiably," he said. "But I think they'll always have a black eye because lawyers deal in conflict. Someone loses, and lawyers often take the blame for the losing side."

---

When Carter's remarks made headlines, lawyers seemed particularly upset by his suggestion that plea bargaining is an injustice to society. The implication was such practice is necessary because crowded dockets do not allow all people their day in court.

"I am worried about a legal system in which expensive talent on both sides produces interminable delay — especially when delay itself can often mean victory for one side," Carter said. "Justice should not be forced to obey the timetables of those who seek to avoid it.

"In many courts, plea bargaining serves the convenience of the judge and the lawyers, not the ends of justice, because the courts simply lack the time to give everyone a fair trial."

Philadelphia's Judge Halbert strongly disagreed with Carter's assessment of plea bargaining.

"That comment is absolutely absurd," he said. "To say it accommodates the court or the system itself is a secondary gain.

"Our lists would run five years behind. We would fill our jails. You would increase your taxes 30 to 40 fold conservatively. A judge can refuse plea bargaining. They can be questioned. Believe me, justice is done."

At Houston, Jaworski recounted for UPI his experience with success in plea bargaining:

"I can tell you we would never have had the answer to Watergate, if it had not been for perfectly fair and proper plea bargaining. And yet, in every single instance, I did not give anybody immunity. I didn't give them a walk.

"They had to plead guilty to a felony before I accepted their pleas. And the rest of the counts were dismissed. They wouldn't have gotten any more anyway because usually the court lets the sentences run concurrently."

Jaworski cited the case of Herbert Kalmbach, personal attorney for Richard Nixon, where vital information was gained because of plea bargaining.

"Every one of these people who turned government's evidence, so to speak, has gone to the penitentiary, has been imprisoned," the silver-haired lawyer said. "What more can you ask?"

Laughlin McDonald of the American Civil Liberties Union in Atlanta said pressure may be put on criminal defendants to plea bargain, and some suspects who insist on going to trial may risk longer sentences. But, he said, crowded dockets may be the price Americans pay for protection of their individual rights.

"Some of the time spent in the courts is unavoidable," he said. "It should be hard to put people in jail."

---

Many factors can be blamed for clogged dockets, not the least of which is an American view toward litigation that can be traced back to Colonial days. The saying goes that many towns unable to support one lawyer can easily support two.

Houston's Percy Foreman cited one particular cause for delays in civil courts — insurance companies trying to avoid court-ordered settlements.

"They always settle anyway, as soon as you empanel a jury, but they want to keep their money as long as possible," he said. "The backlog in dockets would melt away like snow in July with just one little change in the law — if they would make the judgment that might eventually be returned bear interest from the date the cause of action rose instead of the date the judgment is rendered."

Another roadblock to speedy justice, so-called nuisance suits, may be on their way out in Michigan. In May a state appeals court in Lansing ruled an attorney may be sued for "malicious prosecution" in a civil case if there is reason to think he knew his client's suit was without merit.

Ivan E. Barris, vice president of the Michigan bar, said the decision would have a "chilling effect" on the profession at first, but it may later prove to be a benefit to justice overall.

"If a lawyer is worth his salt, has done his investigation on the suit, talked to the experts and has grounds to believe his client's claims, he should proceed full steam ahead with the lawsuit," Barris said.

"This will be a deterrent to any lawyer with an ounce of brains to stop filing any frivolous suits."

But judging what is frivolous is a task few would care to undertake, and barring access to the legal system is decidedly un-American. Besides, said Benjamin Lerner of the Defenders Association of Philadelphia, clients often think their claim is so clearly right, there's no reason not to go to trial.

"Clients often fail to see how an impartial jury or judges could not see something their way," he said. "They are more likely not to see the inherent risks in litigation.

"So when the lawyer says it's in their best interest to settle for half a loaf, the client says, 'You're afraid to go to trial.'"

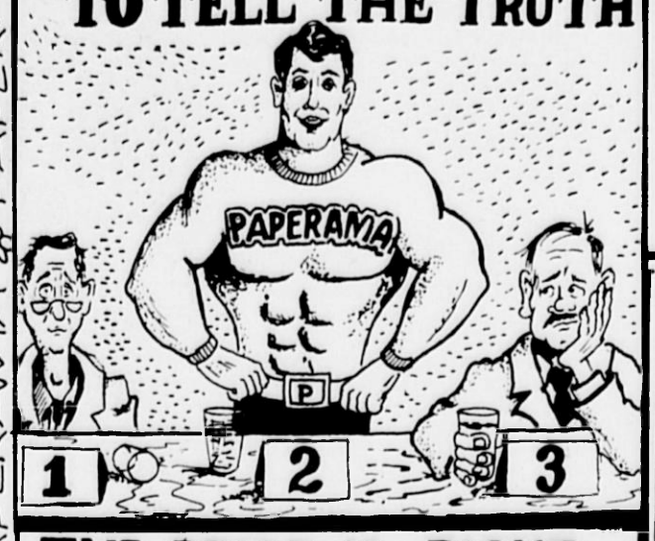

Carter's comments about high legal fees struck a sour note with attorneys who feel the profession has done much to achieve the equality of justice that is a basic part of the American dream.

N-W Bank among 300 largest in U.S.

According to a recent study compiled by the "American Banker," BayBank Newton-Waltham Trust Company is ranked among the 300 largest commercial banks in the United States.

With June 30, 1978, deposits of $401.6 million, BayBank Newton-Waltham jumped seven places from the 301st to 294th largest commercial bank in the country.

In Massachusetts, the bank ranks as seventh largest in deposit size, an increase of one over the same period of 1977. Total assets are $476.7 million.

Branch expansion is an important component of the bank's short- and long-term plans. According to Mosher, "It is expected that physical expansion will contribute dramatically to the bank's future growth."

The bank presently operates 30 branches in 12 cities and towns in Middlesex County.

15-month CETA training program to prepare 30 as legal secretaris

Skills Training Improvement Program (STIP) is a government response to skilled labor shortages in Massachusetts.

Under this special program, funded through the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA), a 15-month training program preparing up to 30 participants to be legal secretaries will begin in mid-September.

Although several institutions are currently training in this field, the demand still far exceeds the supply, according to the Massachusetts Legal Administrators Association (MLAA), an organization of employment managers in major law firms.

"This program fits nicely into the STIP regulations, which call for training to be for jobs which pay $4.25 per hour or more and which have the potential for career advancement," said Mayor Theodore D. Mann, chairman of Newton Area CETA, in announcing the program.

Students will earn 40 college credits through the training program. This amounts to two-thirds of the credits needed for an associate's degree.

Participants will also be paid a stipend during the training period and in the summer months, they will gain on-the-job experience through internships with private companies. The MLAA will be closely involved with this as well as the selection of trainees and job development. The organization will also identify present employers . who will visit the classes or who will sponsor field trips to their businesses.

Bruce C. Hamel of West Newton has opened a real estate office at 440 Lexington St., Auburndale. Hamel is a former vice president of the Newton Co-operative Bank and vice president and treasurer of the Coolidge Corner Co-operative Bank. Hamel Real Estate will serve Newton and surrounding communities, offering full professional real estate services and financial consulting.

At the completion of the program at Aquinas Junior College, successful students will be able to handle regular secretarial duties in a law firm, type 50 60 words per minute, answer telephones and record messages, and understand basic legal terminology, proper usage, and basic legal procedures.

To be eligible for the program, applicants must have a high school diploma or equivalent have been unemployed 30 days or more, and meet certain federally determined income guidelines.

Applications are available at the Newton Area CETA Training and Job Center, 141 Moody St., Waltham, and at the Brookline Human Resources Commission, 276 Washington St., Brookline.

Harris sees key role for states

BOSTON (UPI) — U.S. Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Patricia Harris says state governments will play an important role in the Carter Administration's urban policy.

"The states can and must play a major roll to conserve and develop their communities. Without total commitment by the states, the national urban policy will not work effectively," Mrs. Harris told the National Governors' Association Tuesday. "We welcome the fact that you are now aggressively involved."

Ms. Harris, appearing at a meeting of the NGA's Task Force on Urban Development, said officials in her office have opened talks with the top executives of several national retail chains in an effort to persuade them to invest more money in cities.

"We're talking, probably a little past jawboning, with three major chains," said Mrs. Harris. "They all deny, as I would expect they would, that they have written off the center cities."

She said her department was aware that many major retailers prefer to locate new stores in suburban malls rather than risk money by investing in decaying urban shopping areas.

The task force met in the newly completed Quincy Market, a $33 million redevelopment project which turned one of Boston's most dilapidated waterfront areas into a mall of fresh produce stores, posh clothing boutiques, chic bars and expensive craft shops.

The project renovated three massive 150-year-old buildings which had been a busy produce, meat and fish market before being abandoned in the early 1900's.

The market is located next to Faneuil Hall, one of the favorite meeting halls for patriots during the American Revolution.

"This is our mission and what the Carter administration urban policy is all about," she said. "Quincy Market is an excellent example of what can happen when federal, state and local governments work together."

Prof. Goodwin is associate provost

Prof. George Goodwin of 38 Balcarres Rd., West Newton, has been named associate provost for the Extended Day Program at UMass-Boston.

In this new position Goodwin is responsible for expanding the number of courses and degree programs offered during the evening hours at both the university's Harbor Campus in Dorchester and Downtown Campus in Park Square.

UMass-Boston's Extended Day Program has more than 150 courses listed for the fall semester in 11 different degree areas, including community change and housing, computer science, human growth and development, legal education, and management. Tuition is $66 per course.

Prof. Goodwin earned his B.A. at Williams College and M.A. and Ph.D. in political science from Harvard University. He has been associated with UMass-Boston since 1965 and is considered one of the founding fathers of the institution.

Active in many university and community projects, he is the author of several books and numerous monographs and reviews in the field of political science. From 1965-1976 he was chairman of the Politics Department at UMass-Boston.

HOME AGAIN, WITH GOD.
Even if you've wandered, His love for you hasn't changed. The good He has for you hasn't gone. And your love for Him — and for all that's pure and gentle and good in your life — has never left you either.
Our weekly Bible Lesson might be of help along the way home — and we'd love to share it with you.

Mini-Bike Track

The Mini-bike track at the old City Infirmary land on Winchester Street, Newton Highlands will reopen for the fall season Saturday, September 9th from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The track will be under the direction of Newton Police Safety officer, Bob Braceland and Recreation Leader, Anthony Mazzola.

Tag Football

The Newton Recreation Department's Tag Football League will open its season Monday, September 18th at Albemarle Field. League teams from last year should notify Director Bill Barry as soon as possible if they intend to play this season.

Bowen Special Needs Camp

Last Thursday, some 50 youngsters from the Special Needs Camp at the Bowen School were treated to lunch by McDonald's of Newton as a special treat for their year ending summer program field day. The summer camp ended on a high note, as a special production of "Peter Pan", was put on by the campers and staff as part of Parent's Day, followed by treats for the parents and visitors. Mayor Mann and Recreation Commissioner, Russell Halloran were on hand, together with many parents to witness a truly exceptional performance by the campers. The campers enjoyed a summer of day trips, tennis lessons, held at the Newton Centre clay courts, under the expert instruction of Cynthia Rosenthal and Marilyn Stein, swim lessons at Crystal Lake, under WSI Instructor Barbara Rooney and craft projects, including the completion of a 6 foot paper mache dinosaur called "Puff".

Women's Softball

The women's softball season has come to a close as makeup games were scheduled for the two divisions, A and B. They are readying for the playoffs. In A Division the Hustlers and the Jesters went to three games before deciding the championship. The Hustlers won the first game while the Jesters took the second. The Hustlers took the title by taking the rubber game by a score of 11-2. In the B Division, semi-finals CJ's played Magoo's and Art Carrolls played George's Cafe. Art Carrols and CJ's played in the finals with Art Carrolls taking the championship on the third game.

A match of fewer mistakes

By Steve Epstein

It had to feel good.

Manuel Orantes, the 29-year old ninth best player in the world had won only one tournament since winning the U.S. Pro title at Longwood last year, yet he returned here last week and defended his championship by defeating Harold Solomon of Silver Spring, Md., 6-4, 6-3 in the final.

"I was nervous," admitted the Spaniard. Although Orantes has played some 8of the best tennis of his life this year, he had not won a grand prix event since last November in Tokyo. The final victory, his 10th win in 12 meetings with Solomon, was much closer than the score indicated.

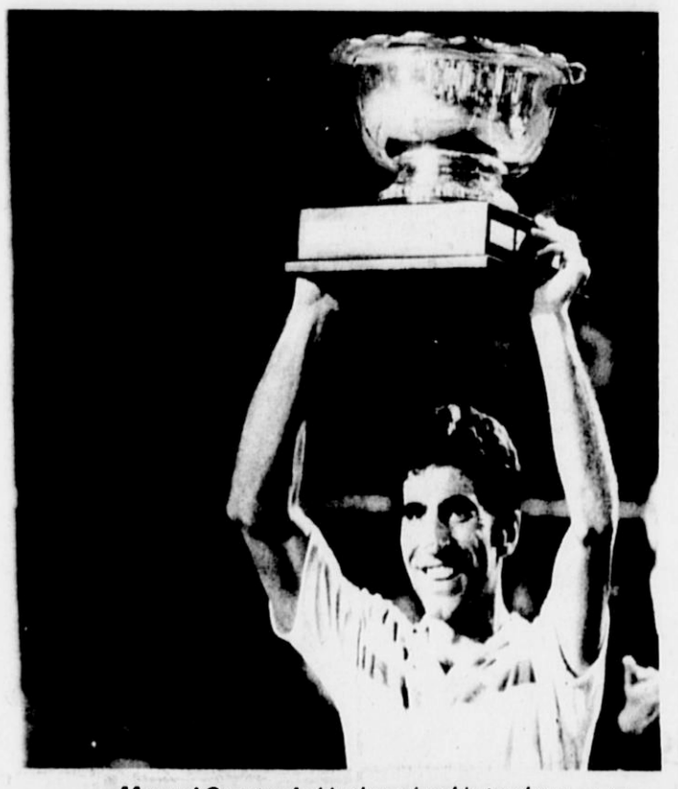

He said, "The games were very close. I served a lot of aces and I played good points at the important moments." Orantes simply made fewer mistakes that than his 25-year old opponent, and his ability to capitalize on Solomon errors on key points won him the match. As Solomon said later, "It came down to seven or eight points. If I win these points, then it changes the match around."

Orantes reached the final with victories over Wojtek Fibak and Arthur Ashe in the quarter- and semi-finals. Solomon beat John McEnroe and Corrado Barrazzutti8 in the two rounds previous to the final to gain his berth.

Both are known for their proficiency on clay, although their styles are not similar. Solomon had commented all week that he was changing his style and becoming more aggressiv and coming to the net more. Orantes had commented prior to the match, "Basically, his game is the same as it was before. I don't think he can change his game right now."

Solomon was behind in the final match almost from its outset. In the second game, his service was broken by Orantes after a long game at deuce. Solomon had a chance to break back seven times on Orantes' next three services, but he failed to do so until the seventh opportunity, which occurred in game nine with Orantes leading by 5-3.

The break brought the score to 5-4, and Solomon was back into the match. But seemingly as soon as a glimme of hope became apparent for 'Solly', his luck changed. Orantes broke his service in game 10 and won the set 6-4.

Although Solomon seemed to be volleying better by the end of the first set, his inability to capitalize on his first six opportunities to break Orantes' service as well as his inability to finish off points with his overhead smas led to his downfall.

Orantes simply stayed back and tried to bring Solomon to the net and force him to commit the errors. Orantes commented, "The court was very fast. I couldn't use the drop shot because the ball was bouncing too high. I had to stay back at the baseline and beat him at his own game."

At the start of the second set, Solomon seemed to play inspired tennis. He moved to the net well and placed his volleys excellently. However, Orantes was serving exceptionally well, and Solomon was unable to break him. Both players held servic through the first seven games of the second set.

Solomon had a 15-40 lead on Orantes' serve in game five, but was unable to break service. In game eight, finally it was Orantes who did the breaking. He passed Solly at the net to gain a 5-3 advantage and was serving for the set. Orantes had little trouble in the final game, winning the second set 6-3 and capturing the match in one hour and 35 minutes. Seven aces along the way propelled Orantes to his second consecutive Longwood title.

Tourney notes

In summary, this year's tennis was as good as ever, although attendeance was way down due to the lack of top name players. Only 57,066 fans came to the matches this year, a decrease of almost 19,000 spectators. The players were asked what solution they might have to increase attendance in the future.

Most of them felt that if this tournament was changed to hard courts, many of the top European and South American clay court players wouldn't play.

Arthur Ashh commented, "most of the Europeans and South Americans are very partial toward clay. They don't want to play on anything else. Some of the Europeans don't even bother to to go to Wimbledon. Next year, with the move to cement of the U.S. Open, they're saying they'll never play the U.S. Open."

After his victory, Orantes seemed to state the opinion of most pros here this week about the best interests interests of Longwood's future.

"I think if you don't change the date, it's going to be very difficult to play here in the future because before a big tournament, all the top players would prefer to rest and prepare themselves for the big tournament.

"I think it's very difficult to have two top tournaments one after another because it takes a lot out of you. This tournament is too big to be so close to the Open. Maybe if you move it to earlier in the summer, then I think the players would come' I hope."

Certainly, it seems some kind of change is imminen in Longwood's future. Still, the 51st U.S. Pro Championships had plenty of excitement, surprises, and good tennis action. The doubles champs were the seventh-seeded tean of Victor Pecci and Balazs Taroczy. They defeated unseeded Heinz Gunthard of Switzerland and Van Winitsky of the U.S., 6-3, 3-6, 6-1.

It was a week to remember for tennis enthusiasts and especially for Orantes, who leaves Boston the reigning king of Longwood for another year, and some $27,000 richer.

Americans fail to understand

By Steve Epstein

The difference in world cultures is apparent, but sometimes it shows up in the strangest places, like sporting events for instance.

American tennis fans take for granted that with each tournament they see, players from every corner of the globe are present, causing a mini United Nations for the local tournament director and organizer.

However, ususallly the problems of different cultures only hinder relationships between one player and another. However, this week at Longwood a controversy brewed about culture differences between two players and the crowd that was watching their match.

In the quarter-finals of the U.S. Pro Tennis Championships last Saturday night, Corrado Barazzutti of Italy met Jose Higueras of Spain in a matach. The Boston crowd was not ready for what was in store for them.

Both players are clay court specialists who play the same type of game. They like to stay back at the baseline and force the other player into mistakes after long rallies. This is not indicative of the way most American players play, and it is certainly not thrilling to watch.

As play began, the fans realized immediately what they were in for. Points lasted several minutes, and often, the ball traveled over the net in excess of 100 times during a volley. Although most fans realized that the players were giving their all, they became disinterested and began talking among8 themselves to relieve boredom.

When the umpire asked the fans to please be quiet and respect the game, nothing was accomplished. When he asked again, and threatened to terminate play if the crowd was not silenced, a roar came up from the spectators and many stoo and cheered at the consideration of stopping the match.

At one point, a cruel fan threw a tennis ball onto the court during a tedious point, forcing the stoppage of play. Barazzutti got so exasperated that he began making obscene gestures to the crowd, which began to boo and hoot him.

One of the linemen practically fell asleep during the long volleys and missed three or four lines calls against Higueras in a very important first set tie-breaker. After Higueras lost the tie-breaker, he seemed to give up, eventually retiring due to cramps in the fourth game of the second set.

After the match, tournament referee Frank Hammond was asked about the crowd's reaction. He commented, "When you get two players who are unbelievably oriented toward clay to the average American who doesn't understand a serve and the then moving side to side to try to finish off the point, it's very tough.

American crowds, or the average person, don't understand these long rallies going back and forth. But they were certainly going all-outbec use they were safely hittin the ball back and forth in the court' To say that they didn't try to do their utnost is asinine."

Barazzutti was most upset after the match. He blasted the Longwood fans. He said, "I'm very disappointed in the crowd. They don't understand tennis. When we play, it's nomral that it's not very interesting. That's because we are two players who play well at the back of the court. We can't go to the net every point because we'd lose easily."

He went on,"I cannot understand this crowd. They've watched tennis for many years, but they don't understand anything. They hit a ball on the court and they asked the umpire to stop play. You can't play when you see that the crowd isn't interested in your match.

"You play to win. The umpire asked them to please respect the game of the player, and everybody laughed. It's animal. Why can't they respect me as a player? It's not my fault if Higueras and I play the same game."

Higueras commented that he had played this type of match two weeks before in Indianapolis, and the crowd was tolerant, if not interested. He said, "I'm surprised, because I've played this way other times here in the States and this is the first time that this has happened." Higueras added jokingly, "In Europe, this treatment is normal."

Barazzutti finished with an appeal to the American tennis fans for understanding.

"I want them to understand that there are many types of players with many kinds of games. When I play against another player whose game is

Golf tourney Sept. 10

On Sunday, September 10, the 17th annual Charles H. Cosgrove Memorial Golf Tournament will be held at the Wayland Country Club. Awarding of golf prizes and scholarships will be made at the dinner to be held that evening at St. Bernards Hall in West Newton.

The tournament started in 1962 when sixteen golfers played to honor their late Alderman and golfing friend. It has grown to the point that we now annually have about 120 golfers and 135 at dinner.

By the time the 1965 Tournament was held, enough money had been saved to award a $200.00 scholarship to a deserving West Newton youth. Last year the scholarship was $1,000.00, and the total amount awarded to date is $10,900.00!

Both of these; a fun day of golf with old friends, and the award of a $1,000.00 scholarship, are the things that Charlie Cosgrove would have truly cherished.

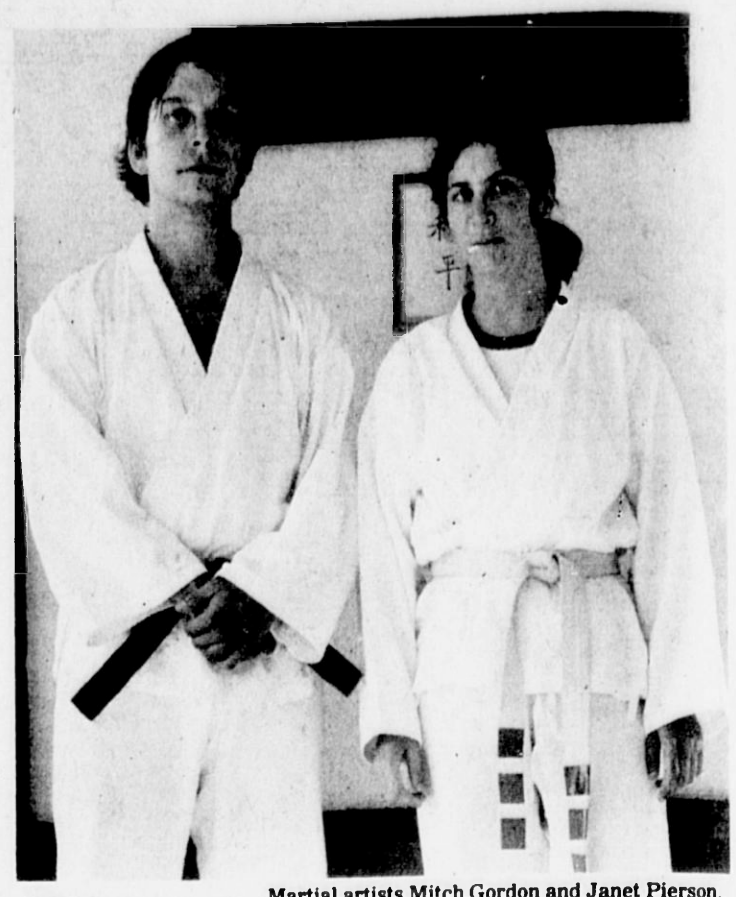

Applicants for the Scholarship awards must be West Newton residents either enrolled or accepted at college or junior college. Scholarship applications are available by writing the scholarship chairman, Dr. Ben Antonellis, 130 Walnut St., Newtonville, by Sept. 1

Co-chairmen of the vent are Edmond White and Paul Burke. Francis "Chick" Carvelli is serving as golf chairman. Bob Cronin is ticket chairman, and Billy Hannan is Prize Chairman.

Joe Cosgrove, John Walsh, Ray Demeo, Mickey Demeo, Jim Ryan, Jim Picariello, Donald King, Frank Vona and Ed Scarlett are committee members.

Tickets are available from any of the committee members. Despite the increase in all costs, tickets are $20.00 for the fifth consecutive year.

Persons wishing to donate to the scholarship fund may do so by contacting the treasurer, Ed White, at 70 Rowe St., Auburndale.

High karate!

Martial artists Mitch Gordon and Janet Pierson, both of Newton, received their respective ranks in karate and ju-jutsu recently at their exam at the Bushido-Kai Martial Arts Center ' in Natick.

Pop Warner team starts play Sat.

The 1978 football season gets underway Saturday morning at 10 o'clock for the Newton Athletic Association Lions as they take on the Medford Mustangs in a non-league game at Newton Highlands.

The Lions and 'B' Tigers have been holding practice since August 14. Both teams are still looking for more players and any boy from the Newton South area aged 11-13 is eligible.

Final rosters are not complete until Sept. 16, but the coaches are asking players to sign up as early as possible. Any parents or boys interested may write NAA FOOTBALL, 1058 Beacon St., NewtOn Centre 02158 or call 244-0637 for forms and information.

Bowling enthusiasts wanted

All bowling enthusiasts are invited to take part in "Bowl a Strike Against Cerebral Palsy" week which is being sponsored from Sept. 23-30 by the United Cerebral Palsy Association of the Metropolitan Area, Inc.

Participating bowling alleys across eastern Massachusetts are providing registration and sponsor forms at the main desk for bowlers young and old, beginner and pro.

Prizes and gift certificates will be awarded and all participants who obtain $50 or more in pledges will receive bowlathon T-shirts.

For more information, call your local bowling lanes or United Cerebral Palsy Association, 358 Chestnut Hill Ave., Boston 02146, tel. 232-9850.

Newton Youth' Hockey Assoc.

..Travel Team Tryouts

Tryouts for Newton Youth Hockey's travel teams will be held according to the following schedule:

DATES: Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 9 & 10, 1978. Players should attend both sessions. Registration will be Saturday, September 9, ½ hour before the scheduled ice time.

LOCATION: Fessenden School Rink, 215 Albermarle Rd., West Newton.

TIMES: Bantams (age 13 & 14): 8 a.m. to 9'30 a.m. Peewees (age 11 & 12): 9:40 a.m. to 11;10 a.m. Squirts (age 9 & & 10): 11:20 a.m. to 12:50 p.m. Mites (age 8 & under): 1 p.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Ages are determined by the player's age on December 31, 1978. New rules require that all players wear a full face shield, and Bantams must wear an internal mouth guard in addition. Also, effective this season, there will be no body checks and no slap shots at the Mite and Squirt levels.

For more information, please call either Frank Rice (332-3075) or Tom McLellan (969-6255).

Angels counting

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — The California Angels Tuesday began mailing applications for American League playoff and World Series tickets to season ticket holders.

If the Angels, now second behind Kansas City in the American League West, should win the division, they would host the first two games of the playoffs with the East champions on Oct. 3 and 4.

South wrestler wins tourney

Newton South wrestler Paul Butters placed first at the Brockton Summer Wrestling Tournament last Friday night. Competing against contestants from all over the state in the 148-pound class, Paul gave the most impressive performance of the tourney, scoring first period pins in each of his three matches. Paul will be a co-captain for the South wrestlers this winter.

No Orange

DENVER (UPI) — An attorney for the Orange Crush soft drink firm indicated to a federal court judge Tuesday he doesn't expect the Denver Broncos of the National Football League to make a repeat performance in the next Super Bowl game.

Chuck Laff, a lawyer for Crush International, made a court appearance in a lawsuit between the football team and his firm. The dispute involves a disagreement over "Orange Crush" the name the NFL team uses to describe its defensive unit.

Hero's welcome greets runner

MEDFORD, Mass. (UPI) — David McGillivray ran all the way home — every one of the 3,452 miles.

The 24-year-old marathon runner Tuesday finished his 80day jaunt from Medford, Ore. to Medford, Mass. to the cheers of 4,000 supporters.

Church bells rang and an air raid siren sounded as the 5-foot-6 inch McGillivray made his final burst to the finish line at the steps of city hall.

"People kept telling me to expect a big welcome but this I didn't expect," said McGillivray, who crossed 13 states, scaled the Rocky Mountains and traversed the plains and prairies of the Midwest to become the seventh person ever to run across the continental United States.

McGillivray began his run June 11 in Medford, Ore. after a sendoff at a Seattle MarinersBoston Red Sox game to benefit the Jimmy Fund, a Bostonbased charity that supports research of cancer afflicting children.

His cross-country odyssey came to a ceremonial finish Tuesday night at another Mariners-Red Sox game when McGillivray, dressed in red shorts, a white shirt, white sneakers and red and white stripped socks ran twice around Fenway Park.

On his second circumnavigation of the field McGillivray donned a Red Sox hat tossed to him from the Boston dugout and received a standing ovation from both teams and the fans.

McGillivray donated a $6,000 check from the Medford, Mass. chamber of commerce to Jimmy Fund officials at the game. Box office proceeds from the Seattle-Boston game were also to be donated to the Jimmy Fund.

Checks from supporters who contributed across the country were expected to boost the total even higher.

"I don't have a lot of money to give to the Jimmy Fund, but I do have a strong pair of legs," McGillivray said. "I figured I might help those who are unfortunate and cannot walk."

Those legs almost failed him two weeks and 652 miles into the run when he developed tight muscles in his right knee, he said.

"I was scared. I thought it was over. My support crew took me to the hospital in Ely, Nevada. The doctor told me to lay off running," McGillivray recalled. "I called my doctor in Boston. He instructed them to give me a shot that would relax the muscles in my knee."

Sabetti eyeing Harvard spot

Newton's Matt Sabetti was one of 104 varsity candidates on hand when Harvard opened its 1978 pre-season football camp yesterday.

The 5-11, 190-pound junior linebacker will be vying for a varsity berth on a Crimson defense decimated by graduation losses.

"Matt gives us some much needed depth at the critical linebacker slot," says Harvard head coach Joe Restic. "The position is so prone to injuries that we're grateful to have someone of Matt's calibre to call on to spell our starting secondary personnel."

Sabetti is a 1976 graduate of Newton South High School, where he won All-County honors in basketball and football as the Newton captain. An Economics major at Harvard, Matt is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sabetti who now reside in Cambridge.

Defense is the biggest question mark for Restic in 1978. Ranked at the bottom of the league in defensive statistic in 1977, Harvard's Ivy League fortunes will hinge on a revitalized defense.

"There's no question that we'll have to concent on defense in our training camp," says Restic. "We don't use a ball-control offense; we like to nake the big play. That means our defense is on the field a lot longer. They'll be under constant pressure. Some new personnel, people who have come up through the freshman and junior varsity programs like Matt Sabetti, will have to rise to the occasion early on defense."

Harvard is coming off a disappointing 4-5 campaign in 1977, the first losing season in the eight-year Restic Era (40-22-1). The Crimson's 4-3 Ivy mark was good for a third place tie with Dartmouth and Pennsylvania, teams Harvard defeated during the season in the highly competitive circuit. Restic believes the Ivy logjam will continue with defending champion Yale and runner-up Brown being chased by a very bala division.

'Evergreen' shows immigrants seeking, finding 'The Dream'

By PATRICIA MARVIN

Belva Plain, "Evergreen," Delacorte, 593 pp. $9.95.

The heroine of this novel is a beauty with dark red hair, but she is also intelliqent, sensitive, hardworking and humble, and she remains a true believer in the Jewish faith of her forebearers.

Anna Friedman is only 16 when she arrives in America from Poland where her family has been ravished by pogroms and cholera, leaving only herself and twin brothers left in Vienna.

She works in the sweatshops with the thousands of other immigrants who hold the dream of the Great Success in America in the early 20th century.

To Anna it comes, and to her children and grandchildren, whose lives we follow in this fascinating story which begins in Poland in 1906 and ends seven decades later in a wealthy New York suburb.

After learning to speak English, Anna becomes a maid in the home of the Werners, Jewish banking millionaires whose son Paul falls in love with her. Marriage is impossible, and Anna wisely marries instead Joseph Friedman, an immigrant as poor as she.

They live happily in a two-room tenement where Maury, their son, is born. When Joseph needs $2,000 to buy an apartment house he begs Anna to ask the Werners for the loan.

Anna goes to their home and Paul gives her the money but, still loving her, he seduces her and she conceives his child. Iris is born, Paul Werner's daughter, but Joseph is never to know the truth.

Joseph and his partner Malone, a Catholic builder and contracter, buy land and build apartments and in a few years become wealthy. Anna is a devoted mother and sees her two children live in luxury and attend private schools.

Maury excels and is headed for Yale; Iris is homely but intelligent and artistic. Suddenly the crash of 1929 wipes Joseph's company out, leaving only the one apartment house with which he began.

Yet through struggle and ingenuity Maury goes to Yale and graduates with honor, marries a girl out of his faith and has a son.

Tragedy strikes in the form of an automobile accident and Eric, their son, is claimed by his mother's parents. Ten years later when his grandparents die, Eric comes hone to Anna and Joseph. they as strangers and the synagogue a mystery to him.

The late thirties bring the horror of Nazi occupation and some of Anna's brothers' family die in a concentration camp. Dr. Theodore Stern whose wife and child, Anna's niece, had thus perished, comes to New York and contacts them.

Grief-stricken, he asks Iris, now out of college and teaching, to marry him. She accepts, and from this marriage come four grandchildren for Anna and Joseph.

After the war is over, Joseph buys land and becomes a developer, again prospers, and purchases a mansion in Westchester County. Eric grows to manhood and finishes Dartmouth, prepares to enter his grandfather's business, but takes a tour of Europe first.

He is drawn to Israel, and while staying at a kibbutz, is killed in an Arab raid, dying heroically defending a building full of children.

Iris's children grow up privileged and typically American, unaware of their grandparents' immigrant struggles and poverty. When Joseph dies of a heart attack, they stand at the point of adulthood, one a medical student, one a campus radical and socialist, one a musician at Juilliard, and a daughter who marries young and gives Anna a great-grandchild.

In her seventies and alone, regal and still beautiful, Anna has seen Paul Werner perhaps four times over the years. He recognizes Iris as his daughter but Anna rejects his proposals of marriage, determined to keep her betrayal of Joseph a secret throughout her life.

Belva Plain's style is direct and forceful. In three generations she traces the American dream from immigrant poverty to great wealth, education and success.

The strength of family bonds and religion are interwoven with the search for identity, driving ambition and the social milieu of America in the 20th century.

Insurance industry defends discrimination in auto insurance

By LeROY POPE
UPI Business Writer

EW YORK (UPI) — Insurance companies are urging ago-slow response to recommendations of the National Association of Insurance Commssioners for drastic reforms in automobile insurance pricing.

The changes proposed by the commissioners meeting in Washington in mid-June ultimately could lead to a ban on any consideration of the sex, age or marital status of drivers or of locality in fixing rates.

The commissioners proposed that pricing of automobile insurance be based on the design and size of cars with the idea this eventually would force both Detroit and foreign automakers to build cars that are safer and less costly to repair.

The commissioners also called on the insurance companies to cooperate with them in providing data on which to base rate reform. The commissioners said only the insurance companies possess the necessary information.

Massachusetts already has outlawed rates that discriminate on the basis of sex or age. While many insurance companies strongly opposed this ban, one leading group of companies represented by the American Insurance Association adopted a wait and see policy.

Nevertheless, a spokesman for the Insurance Information Institute said most insurance companies feel statistical evidence shows the insurance commissioners are mistaken if they believe forbidding the setting of premiums on the basis of drivers' age, sex, marital status or place of residence will bring rates down.

"It will just redistribute the premiums," the spokesman said. "If the companies are forbidden to penalize young, unmarried, male drivers with higher rates, they'll have to charge older drivers and women more."

He said the ban on sex discrimination in rates would be the easiest for the industry to accept because sex discrimination is based on a less impressive amount of statistical justification than basing rates on age or marital status. He said the statitistcal evidence that young single drivers have the most accidents and most costly accidents is overwhelming and therefore they should be penalized.

On the subject of locality, the institute spokesman said the statistical evidence for continuing the present system of penalizing drivers living in areas with high accident rates is even more impressive.

In recommending the proposed changes, a task force report prepared by the insurance commissioners association, claimed that "most classifications for young and single drivers are derived from behavioral assumptions based on traditional sex roles and social patterns and may or may not be applicable to individuals..." and that "the fairness of such rate discrimination is under increased scrutiny" because it smacks of "guilt by association."

But the Insurance Information Institute spokesman denied that rates are based on any behavioral assumptions. They are based only on hard statisitcal evidence, he said.

He also raised the point that state insurance commissioners are political appointees — some even are elected — and that uneconomic political considerations might color their views.

In their aim to price insurance in such a way as to force the manufacturers to cars safer and easier to repair, the National Association of Insurance Commissioners raised several interesting points. For example, they said the variation of costs for the same repair on different models was enormous. They said it ranged from $13 to $406 in the same kind of controlled accident for different cars.

The major reason automobiles are so expensive to repair nowadays, the commissioners said, is that the profit-conscious automakers design them with an eye to ease and cheapness of assembly, not to ease and cheapness of repair.

It cited the bumper, which nowadays is a one-piece welded unit which is obviously easier and cheaper to attach to the car on the factory assembly line than the old-fashioned bumper. But if it's hit in an accident, the whole bumper has to be replaced at a high cost, whereas years ago any competent mechanic could repair a damaged bumper cheaply. This situation is designed into many parts of the car and it forces up repair bills and insurance rates.

The commissioners also noted that the Federal Trade Commission has monopoly suits against General Motors over crash parts for cars, prices of which went up 19.9 percent in 1975, then 9.3 percent in 1976 and 10.3 percent last year.

The commissioners also claimed the antitrust laws prevent the insurance companies from uniting to exert countervailing economic leverage against the auto industry to hold repair costs down and force the design of safer cars.

Finally the commissioners said that, "Essentially the same (car) models are good or bad from year to year. Proceeding from this, Allstate (Sears Roebuck's insurance group) has developed a rating plan which increases premiums for those models for which experience is worse than average, and decreases premiums for those models with better than average experience."

The commissioners, thus, appear to favor basing rates on statistical experience as regards the performance of machines but to oppose it as regards the performance of drivers.

Foreign marketing of Kansas' hard red winter wheat

By JOHN C. BRADEN

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI) — Most of those amber waves of hard red winter wheat are in the elevator now. The farmer has done his job. It's up to the American marketing system to sell his product.

Wheat marketing is a case of export or die. Two out of every three bushels of wheat grown in the United States must be exported.

Most of the wheat grown in Kansas — the nation's largest wheat producer — and other plains states is hard red winter wheat, the descendant of a variety brought by immigrants from the Ukraine 104 years ago.

The variety is tailor-made for Kansas, hardy enough to be planted in the fall, and survive the winter and the hot, dry, windy spring and summer. It's also a cheap, nutritious winter pasture for cattle, another major Kansas product.

"Because of the makeup of hard red winter, it has to spend about 45 days at a temperature below 40 degrees," says Myron Krenzin, administrator of the Kansas Wheat Commission in Hutchinson. "It has a dormant stage. If you planted hard red winter in the spring, it would be a beautiful plant. It would head out, but there would be nothing in the head."

Its chief disadvantage is it has a somewhat lower protein content than some other varieties of wheat from other parts of the country and other nations. However, Krenzin said the difference is made up because the protein in hard red winter is of higher quality.

"There's protein and there's quality protein," he said. "Take two pencils. One is better than the other because of the way it's made."

Although it makes no actual difference in the wheat quality, another disadvantage is its reddish color. Krenzin said it sometimes is difficult to sell to foreign buyers who are used to purchasing varieties of white wheat.

"For example, England mills their flour to a color standard and it's easier to get their color out of white wheat than red," Krenzin said.

The Wheat Commission, responsible for helping find and develop markets for Kansas' No. 1 product, is faced with such problems when dealing with millers who are reluctant to change suppliers and types of grain.

An unexpected opportunity came to Midwest winter wheat marketers this spring when rainfall caused sprouting problems in spring wheat from Canada and North Dakota. Wheat marketers saw the opportunity to advertise the millions of bushels of 12.5 percent protein hard red winter wheat as a substitute to foreign markets.

"We saw a chance to convert these foreign buyers to using hard red, which I understand, since the first of the year, they've been using," Krenzin said. "Whether it will last more than a year, I don't know, but millers and wheat buyers tend to get into a habit. They don't like to change grists. So this could be the opening for hard red winter wheat."

Another breakthrough came with wheat blending studies conducted for the Wheat Commission in Europe. They showed native European wheat can be successfully mixed with 30 percent or more American hard red winter wheat for an improved baking blend. It is further ammunition in efforts to promote the U.S. product.

Recently an experimental white winter wheat was developed by Kansas State University that promises the same qualities as red winter wheat, perhaps a higher protein level, and caters to the preference of English millers and others who shy away from the red grain.

"I would say we will never replace red, but maybe with another wheat there will be more sales," Krenzin said. "Instead of buying white wheat from Washington, perhaps they'll buy it from Kansas."

The new variety, still considered experimental, won't be available to farmers for a few more years. And one initial problem would be handling and storage since red dominates most bins and elevators now. The government forbids mixing more than 3 percent of a class of wheat in with another class.

Western Europe imports about 240 million bushels of wheat annually, only about 37 million bushels of which is hard red winter wheat from the United States.

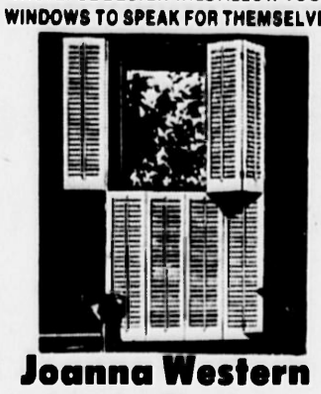

The administrator was optimistic of the prospects for foreign sales.

He said the People's Republic of China appears to be in the market for more grain. Although a good Soviet harvest might reduce buying from Russia, that nation still is expected to buy several million tons.

Krenzin also pointed to drought in Brazil and needs of other developing countries as factors in Kansas wheat sales. He mentions Japan as a good customer whose citizens have developed a taste for products made with American wheat.

The Wheat Commission, Kansas State University and grain interests have been stimulating foreign tastes by offering courses to grain millers and buyers from around the world.

In May, 25 Japanese millers came to Kansas for a short course in milling wheat. Visits have been set up for other delegations from Egypt, Iran, the United Kingdom, Central America, Bolivia, Romania, Ghana, Morocco and Portugal.

Americans don't understand

like mine, I can't go to the net every ball. I can't change my game. They must understand that."

Obviously, the crowd reaction is important, for the following evening when Harold Solomon played Barazzutti, Barrazzutti tried to change his game to please the crowd. However, when he fell behind, he was forced to stay back. Still, the match had more excitement than the previous night's encounter and the crowd stayed calm.

Solomon commented after the match, "I heard about the crowd going beserk last night with these guys out there hitting a million balls. I'd rather go out and go for shots and I tried to in the first set. Finally, I decided that if the crowd was going to get upset, let them get upset. I wanted to win.

"I had been thinking about it all night — because I thought that probably the only way I'd be able to beat him is to go out and stay at the baseline."

Solomon felt differently about this night's crowd. "I've played matches like this before and the crowd really has gone beserk but the crowd was actually pretty good tonight."

The European players seemed to feel that the Americans should understand their style and tolerate it. Solomon feels it's the crowd's right to express displeasure if it doesn't like the action, although it shouldn't expect the plave to change his strategy.

Arthur Asne commented about the fans, "The crowds can be whatever they want to be. They pay their own $10. They can come in and throw popcorn if they like."

However, it all comes down to the fact that a specialized brand of European tennis was being played by two athletes to trying to win the only way they could against each other. Whether the crowd should have been understanding is debatable.

However, they sould not have interferred with play by throwing a ball on the court and taunting the players. The frustration in the eyes of a disconsolate winner, Corrado Barazzutti in the locker room after the match told the whole story. A loss would have been more acceptable to him, if only he felt his playing style and he himself had the respect of the Longwood throng.

Barazzutti and Higueras will both be back next year, according to statements made after the match. They hope that the fans in attendance will try to be a bit more understanding if they should happen to meet again.

Newton road race set

The Newton Athletic Association is sponsoring its first annual 6.2 mile road race on Sunday, September 10 at 11 a.m. at the Newton Highlands Field.

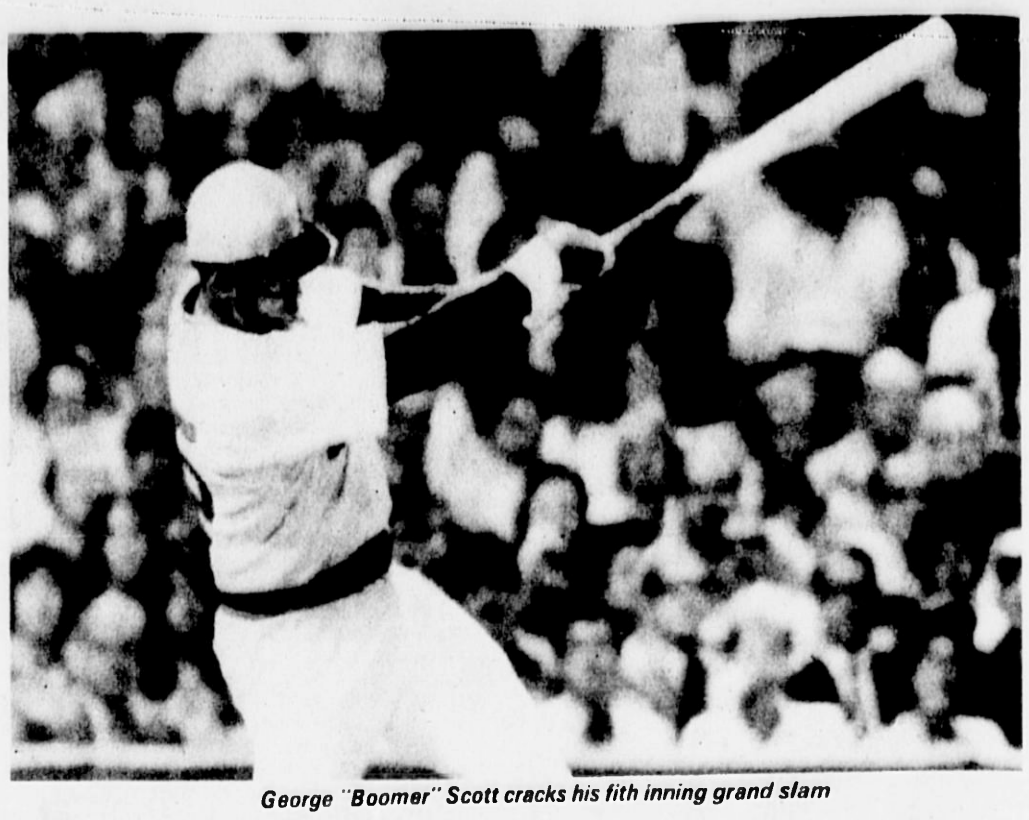

The pre-entry fee is $3.00 per participant until Saturday, Sept. 2. After that, a post-entry fee of $4.00 will be charged. Mail entries to Dr. Lewis Millender, 63 Lovett Rd., Newton Center, Ma., 02159 or call 527-6272.

The race will wind through town streets and start and finish at the Newton Highlands Field. Aid stations with water will be available at the second and fourth mile marks.

Trophies will be given to the first finisher in five divisions: men's winner, women's winner, Newton men's winner, Newton wonen's winner and the master's (over 50-years-old) champion.

South wrestler

Newton South High's Paul Butters placed first at the Brockton Summer Wrestling Tournament held recently. Competing against contestants from all over the state in the 148-pound class, Paul gave the most impressive performance of the tourney, scoring first period pins in each of his three matches. Paul will be a co-captain this winter for the South wrestlers.

George "Boomer" Scott cracks his fith inning grand slam

Sox' 'Dragon' spits fire

BOSTON (UPI) — It had been more than three years since pitcher Dick Drago started a game.

But the "Black Dragon" threw enough fire for six innings and rode the crest of a batting explosion Tuesday to lead the Boston Red Sox to a 10-5 romp over the errorplagued Seattle Mariners. It was Boston's fifth straight win and kept them 7½ games up on second-place New York.

Drago pitched six innings, allowing four runs and striking out two before yielding to Tom Burgmeier, who notched his fourth save.

He gave up single runs in the first, second and fifth and sixth to improve his record to 3-4.

"It was hard to relax out there. I thought I would be able to handle it better but I ended up overthrowing and getting behind hitters," Drago said. "The four runs in the first were a big help." His last start was July 11, 1975 for Baltimore.

Boston's four first-inning tallies off loser Byron McLaughlin, 2-5, came on a Jim Rice single, consecutive doubles by Carlton Fisk and Carl Yastrzemski and two of the four Mariners' errors.

George Scott sealed the win with a grand slam homer in the fifth off Glenn Abbott, his 11th and third career grand slam.

"Anytime you win you feel good," said the normally talkative Scott, who refused to answer questions because he has been the target of heavy media criticism. "I'm mad at everybody."

Seattle skipper Darrell Johnson, who saw his team throw away Monday night's game, noted the Mariners chalked up 13 wins in August to give them a .500 mark for the month, their best ever.

"We've improved the last two months," said Johnson, whose Mariners are 19-24 since the All Star break. "When you play bad, you're going to get beat and we played bad. The Red Sox are the best team in the American League right now; just look at the record. By the same record,

Tennis Open flunks first act

NEW YORK (UPI) — It was a gala opening in New York, the dedication of a new $10 million facility to house the U.S. Open Tennis Championships with the usual number of celebrities in attendance.

Unfortunately, very few other people, the ones who pay the bills to support new stadiums, bothered to show up for the ceremonies despite a pleasantly warm summer evening.

A disappointing turnout of 6,186 was on hand in Flushing Meadow, hardly making a dent in the 19,500-seat National Tennis Center.

Top-seed Bjorn Borg had the honor of playing the first match and he swept through the first 10 games against South African veteran Bob Hewitt before settling for an uneventful 6-0, 6-2 victory that required only 51 minutes.

Hewitt was so gratified when he finally won his first game that he raised his hand in triumph and saluted the cheering crowd.

Tracy Austin, the shy, 15year-old fifth seed, was even more merciless in the second match of the night, also capturing the first 10 games before disposing of Pat Bostrom of Seattle, Wash., 6-0, 6-1, in 45 minutes.

Borg wasn't as overjoyed as one might think with his easy passage into the second round. His dismay was caused by the concrete-based surface he has played on in only three previous tournaments.

He also suspects the surface was tailor-made to suit the power games of such Americans as Jimmy Connors, Vitas Gerulaitis and Roscoe Tanner.

"I was very surprised at the court," said the 22-year-old Swede. "They were very fast, too fast. ... "This suits the American players perfect, for sure. In the last few years at Forest Hills the American players were complaining of the clay, that it was too slow."

Austin, a crowd favorite when she reached the quarter-finals of last year's Open, also commented that the court was faster than she expected, but it didn't seem to bother her.

"I thought I played pretty well," she said, to which Bostrom, seated beside her, added, "like a tiger."

Nevertheless, Tracy doesn't profess to like her chances of winning.

"I wouldn't put my money on me," she said softly. "I have some tough matches and in the quarters I'd have to play Chrissie (Evert)."

Bostrom put in another good word for her conqueror, though, saying, "Tracy's short-changing herself. She's playing very well and I think she has as much a chance as anyone."

A full schedule of play was to begin this morning at 11, with Connors, the second seed, meeting Tom Gullikson in the second match. Arthur Ashe, the No. 16 seed, was listed to open against Ross Case, and other feature matches today included Raul Ramirez vs. John Alexander, Gerulaitis vs. Pascal Portes and Dick Stockton vs. Vijay Amritraj.

In the two feature night matches, defending champion Guillermo Vilas, the No. 3 seed, is paired against Cliff Drysdale and sixth-seed Brian Gottfried against Phil Dent.

Knicks nail down Webster

NEW YORK (UPI) — The race isn't always to the swift. Sometimes, the runnerup gets lucky and winds up the winner by default, which is how the New York Knicks finally cornered the kind of center they've been trying to sign for years in seven-foot-one Marvin Webster.

He didn't come cheap, costing $3 million over five years, but in the current market for basketball players, that's a relative bargain. At least the Knicks think so, and they're the ones shelling out the money.

Only three years in pro ball, the 26-year-old Webster already is regarded one of the better defensive centers in the NBA.

Last season, he was a workhorse for the Seattle SuperSonics, dominating the boards in the final championship series even though the Washington Bullets eventually won the title. At the conclusion of those playoffs, Webster became a free agent.

With Larry Fleisher, head of the NBA Players Association, representing him, Webster began listening to the offers. Ultimately, it came down to only two teams, the SuperSonics and the Knicks. Dollarwise, their offers were comparable and that being the case, Webster had no difficulty making his decision.

He would stay with Seattle.

Fleisher informed the Sonics of Webster's decision and last Thursday morning he called Mike Burke, President of the Knicks, and told him the same thing.

But then something happened.

The "understanding" Webster and Fleisher had, or thought they had, with the SuperSonics turned into a misunderstanding.

None of the parties involved cared to be specific about what caused the breach between Webster and the Sonics.

Fleisher turned back to the Knicks.

He called Burke back Friday and told him something had happened in the negotiations with the Sonics that Webster didn't like.

"Is your offer still on the table?" Fleisher asked Burke.

"Yes," said Burke.

Whereupon, Fleisher and the Knicks' attorneys negotiated all last weekend and Webster finally signed with the New Yorkers Monday night.

At Tuesday's news conference in Madison Square Garden, where Webster posed with Knicks' Coach Willis Reed, he said he decided to sign with the Knicks because "they offered the truth."

The Sonics, Webster elaborated under questioning, had "reneged on a promise."

"My decision wasn't based on money at all, although I consider myself a good ballplayer and feel I should be paid that way," he added.

Among those present Tuesday were Sonny Werblin, president of Madison Square Garden; Knicks' General Manager Eddie Donovan and Knick players Bob McAdoo, Spencer Haywood, Jim McMillian and Toby Knight.

Werblin confirmed Webster would be the highest paid player on the team and said the Knicks had not yet decided on the terms of compensation to Seattle. If the two teams can't agree on those terms, Larry O'Brien, the NBA Commissioner, will have to step in and decide.

"We asked the commissioner what he intended to do and he said he would decide after we signed Marvin," Werblin said. "I imagine the commissioner will be fair. I don't think he will break up the Knickerbockers."

Haywood, one of the Knicks' forwards, looked absolutely delighted with the addition of Webster, and admitted he was.

"I've played nine pro seasons, but never with a center," he said. "I mean a big center like Marvin. I need to be in a championship atmosphere and his coming here gives us that kind of atmosphere.."

When Webster graduated from Morgan State, the Atlanta Hawks had the NBA draft rights to him as well as to David Thompson. The Hawks didn't have the money to sign either one and gave the Knicks permission to talk with Webster.

National Smoker Study Hails Merit.

'Enriched Flavor'™ cigarette scores high marks in five key areas.

Can MERIT deliver the flavor of leading high tar brands?

Does MERIT satisfy smokers over a long period—or are MERIT smokers slipping back to old high tar favorites?

Read the bottom-line results of new research conducted with smokers like yourself.

MERIT Breakthrough Confirmed

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers rate MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading high tar cigarettes tested! Cigarettes having up to twice the tar.

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers confirm taste satisfaction of low tar MERIT.

And in detailed interviews conducted among current MERIT smokers:

Confirmed: 85% of MERIT smokers say it was an "easy switch" from high tar brands.

Confirmed: Overwhelming majority of MERIT smokers say their former high tar brands weren't missed!

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 MERIT smokers not considering other brands.

First Major Alternative To High Tar Smoking

MERIT has proven conclusively that it not only delivers the flavor of high tar brands—but continues to satisfy.

This ability to satisfy over long periods of time could be the most important evidence to date that MERIT is what it claims to be: The first major alternative to high tar smoking.

Farmers, state fairs have changed only a mite

By SANDRA L. LATIMER

ITLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Banners wave, band music battles calliope sounds fomamusement rides and carnival barkers vy for attention at food stands and games of skill.

It's all the fever of a state fair where Mom, Dad and the kids exhibit their prized projects and look at new products.

Today's state fair resembles a county fair, only much larger. But both still retain the family atmosphere that created fairs more than 100 years ago.

When the crops were harvested, the farmer would reserve the best to take to the fair. His wife would pack her best canned pickles, bake her favorite cake and take her quilt to display.

A fair also was a place where new products developed. A couple of farmers discussing a problem with equipment got advice from a merchant and soon there was a new product.

A couple of farmers, boasting of their tractors got a judge to decide whose tractor could pull weights farther.

A day at the fair was a family outing. So there had to be something for the children to do. Amusement rides were added.

Then came the midway. And, of course, food stands.

By and large, fairs today are basically what they were years ago when most of America lived in rural areas.

With some changes: Early exhibitors were the farmer and his wife, while the kids came along for the fun. Today, while Mom and Dad still exhibit, the emphasis is on young exhibitors.

The 125th Ohio State Fair, which just concluded its 13 day run, had some 63,000 items on display from more than 10,000 exhibitors. Some 2.5 million people paid at the gate.

---

Youngsters from all over the state brought their farm and home economics-related projects.

Tamie Rawn, 15, Canal Winchester, Ohio, has been showing livestock for six years. She and her two sisters were influenced by their brother Terry, now 20.

"We exhibit for competition, the chance to meet new people and go lots of places," said Tamie.

"And for the sportsmanship," said sister, Tricia, 13, "and challenge," said sister, Tonya, 16.

Many exhibitors do not stop when they outgrow junior fair, which ends when they graduate from high school.

Bob Rowe, 25, Gahanna, has been showing sheep for 15 years. Now he exhibits as a senior.

"I got into exhibiting for competition," he said. "It gets addictive."

While youngsters depend on the sale of their animals at the auction to cover expenses and put a little in the bank, Rowe and senior showmen use this as a way to get their name known in breeding circles.

Exhibitors work on their projects throughout the fair.

"You have to bathe, feed, water and bed down the animal," said Deanna Hart of New Albany, whose steer took grand champion award at the Franklin County Fair, and was the first animal sold at the livestock auction.

Many times youngsters have slept on a bale of hay at close to their animal. Nowadays, most stay in dormitories on the grounds.

The livestock auction comes near the end of the fair.

"First year members get emotionally attached to their animal," said Cindi Grover, 20, of Washington Court House, reigning Lamb and Wool Queen and a sheep exhibitor. "It's the first thing they had that is really theirs and they do cry."

Cindi remembers when she was younger and her sheep were sold.

"I had the champion sheep for two years in a row. I had fed and weighed the sheep every day and walked them every night. When I realized it was my last market lamb at the county fair, it was kind of sad. It was like a good friend leaving. I cried."

Exhibitors look forward to the livestock auction, knowing the sale will attract top buyers and high prices.

"Animals sold at the junior fair bring about 10 cents more than the current market price," said Brenda Esty of New Albany, who exhibited dairy cattle. "Buyers know the quality of the 4-H meat."

Miss Esty has shown dairy cattle for eight years. Her father showed dairy cattle and so did her brothers and sisters before her. Her two younger brothers are doing it, too.

"I feel cattle is your biggest money-making project, but then we've never tried anything else," she said. "You put down a couple hundred dollars for a steer. We raise our own grain for feed so that helps. And by the time it (the animal) is sold, you've made a couple of hundred dollars."

Youngsters put the money away for college or to invest in more animals, or like Cindi, when she was 11, to pay off a loan she had gotten at the bank for her project the year before.

She remembers getting that loan to buy her Dorset sheep.

"My father co-signed for me. I was scared to death I wouldn't be able to pay it back. But that year I cleared enough to pay back the loan and put a little away, too."

---

• Not all young exhibitors are from the farm. Some are from the city or suburbs. They, too, get into the act with their 4-H, home economics and school club displays, scout troops, even marching bands and choirs that perform at various places on the 360-acre grounds.

Meanwhile, the women are just as busy with exhibits, displays and projects. Fairs have seen an increase in the number of fine arts displays.

Among displays in the Fine Arts area are quilts, afghans, knitted and crocheted items, canned and baked goods, sewing projects.

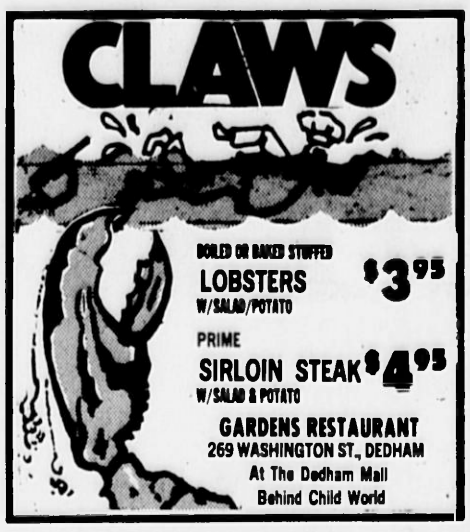

"Exhibiting is a hobby with women," said Carol Rings of Columbus, a home economist who judges fairs. "They like the competitiveness. They put their best efforts forth and want to see how it stacks up with someone else's."

Rules for the various contests require the item be made by the exhibitor. But it may be made from a kit, such as an afghan, a sweater or a latch hook rug. And some entries are originals or modifications of patterns.

Marjorie Obrist of Columbus, showed a crocheted pillow with gingerbread-color bottom and gingerbread lattice across the top to resemble a cherry pie.

"It's a modification of a pattern from a book," she said. "I wish it were an original."

Then there was the latch hook rug proclaiming a high school basketball team had won the conference championship and the needlepoint pillow that told the story of a high school golfer.

Boyer charm made him a 'great lover' of the screen

Boyer's debonair manner and suave French accent captured the hearts of feminine moviegoers as he made screen love to Hollywood's most glamorous leading ladies, including Hedy Lamarr, Marlene Dietrich, Greta Garbo, Jean Harlow, Ingrid Bergman and Rita Hayworth.

But Boyer was also a fine actor who won critical praise for stage and screen performances.

He was active in television not only as an actor but as a successful executive. With Dick Powell, David Niven and Tom McDermott he formed "Four Star Productions," which became a top producer of network television shows. Boyer served as vice president in charges of finances.

The role that firmly established Boyer as one of the screen's greatest matinee idols was in the 1938 movie "Algiers," when he was widely quoted as whispering to Hedy Lamarr the famed line, "Come wiz me to ze Casbah."

But Boyer denied he ever spoke the line which became synonymous with his name.

"I never spoke that line in my life," he once said. "Nor has anyone else to my knowledge except for people impersonating me."

Nor was he happy about his title as a great lover.

"It is something I never earned nor wanted," he said. "I am not a lady-killer on screen nor off ... the majority of my roles have not been romantic ones."

His personal life was quiet. He married English actress Pat Patterson in February, 1934. Their son, Michael, was born Dec. 9, 1943 and died in a tragic shooting accident in 1965.

His best known films included "Gaslight" opposite Ingrid Bergman and "Love Affair" with Irene Dunne. Greta Garbo was his co-star in "Conquest" while Marlene Dietrich joined him in the "Garden of Allah." His leading lady in "Tovarich" was Caludette Colbert with whom he later co-starred in the Broadway hit "The Marriage Go-Round." Some of his other movies were "Shanghai," "Hold Back the Dawn" and "Tales of Manhattan."

Boyer was born in Figeac, France, on Aug. 28, 1899, to Maurice Boyer, a farm machinery manufacturer and dealer, and his wife.

Boyer displayed a remarkable memory at an early age. When he was three, he could recite a long, complicated religious work.

He loved school theatricals as a child and his father, who died when the boy was 10, thought his son might become a lawyer.

He entered the Sorbonne in Paris at age 18, but he spent his spare time haunting theaters. He became a great admirer and disciple of Lucien Guitry, the Parisan pioneer of lifelike acting.

He roamed Paris attending weddings, funerals, clinics, court trials and political meetings to study the mannerisms, facial expressions and reactions of people in various situations as part of his actor's apprenticeship.

After earning a degree in philosophy from the Sorbonne, he enrolled in the Conservatoire of the Drama.

Upon graduation, he was signed for a leading in "Lat Bataille" which firmly established his reputation as an actor.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

Figures released by MLS committee of Greater Boston Real Estate Board, for 1977, reflect a 53% increase in number of Cooperative Sales. The average sale price on a home was $48,936 during 1977. The MLS committee hope to have the new computerized listing book, in full operation by Spring of this year. The brokers of Council I&M MLS group meet at a monthly breakfast meeting, to further promote the services of MLS. There are well over 90 offices from the 16 towns, involved. Speakers are invited to address the group, and listings are brought to the attention of attending members, that might offer some unusual features, as acreage, or waterfront properties, etc. All in all membership in MLS grew substantially during 77 and is looking foreard to a bigger and better one for 1978.

"It costs nothing to find out if you can learn real estate this proven no-textbook way"

You can't learn today's real estate from yesterday's textbooks. Not only are most texts obsolete before they're used, most successful real estate professionals are not the bookworm type.
So, as skilled educators and brokers, we've developed teaching techniques that are both current and understandable. Since 1972, we've proved to thousands — regardless of age or experience—that they can enjoy learning real estate. And can pass, through actual classroom pre-tests, the toughest licensing exams.
But is our method for you? Here's how to find out—without risking a penny.

Sell yourself or walk away.

Come, as our guest, to any of the introductory sessions listed below. We start right in teaching you the business of real estate. Then, at the break, you can leave with no obligation. Or you can enroll for the rest of our 24-hour course—for three payments of $55 each—and continue learning.

Evening Classes 7 P.M. to 9:30 P.M.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 5
Framingham Holiday Inn Route 9, opp. Shopper's World
Worcester: Howard Johnson Motor Lodge, College Square Exit, Rt. 290.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 6

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 7
Braintree, South Shore Shopping Plaza, Lower Level

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 9
Braintree, South Shore Plaza Lower Level
Waltham, 771 Main Street, Route 20, opposite Post Office.

Twice-a-week Classes

Waltham night starts Monday September 4, 7 P.M., 771 Main Street, Route 20, opposite Post Office. (Mon. and Thurs.)

Braintree night starts Tuesday, September 5, 7 P.M. South Shore Shopping Plaza, Lower Level (Tues. and Thurs.)

Trial Exam week before state exam - 4½ hours - location to be announced

Start now to pass Oct. 28 exam.

In just eight weeks you'll be ready to pass your licensing exam. (We're so sure of our method, we offer free counseling and repeat tuition to anyone who fails to pass the first time.) So join us now — in what could be the most fascinating and profitable learning experience of your life.

Our facility cares for the elderly and the chronically ill. You work with a dedicated team whose approach to geriatrics is progressive as well as compassionate.
Our nurses enjoy the opportunity to give individualized care in a moderately paced atmosphere, where every day is a learning experience and where the opportunity to gain supervisory experience through a charge system is readily available. And that can mean promotions.
Whether you're a new or experienced nurse, St. John of God Hospital prides itself on providing an exceptional professional environment, responsive to your needs and concerned about your development.
Flexible full and part time schedules include days with rotation or permanent evenings and nights. Every other weekend off.

And . . . the benefits are exceptional, competitive salaries, 3 weeks vacation,

PROFESSIONAL OPPORTUNITIES

Union Carbide Imaging Systems is rapidly becoming the LEADER in the development and marketing of advanced medical imaging instruments. Our rapid growth has created openings for highly qualified individuals who wish to make significant contributions to all levels of our operations from assembly through top engineering positions. Currently, we are actively searching for:

SOFTWARE ENGINEER
Our computer effort is growing and we need an individual who will help bring sound engineering practice to the construction and support of our software packages. You should have at least 1 year experience with DG and/or DEC real-time FORTRAN and Assembler language. The ideal candidate should be well organized and not afraid to dig into and modify existing programs when clearly specified, yet cautious about making unnecessary changes. You will also be involved in the production of Software Modules for our Medical Image Data Aquisition and Display consoles. Additional responsibilities include documentation of software and release updates.

MECHANICAL ASSEMBLER
A mechanical aptitude, familiarity with the use of hand tools, and standard machine assembly practices is needed to work on our equipment. The position has a lifting requirement of 50 lbs. and we are looking for 1 year of related experience.

ELECTRONIC ASSEMBLERS
Experience in reading schematics is needed for electronic assembly work including wiring, soldering, PC board assembly, harnessing and cabling.

CHIEF MECHANICAL ENGINEER
The ideal candidate for this position will have a BS/MS in Mechanical Engineering or equivalent training, in addition to 10 - 15 years direct engineering development experience with a strong specialization in mechanisms and machine design. Additionally, a thorough knowledge and experience with heat transfer, deflection and stress analysis is required. Supervisory experience is a plus.

RPG II PROGRAMMER
We are seeking a programmer to code, document, test and implement programs on our 3741 and Systems/3. A minimum of 1 year active programming with RPG II, tables, arrays, subroutines, disc files, OCL and nested procedures is required. Ability to communicate, coordinate, and meet commitments necessary. This is a newly created position. As the only this individual will work with the new Data Processing Manager in installing several planned applications.

SR. TEST TECHNICIAN
To test, trouble shoot and repair our sophisticated instruments. This position requires ASEE degree or equivalent training with 2 - 3 years diagnostic experience on analog/digital system and computer background.

For prompt consideration, please rush your resume in confidence to:

ACCOUNTS PAYABLE

Our Chief Accountant needs a highly organized and accurate individual to match invoices to packing slips and purchase orders and verify amounts, record discounts, resolve discrepancies with vendor/suppliers, prepare and mail checks, reconcile bank statements, handle vendor calls, maintain accounts payable files and capital asset records and perform special assignments.

Ideal candidate will have 3 years experience in a small manufacturing environment; exposure to other accounting department functions a definite plus; present method is manual, considering in-house computerization, and appropriate experience a greater plus.

Excellent growth record depicts this opening as a career growth opportunity in a small but expanding manufacturing company. Highly competitive remuneration, excellent fringes 100% paid, close to MBTA. Initial schedule will be a 5 day work week, may convert to a 4 day work week in 6 months.

For further consideration call or submit resume/statement of qualifications and salary history to John Thompson, Personnel Manager.

By BRENT RUSSELL

Many people do not practice what they preach. Public opinion surveys reveal that a majority of drivers contracted agree with the 55 mile per hour national maximum speed limit. Practical experience, however, shows that widespread compliance depends on a vigorous enforcement program. When the risk of a speeding ticket is small, compliance drops dramatically.

Greater enforcement efforts can be expected as evidence continues to mount that lower speeds do translate to fewer highway fatalities. The federal government plans to step up its demands on states to launch tougher speed compliance programs.

Meanwhile, many states are independently discovering the value of tough enforcement. In the state of Maryland, where a vigorous enforcement program has been in effect since November 1973, officials have found a link between the number of tickets issued and the number of highway deaths.

From 1974 to 1977, Maryland patrolmen increased the number of speeding summonses issued from 108,000 to 231,000. During that same time, the state highway death rate dropped from 822 to just a little more than 650.

Despite this showing of success, the state's enforcement program has been controversial because officials there adopted several uncontroversial because officials there adopted several unconventional surveillence techniques. Foremost of these is the police patrol use of a variety of vehicles — sports carsa, farm trucks, buses and even a tractor-trailer. The idea, according to Public Affairs Officer William E. Clark, is to convey to the public that any vehicle on Maryland highways could be a police vehicle.

Clark says the objective of the program was not to make a higher number of arrests — although that happened — but rather to encourate voluntary compliance with the speed limit.

Supplementing the unconventional vehicle program were other efforts making use of state troopers in highly visible marked police cars, the use of rolling roadblocks, stationary and moving radar and the mobilization of police headquarters personnel to bolster the highway patrol staff.

The police officers are strict. They do not tolerate any speed greater than 55, outlawing the grace amount of five or 10 miles per hour that many motorists take for granted.

Clark reports that citizens of the state were at first hostile to the program, apparently believing that patrolmen should not cheat even to catch speed cheaters. Most have come around to support the program, Clark believes, because it was coupled with an aggressive public relations campaign through the news media.

To be sure, the program was highly visible. News organizations were, for a time, encouraged to publish daily tallies of speed arrests, and traffic fatalities. And to keep the program before the public, Clark and his fellow public relations operatives named an unconventional "vehicle of the week' that would be patrolling the highways.

Even a symbol, a yellow jacket, was created so the public could uswbrudt bs ewk rw ri rgua extraordinary effort by state police.

The program continues to enjoy high-level support in the state. Police Superintendent Col. Thomas S. Smith says that the lower speed limit and the strict enforcement "has had the most dramatic effect on traffic safety in the history of the state."

AUTO TIPS

By PATRICK KELLY

There are still plenty of vacation days ahead, and millions of families will be packing the family car for long trips.

With small children, a bit of planning will keep them occupied and out of the hair of their parents, and the other children.

Here are some tips on traveling with kids:

Take along books, materials for drawing and coloring, and games which do not require a large area . . . checkers vs. Monopoly. Make the selection based on what they would enjoy on a rainy day at home.

Include plans to make stops at rest areas where the youngsters can run off excess energy. They do grow restless. Bring along a ball so they can have a quick game. A 10 minute stop will do wonders for both the children and the adults and the travel time lost will be compensated for by a more relaxed atmosphere in the car. Have them make a "pit stop" before resuming the trip.

Take along a selection of snacks. This will also make the trip seem a little faster.

Bring some shopping bags for litter and also carry some pre-moistened face-hand wipes.

Try to create an interest in geography by showing the children maps and reading about points of interest you will be passing or visiting.

Conduct a contest for spotting license plates from other states. The first 25 states are good for one point each for the spotter; the next 15, two points each; four points for the next eight and five points for the final two. This keeps the kids alert and occupied, especially on a long trip.

Before starting an auto trip, be sure the car is in peak operating condition. Check the owner's manual for recommended maintenance.

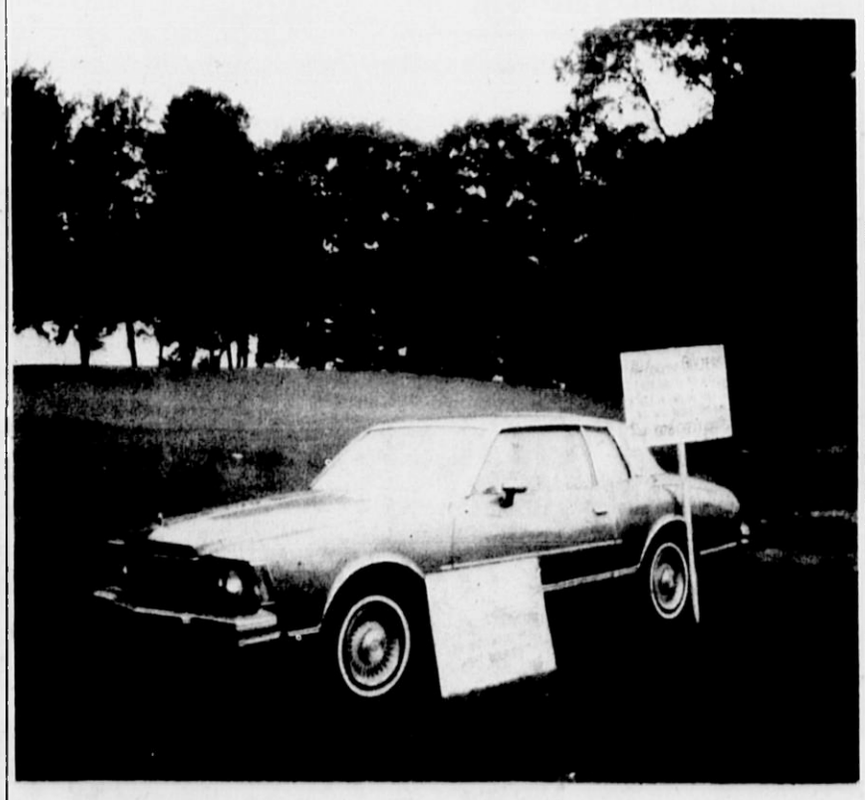

The automotive Information Council reports about 80 per cent of vacation trips are by automobile. Auto travel continues to be so popular for families because of cost and the flexibility a car permits travelers.

Neglected, bald or abused automobile tires are potential hazards that could lead to a serious accident and personal injury, warns the Tire Industry Safety Council (TISC).

Inattention to underinflation, which is of major concern to the tire industry, could jeopardize the safety of a motorist and others on the road, TISC says.

Howard Chevrolet to sponsor the new 1978 Chevrolet Monte Carlo

Howard Clay, President and Neal Clay, Vice-President of Howard Chevrolet, 361 Belgrade Ave., Roslindale, today announced that the agency will sponsor a "hole in one" contest. A new 1978 Chevrolet Monte Carlo will be given to the first golfer to make a hole-in-one during the annual John Ford Tournament, September 3, 4, and 5 to be held at the Wampatuck Golf Course in Canton, Mass.

AUTO TIPS

Underinflation causes tires to flex more so they tend to heat up and wear faster. It can also cause tire failure which in turn can lead to a sudden disablement and possible vehicle crash, according to TISC.

Vehicle owners should check the tire air pressure regularly. Inflation should be checked every two or three weeks and before long trips when the tires are cold. The owner's manual will tell you what the pressure should be.

Tire inflation directly affects the load-carrying ability of a tire. Under federal safety standards, passenger car tires are permanently labeled on the sidewall with their maximum load capacity at a certain inflation pressure, usually 32 pounds per square inch.

Farms are site for Show

By PAMELA J. HUEY

TAYLORVILLE, Ill. (UPI) — Late next month two fairly typical farms in central Illinois' Christian County will be jammed with people, livestock and exhibits.

The Phil Deal and Jim Micenheimer farms three miles south of Taylorville are the site of the 26th annual Farm Progress Show. It is billed as one of the largest extravaganzas of its kind.

"It will be an overgrown shopping center for farmers," said show manager Scott McKinnie who works year round setting up the three-day affair. "The farmer can come and look at all new kinds of machinery, and unlike other shows, actually see them in operation."

Show planners expect 200,000 to 300,000 farmers and others to attend the show sponsored by Prairie Farmer Magazine and scheduled for Sept. 26-28.

About 1,200 acres of the adjoining Deal and Micenheimer farms — which are relatively empty now except for busy construction crews — will be devoted to a variety of demonstrations including special fertility and tillage operations, harvesting, chemicals, hybrid corn and sorghum seed varieties, soybean and alfalfa varieties, a modern cow-calf operation, an automated beeffeeding system, a women's home show and over 400 exhibits.

The Farm Progress Show is held annually, but on a rotating basis among Iowa, Indiana and Illinois. Last year it was in Washington, Iowa, under the sponsorship of Wallace's Farmer — Prairie Farmer's sister publication — and next year's show will be in Crawfordsville, Ind.

McKinnie, 27, an Iowa State University graduate, said nowhere else can a farmer see so many pieces of equipment together and actually in operation — plowing, planting, harvesting and applying fertilizer.

Approximately 750 acres of corn and 480 acres of soybeans were planted last spring for harvesting during the show. Like most farmers in Illinois, the Farm Progress Show suffered from a late spring and subsequent late planting and there is some question whether all the crops will be ready for harvest by the end of September, McKinnie said.

But as on a real farm, a decision to harvest won't be made until the last minute and some immature corn may be chopped for forage and silage, McKinnie said.

A decision to host the show is sometimes difficult for the host farmers, McKinnie said. Hundreds of thousands of feet and thousands of vehicles, over a period of three days, can pack farm land down as hard as concrete and make it almost worthless the following spring.

But McKinne said Prairie Farmer Magazine promises to restore the land as near as possible to its former condition. Before leaving the site, the show sponsors will chisel plow the exhibit about 17 inches deep at least twice.

"You'd be amazed how much we can bring the land back," he said. "However, it's not 100 percent recovered for three to four years."

The general disruption of day-to-day lives also is something the host farmers must take into consideration.

"But most farmers come into it with the attitude, 'Hey, I'm going to make this a lot of fun and a learning experience,'" he said.

Phil Deal's wife, Monna, said the telephone and doorbell have been ringing constantly for several weeks.

"It's just getting so hectic," she said. "I'm afraid next year will seem so quiet compared to this that I'll feel nobody loves me anymore."

---

But hosting the show does have advantages.

GBH-Way, a home-construction company, is building a house to be heated by solar energy into the side of a hill. The entire south bank behind the house will be lined with solar collection panels.

The Deals, who farm 1,350 acres and have a 400-head beef cow herd, have negotiated an agreement with GBH-Way to buy the house after the show. The same agreement can be made for permanent farm buildings, such as a new hog barn built for Micenheimer, who farms more than 1,600 acres and has a new confinement farrowing operation with a capacity of 1,500-2,000 hogs.

While McKinnie is devoting most of his energy to this year's show, he also is working on next year's show in Indiana. In November, he will begin to work exclusively on that show and next March an announcement will be made on the location of the 1980 Iowa show.

Only companies which advertise in Prairie Farmer can exhibit, and space is allotted according to how much advertising space has been bought.

"Where else can a farmer come in and see something like this for free," McKinnie said. "We have the whole farm."

Homemakers' scholarships

A $25,000 grant from Kelly Services Inc., the international supplier of temporary help, has established the Second Career Scholarships for Displaced Homemakers, available from the Business and Professional Women's Foundation in Washington, D.C.

These scholarships will be awarded to help meet the educational needs of displaced homemakers — a growing group of women in their middle years who, through death, divorce or separation must pursue a career outside their home.

Many of these estimated three to seven million women have spent a major part of their adult lives meeting family responsibilities, and are unable to offer marketable job skills to prospective employers.

With the help of the scholarships, these women will be able to learn some of the skills needed to help them become productive members of the labor force.

The fun will be additionally supplemented by sales of Kelly Services' "A Guide to a Second Career, Revised Edition," a recently-published book designed to help displaced homemakers, as well as others, familiarize themselves with techniques and equipment now in use in offices throughout the nation. The profits from each book will be added to the scholarship fund by Kelly Services, Inc.

Applications for, or further information about, the scholarships can be obtained by writing: Scholarships Director, Business and Professional Women's Foundation, 2012 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036

Special offer to fight MD

The Hickory Farms of Ohio stores at the South Shore Plaza, Liberty Tree Mall, Dedham Mall, Shopper's World, and Burlington Village are greeting customers with the slogan, "YOU CAN HELP FIGHT MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY WITH A SPECIAL OFFER FROM HICKORY FARMS OF OHIO." This year there are two special offers:

From July 24 thru September 4, for every CHEESE BALL or CHEESE LOG sold, Hickory Farms of Ohio will contribute 20 cents to the Muscular Dystrophy Association. This will be a tie-in with the coming Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon. The cheese specialties will be offered at a reduced price.

Then, from August 28 thru September 4, for every pound of BEEF STICK Summer Sausage sold Hickory Farms of Ohio will contribute 20 cents to the Muscular Dystrophy Assocation.

The "one and only" BEEF STICK Summer Sausage will be sold at reduced prices.

According to Area Supervisor, Jeff Smith, "These two offers allow consumers to save money. But there is an added benefit. Needed funds will be made available to support the important work of the Muscular Dystrophy Assocition."

The voluntary helath agency also funds a network of 10 major university-based research/clinical centers to accelerate its efforts to find cures or effective treatments for these diseases. MDA also conducts a comprehensive patient care and community service program which now includes 162 free diagnostic and treatment clinics throughout the 50 states, Guam and Puerto Rico.

Mr. Smith added this is the fourth year Hickory Frams of Ohio stores have participated as a national sponsor of the MDA fund-raising effort.

The Green Thumb

By GEORGE ABRAHAM

Mold on Begonis Begonias: Tuberous begonias and other types such as Reiger, get a white, snowy covering on the leaves. This is mildew and it's getting tougher to control with fungicides. For many years Benlate (trade name for Benomyl) has been used to help control botrytis an or graymold. Now many strains of this fungus have been found to be immune to Benlate, allowing the fungus diseases to grow and become worse.

Benlate mixed with sand, soil, peat and bark mixture has been shown to injure Swedish Ivy (Plectranthus). Avoid splashing water on foliage of plants, and give good air circulation, even if you have to install small fans.

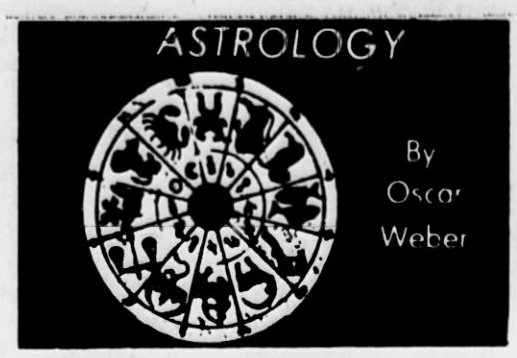

Gloxinia notes: After yours finishes flowering, gradually reduce water to allow leaves to die back naturally. Store pot and all in a dry place in basement. In September watch for signs of sprouts, then bring to bright window and keep it watered regularly. Under greenhouse and home conditions, gloxinas can be made to bloom at almost any time.

If your plant is still green, you can start new gloxinias from leaf cuttings rooted in plain tap water, perlite, sand or peatmoss.

Check your Plants: If you set out plants (trees or shrubs) this spring, We'd like to remind you to look them over to see if any metal wires, plastic labels, synthetic twine and plastic bags are still around the trunk or roots. If so, remove them immediately as they will kill the plant. Stems increase in diameter and a constricting wire or string can cut off flower of water and food up and down the plant. Especially dangerous is the plastic twine which looks like the binder twine farmers use. Nurserymen use the synthetic string to bind the root ball and then secure it by tying around the base of the trunk. Take a minute now to remove it. Untreated burlap can be left on the root ball, but treated burlap (usually green) and plastic burlap should be removed. It can kill trees or shrubs by preventing water from getting to the roots.

Green Thumb Clinic: "Is it true you can really make a drink out of rose seeds? Our roses have sent out a lot of pods."

Answer: Yes, seed pods (called "hips" use up food needed by the plants, so cut them off and make Rose hip tea. It's high in Vitamin C and it helps the plants if you off get them off.

PRECOCIOUS YOUNGSTER

Q. Your column is not only interesting but most instructive. A male child was born in Honolulu on October 25, 1971 at 11:10 A.M. Hawaii Time. Any advice you can give to the parents on how to bring this child up will be appreciated. D.H.

A. Thank you for your kind letter. The horoscope calculated for the above time and place indicates the possibility of this infant developing into a rather precocious youngster, that is a sort of old on young shoulders. There is apt to be a strong desire to have his own way. As he matures he is likely to develop a magnatic personality capable of influencing others but not permitting others to influence him.

From infancy on he should have been taught to take his nourishment slowly since there is likely to be a tendency to gulp food. If continued, this hasty swallowing, not only may it cause gas but could present other problems. He will need to learn how to relax since there are indications of his being very tense.

The chart shows the Sun, Mercury and Venus were all in Scopio; Neptune and Jupiter in Sagittarius; the Moon in Capricorn which was on the Ascendent; Mars in Aquarius; Saturn in Gemini and both the planets Uranus and Pluto in Libra.

There are possibilities of developing a sharp penetrating intellect that should enable him to be acutely aware of everything that is going on in his environment and to judge it critically.

He will take his schooling seriously and should do very well. In addition to his keen mind he will be able to adapt himself to conditions easily and to master subjects on many levels.

Telethon this weekend

Tony Bennett, Vikki Carr, Sammy Davis, Jr., David Hartman and Cheryl Ladd will be joined by dozens of other star entertainers on the thirteenth annual Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Lewis will again be backed up by veteran Telethon anchorman Ed McMahon on the Labor Day spectacular, which will originate from the Hotel Sahara in Las Vegas for the sixth consecutive year. The show begins Sunday, Sept.3, at 9 p.m. and runs non-stop for 21 hours until Monday, Sept. 4, at 6:30 p.m.

The Labor Day supershow will be aired by more than 200 "Love Network" stations tho throughout the U.S. and Canada, including WCVB (Channel 5) in Boston. More than 100'000 volunteers will work at nearly 1200 individual pledge centers and will assist with the production of hourly 15-minute cutaways from the network broadcast to be programmed locally.

Chet Curtis and Natalie Jacobson will co-host the Boston show which will feature local celebrities, community leaders and other Channel 5 personaliti-es personalities. These telethon segments will originate from New England Life Hall with remotes from Copley Square in Boston. WHDH radio will also be broadcasting live from Copley Square.

Host family sought

A host family with whom he can share his interests in music and sports is being sought for Joel Lu by Youth for Understanding, the international student exchange program.

Joel Lu

Joel is 17 years old, speaks fluent English and Chinese, and describes himself as an active person who likes meeting new friends. Besides participating in all kinds of sports, Joel enjoys Math and drama, and is involved in programs to promote world peace.

YFU host families provide bed, board, love and understanding. Joel and other students, who will attend local high schools, are eager to return this love. In addition, they bring a whole new culture to their American families.

Anyone interested in opening their home to Joel, or another YFU student, should call the Boston office (collect) at 617-267-1141 or Mr. and Mrs. Richard Oliver in Sharon at 784-7569.

The 1 out of 4 we help could be you.

High wire act goes on

WARWICK, R.I. (UPI) — Rietta Wallenda is like any other 17-year-old girl — if you can ignore her balancing on a 50-foot-high tightrope twice a day without a net.

She was up on the high wire when her famous grandfather Karl wobbled and fell 120 feet to his death after a strong gust of wind caught him off guard in Puerto Rico last March.

But to the blond, buxom Sarasota, Fla., native, her life is nothing unusual.

"This is what I do, that's all. It's all I know how to do and it's all I want to do," she says.

Rietta is a self-possessed young woman who takes her career and herself in stride.

"At the exact moment of my grandfather's death, I said I wanted to carry on," she said, chain-smoking in her trailer after a performance.

Rietta, in town for a twoweek stint at Rocky Point Amusement Park, is touring the country with three other Wallendas, including her 21year-old brother, Mario. Now that her grandfather is gone, she is the star of the show.

"I've never known any other life. A lot of my family have died doing what I do, but I don't think about it," she said. "When I'm up there, all I do is concentrate on what I'm doing at that exact moment."

Five Wallendas have died walking the tightrope. Another, Rietta's Uncle Mario, is paralyzed from the waist down.

Before network television cameras caught Karl Wallenda's topple six months ago, the most celebrated fall occurred in 1962 when two Wallendas died and three others were injured in Detroit when their famed seven-member pyramid collapsed.

The pyramid act, four men on the bottom level, two men on shoulder bars and a woman standing on a chair, was never resurrected. It was recreated with elaborate safety precautions last February for a television special about the Wallenda family.

Needlepoint expert to teach on QE2 cruise

Sylvia Miller, director of the Creative Home at 381 Elliot St., Newton Upper Falls, will take the December cruise of the QE2 as a member of the shipboard staff. She will offer a complete mini-needlepoint series covering basic and advanced stitchery, new techniques, and the latest in bargello and latch-hook rug making.

Mrs. Miller's workshops are one of many choices of activities offered aboard the QE2 this year. Passengers cruising between Boston and the Caribbean may attend tennis clinics, arts and crafts workshops, cooking demonstrations, dancing lessons, gardening lectures, exercise and yoga classes, movies, nightclub acts and casinos. They are offered six gourmet meals daily and stops at the ports of St. Maarten, Martinique, Barbados, Trinidad, St. Lucia, Tortola, and St. Thomas.

For further information about the QE2's Caribbean cruise in December, call Annette Toscano of Crimson Travel Service at 723-2885.

Bill Gormally picked up his wife, Pat, on walk around border of U.S.

A couple keeps in step

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — In this day and age most Americans think nothing of hopping in their car for a twoblock ride down to the neighborhood market.

Consider then Bill and Pat Gormally.

The Gormallys would rather walk, thank you.

They've been trekking along the perimeter of the United States for the last three years. The couple doesn't need a travel agent, they need a good shoe store.

Bill has covered more than 18,000 miles. His wife — whom he met along the way in Cocoa Beach, Fla. — has walked more than 16,000 miles.

Gormally left his Providence, R.I., home on a warm July day in 1975 to take a walk. He's walked and walked and walked.

The couple has spurned hitchhiking and turned down all rides.

Monday, they were in Rochester, home of the Eastman Kodak Co., to see where some of the 36,000 pictures they've taken were processed.

"I've spent thousands of dollars for film and mailers, so I wanted to see where everything was going to and coming from," said the 32-yearold, bearded, former elementary school teacher.

Gormally admitted the excitement is beginning to wear off.

"I'll tell you the truth. The wanderlust is beginning to dim somewhat now," he said.

Their monstrous walk isn't over by a long shot.

"We still have about 1,000 miles to go," Gormally said. "We follow the northern border of New York State up across the top of the Adirondacks, and around the state of Maine, and then back down the east coast to Rhode Island."

They hope to reach their destination by Nov. 18.

So far they've walked along the borders of 28 states. Gormally has worn out nine pair of hiking boots and a pair of sneakers; his wife is on her seventh pair of boots.

They've trudged across Montana in 30-below temperatures and sweltered along the Florida coast.

All this with heavy backpacks — Gormally's weighs about 55 pounds, his wife's about 35.

Just what prompted Gormally to sell his mobile home and spend thousands of dollars on the bizarre undertaking?

"Have you ever wanted to do something, and then you keep letting it slide and you never get around to doing it?" Gormally asked.

"Ive had this thing in my mind for quite a long time. And I thought: 'If you don't begin soon, you'll be too old to try it.'"

Farmers, state fairs have changed only a mite

By SANDRA L. LATIMER

ITLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Banners wave, band music battles calliope sounds fomamusement rides and carnival barkers vy for attention at food stands and games of skill.

It's all the fever of a state fair where Mom, Dad and the kids exhibit their prized projects and look at new products.

Today's state fair resembles a county fair, only much larger. But both still retain the family atmosphere that created fairs more than 100 years ago.

When the crops were harvested, the farmer would reserve the best to take to the fair. His wife would pack her best canned pickles, bake her favorite cake and take her quilt to display.

A fair also was a place where new products developed. A couple of farmers discussing a problem with equipment got advice from a merchant and soon there was a new product.

A couple of farmers, boasting of their tractors got a judge to decide whose tractor could pull weights farther.

A day at the fair was a family outing. So there had to be something for the children to do. Amusement rides were added.

Then came the midway. And, of course, food stands.

By and large, fairs today are basically what they were years ago when most of America lived in rural areas.

With some changes: Early exhibitors were the farmer and his wife, while the kids came along for the fun. Today, while Mom and Dad still exhibit, the emphasis is on young exhibitors.

The 125th Ohio State Fair, which just concluded its 13 day run, had some 63,000 items on display from more than 10,000 exhibitors. Some 2.5 million people paid at the gate.

Youngsters from all over the state brought their farm and home economics-related projects.

Tamie Rawn, 15, Canal Winchester, Ohio, has been showing livestock for six years. She and her two sisters were influenced by their brother Terry, now 20.

"We exhibit for competition, the chance to meet new people and go lots of places," said Tamie.

"And for the sportsmanship," said sister, Tricia, 13, "and challenge," said sister, Tonya, 16.

Many exhibitors do not stop when they outgrow junior fair, which ends when they graduate from high school.

Bob Rowe, 25, Gahanna, has been showing sheep for 15 years. Now he exhibits as a senior.

Above it all

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — State officials have ordered a fundamentalist church to get a permit to run its foster home, but the church says it won't apply for the permit because it doesn't take its orders from earthly authorities.

Welfare and attorney general's office officials were to meet today to decide whether to take the New Testament Baptist Church to court over its foster home that opened in June.

Country Players auditions open Sept. 5 for new season

The Newton Country Players will open the curtain on their 23rd year of community theater activity this week with tryouts for "Something's Afoot," their initial stage production of the season.

The musical mystery, which starred Tessie O'Shea on Broadway last season, will be directed by Dick Rousseau of Auburndale.

Open auditions will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 5 and 6, at 7:30 p.m., at the Players' new, larger home, the Newton Highlands Congregation Church, 54 Lincoln St. Callbacks, if necessary, will be held Thursday, Sept. 7, at 7:30 p.m. There are six male roles and four female roles but no chorus.

Auditionees are requested to bring sheet music for tryouts, as well as complete resumes and glossies. All roles call for some singing.

The book, music and lyrics are by James McDonald, David Vos and Robert Gerlach, with additional music by Ed Linderman. Take a strong satirical poke at Agatha Christie murder mysteries as well as at the many musical styles of past years and you have the highly entertaining "Something's Afoot." Ten people are stranded in an isolated English country estate during a raging thunderstorm. One by one they are picked off by cleverly fiendish devices. The bodies begin to pile up in the library as the survivors frantically race to discover the identity and motivation of the cunning culprit.

All local residents interested in participating in any phase of the production and in any capacity — stage manager, house manager and staff, stage crew, special effects, make-up or wardrobe — are most cordially invited to attend audition sessions. Earnest efforts will be made to place as many as possible in some area on the production.

Performances are slated for Friday and Saturday evenings, Nov. 3 and 4 and 10 and 11. The production is available at reduced rates to sponsor groups and theater parties interested in fund raising for bookings Nov. 1-12, at the church, with its seating capacity of 275.

The church may be reached by public transportation by taking the Green Line to Newton Highlands station. The church is located one short block down Lincoln street. During the day, the Needham-Watertown bus stops on Lincoln Street.

For additional information concerning tryouts, phone 965-0752 or 323-7991. For theater-party data, call 244-1308 or 484-4351.

Ted Kazanoff of West Newton (left), costarring in David Mamet's hit comedy, "The Duck Variations," listens to Jerry Gershman explain, "They stuff them." The play, on the same bill as "Sexual Perversity in Chicago," is at Boston's Charles Playhouse through Sept. 17. An actor, director, and teacher of theater arts, Kazanoff has performed in scores of local and Broadway shows. In "The Duck Variations" Kazanoff plays the role of an old man sitting on a park bench discussing ducks and the mysteries of life.

Sept. 9 Art Association show will be enjoyed by all the family

On Saturday, Sept. 9, shoppers will notice a lot of color and activity on Newton Centre Green.

Newton Art Association will be exhibiting paintings, pastels, prints and sculpture in this September's outdoor show, featuring a special theme, "Circus-Circus In Art." The exhibit will be open free to the public from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Evelyn Carlson, popular watercolorist and artist demonstrator from Arlington, will judge the show during the morning in order to award most of the prizes. Award ribbons will be placed on the winning works at 2 p.m. The public will be encouraged to cast one vote per person for "best-liked painting." Public Vote Ribbons will be placed on the favored works of art at 2 o'clock. Rain date Sept. 16.

Some say the clowns are the essence of the circus. So it seems only proper that clowns should be part of this artist group's interpretation of circus in various art forms. One or more clowns, members of Clown Workshop Theatre, are practicing up on their antics including juggling, gymnastics and they are going to paint faces.

The Stoneham Traveling Zoo will add even more interest and will appeal to the whole family. It will visit the Green from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Be sure to stop by to see the large assortment of fish, reptiles such as a boa constrictor, a skunk, African tree frog, possibly turtles, animals including guinea pigs, chinchillas, rabbits, ferrets and squirrel monkeys; there will even be colorful, exotic birds and a fuzzy tarantula, too.

Craftspeople will be working on ceramics, crocheting, copper sheet relief work, wood carving, wood block cutting and weaving. At the String Art Booth, an individual of any age can explore at different levels creating designs and gift wrap sheets using string and acrylic paint colors. available.

Local craftspeople will be displaying varied handiwork. For information on how to obtain booth space, call 332-6585.

Library keeps notebook on local musical groups

The latest service at the Newton Free Library is the Current Activities bulletin board and table area which includes a looseleaf notebook entitled "Local Musical Activities in Newton."

It will be a permanent source for patrons interested in music.

Each folder will contain information on a particular program, school or group; programs from concerts given within the past year; newsletters; membership lists; catalogs and such.

Current folders include activities from: All Newton Music School, Community Resources, Jackson Homestead, Boston Symphony Players in Newton, Highland Glee Club, Library activities, Kodaly Center, Newton Choral Society, Newton Symphony Orchestra, Music Groups — directories, and Muse — Paul Wiggin & Co.

Nancy Gentile of the circulation staff has been assigned to scan the newspapers for mention of upcoming concerts, so that programs can be secured.

Already, connections with many groups in Newton have benefited the library, with each group offering to keep in touch or send programs to be included in the folder.

The goal is to provide patrons with a good idea of the kinds of musical activities in progress and type and level of music played and performed. It will aid instrumentalists, potential audiences, students, and possibly some researchers.

Old programs and leaflets will be taken from the looseleaf notebook at intervals to be reviewed for inclusion in the Newton Room file.

A suggestion box and sign will accompany the display.

Gina Thonis named director of Newton Arts Center

Gina Popovic Thonis has been appointed as executive director of the Newton Arts Center.

In making the announcement Hugh D. Rogovin, president of the board, said that Mrs. Thonis is assuming full responsibility for directing the center immediately.

The center offers a variety of arts activities and programs to Newton residents and to those of surrounding communities.

In its first year, over 200 persons attended classes in the visual and performing arts and in creative writing. Mrs. Thonis directed the Kirkland House Library at Harvard-Radcliffe before joining the center.

The daughter of a former Yugoslav minister of foreign affairs, Mrs. Thonis speaks five languages and has had work published in English and in Serbo-Croatian.

She received her B.A. degree from Syracuse University and a Master of Arts from Harvard University. While at Harvard, Mrs. Thonis was a teaching fellow, editor of its "Arts Spectrum," and coordinator of a variety of social and cultural events at the college.

She has traveled extensively abroad and presently lives with her husband in Cambridge.

Boston Ballet plans to open 15th season with 'Cinderella'

"Cinderella" and "Les Sylphides" will open the Boston Ballet's Fifteenth Anniversary Season on Nov. 9, according to E. Virginia Williams, artistic director of the company, and Mrs. Louis Wellington Cabot, chairman of the board of trustees. The performance schedule for 1978-79 is as follows:

Nov. 9-12, "Cinderella" and "Les Sylphides"; Dec. 6-24, "The Nutcracker"; and Jan. 27-28, Feb. 1-4, Choreographers' Showcase.

March 1-4, "Gaite Parisienne," "The Four Temperaments," "Symphony in C"; April 3-8, "The Sleeping Beauty"; May 17-20, "Wednesday's Class," "The Road of the Phoebe Snow," and "Trio."

All performances will be held at the Music Hall, with the exception of the Choreographers' Showcase, which will take place at John Hancock Hall.

The Boston Ballet offers yearly subscriptions at discounts. For a brochure call 542-3945.

Newton Choral Society warms up for Haydn works

Josef Haydn's "Lord Nelson Mass" is one of two works by the Austrian composer scheduled for December performance as the Newton Choral Society, directed by Barbara A. Levy, enters its third season.

Rehearsals for the "Nelson Mass" and the Haydn "Salve Regina" begin Tuesday, Sept. 5, at 7:30 p.m. in the Franklin School, Derby Street, West Newton. New members are welcome, soprano and tenor voices are actively sought.

The Newton Choral Society is funded in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities.

Anyone needing further information may call membership chairman Gay Mangion at 964-7617 or President Bernie Siff at 332-9241.

'Pawn to Q4' is opening move

"Pawn to Q4" will open the Newton Free Library Chess Club activities Tuesday, Sept. 12, at 6:45 p.m. at the Newton Free Library, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner.

Competition among members informal instruction, strategy sessions, a ladder, and a tournament are on the year's agenda outlined by Laurence Persky, club director and president of the Newton Free Library chess club.

To defend themselves against more experienced players, newcomers can turn to many of the instructive books on library shelves including "The Chess Mind" by Gerald Abrahams, "Chess Fundamentals" by Jose Raul Capablanca, "The Official Blue Book and Encyclopedia of Chess" by Kenneth Harkness and "The Complete Book of Chess Stratagems" by Fred Reinfeld.

The club is free and open to all. Players are urged to bring their own sets and boards.

How To Do Nothing on Labor Day

Instead of Labor Day, call this Monday Leisure Day, and do only the things you don't have to do.

By Maggie Hall

Labor Day was proposed and first celebrated in 1882 at the suggestion of Peter McGuire, who chose the first Monday in September to insure pleasant weather and to create a nice break halfway between Independence Day and Thanksgiving. Traditionally marked by parades and speeches, the "Labor" aspect, the honoring of American industry which McGuire had in mind, has faded a bit. The day is now a family holiday, with picnics and family reunions.

For some, Labor Day is like New Year's Day: the summer is grinding to a leisurely close, school is about to open, and the autumn stretches ahead. Amusement parks and ice cream stands close down for the season, galleries and boutiques open up again, restaurants tend to change their hours. White shoes go back into the closet until next Memorial Day. Most of us celebrate Labor Day with a sigh and a promise. Next summer, sure, we'll do all those things we left undone this summer: the diet, the great books, the clean garage.

But we won't do them today. Labor Day is a day of rest, a secular Sunday. And since it usually falls on one of those lazy, hazy days of later summer when the heat and the humidity join hands and soar, it really is a great day to rest. Call it Leisure Day, and do only the things you don't have to do.

Marshall Moyer

Sit Back

One of the prerequisites for a life of leisure, if only for a day, is a comfortable place to set a spell. That old standby, the hammock, has never gone out of fashion, although the vogue lately has been for macrame, rather than striped duck.

One's center of gravity being what it is, one doesn't so much lie or sit, in a hammock, as loll in it, and the position therefore precludes any strenuous activity, making the hammock ideal for leisure. Reading and eating are about the limit of life in a hammock, and when engaged in those pursuits, it is important to keep the shoulders high enough on the hammock so as to reduce wear and tear on the elbows. It is not a great idea to lie face down in a hammock, unless one's spine is considerably more flexible than standard issue.

Take care when setting up the hammock. Do not attach the guylines to anything even remotely portable. A hammock suspended between a lawn mower handle and an unlocked gate is not satisfactory for carefree lounging. Be sure to use stout rope. Do not use anything that may stretch or break, like an old bicycle inner tube or a nylon stocking. Swing your hammock well beyond the reach of any sprinkler system or Frisbee game.

If all this sounds like too much trouble, consider lolling around in a pool. An inflatable kiddie-pool is both cheap and portable, and its small size has the added advantage of discouraging you from doing laps, should you be victimized by a sudden frenzy of energy. It is also possible to read in a pool this size, without fear of drowning. Do not leave the pool too long upon the lawn, however. The grass beneath it will turn pale and unhealthy. Do not sit too long in the pool in the sun: you will turn red and unhappy.

Should you be blessed with a front porch, what could be more traditional and comfortable than the old rocking-chair-on-the-porch routine? There are no particular rules for positioning a rocking chair — just don't put it too near a flight of stairs or the tail of a family pet. Settle down for a good rock, with a pitcher of lemonade or martinis, and watch the world go by.

Relax

Now that you're comfortable, consider three kinds of summer reading. First, there's personal reading for pleasure. This means losing yourself in a book just for the joy of it, not racing to get through it, or reading something because you think you should, or because somebody else thinks you should. Take time to let the images float up off the page: this time, you don't have to read to get information, you don't have to write a book report. Try sitting down with a nice murder — there are enough Agatha Christies to last you, one each Labor Day, a reading lifetime. They're not all first-rate, but they are diverting, and full of local color.

For family-style reading aloud, you have to know your audience. Too much complexity of plot or character won't make it from night to night. It is probably a waste of breath to read from Swann's Way to a nine-year-old. Conan Doyle's Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, however, are perfect. Most of the stories are short, self-contained, and absorbing.

Smaller fry may not be able to sit still for a whole session of Holmes and his Watson. For them, a picture book fills the bill. Robert McCloskey's Make Way For Ducklings is a tradition in more than one family, and more recently, Maurice Sendak's illustrated fantasies are already classics.

When you tire of reading aloud, or your voice gives out and you are still in a literary frame of mind, leave the reading to WGBH radio, 89.7 FM, where they read aloud on weekday evenings. For more listening, there's music. Labor Day weekend is not the greatest time to go for a spin, but if you are out and about, you may be able to take in one of the most traditionally American forms of holiday entertainment: the bandshell concert. All MDC concerts scheduled are in bandstands by the water, be it ocean or river, and so provide a two-fold refreshment. By the beaches, in particular, the bandstands are lovely, gilded pleasure-domes a la Kublai Khan.

September 1, the US Army Band and Chorus, and the Herald Trumpets, play in the Hatch Shell, on the Charles River Esplanade in Boston at 8:30 pm. At the same hour on the 3rd, the Boston Musicians Union strikes up with the big-band music. The bandshell on Nastasket Beach promises Johnny Shea and his orchestra, from 2 to 4 pm on September 1, and Bernie King holds forth from 1:30 to 6 pm; another concert, at the same time, takes place on the next day. Revere Beach's bandstand houses Dave Forman, September 4 from 2 to 4 pm. And in Nahant, the shell by the beach fills with music September 3 and 4, from 2 to 4 pm each day.

An inland musical spot, on September 3, is the common across from St. Stephen's Church, on South Main Street in Cohasset Center. While you stroll the common, the sounds of the church's carillon are in the air from 4 to 5 pm. The program is yet to be announced, but in the past, everything from ragtime to Bach has emanated from the steeple.

And Enjoy Yourself

Are games passé? Do families still settle down after supper for a good nasty game of Monopoly or cut-throat Scrabble? Did parlor games go the way of the parlor? Revive a quick game of Charades, as demonstrated in the Map. Be sure everyone has the signals down pat before you start, and remember that short, one-line charades can be a lot trickier than long titles that only look tough. If has stumped the pros; One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest is a snap to act out.

One of the greatest guessing games, if you've got an acquiescent crowd, is Botticelli. It can be played for hours, or days, with any number of players, with any kind of knowledge, from modern art to league leaders to soap opera. Player A thinks of a famous name, living or dead, of fact or fiction. Let's say Player A chooses Millard Fillmore. He gives the other players the first letter of the last name, F, which is then the key initial for the game. The other players win the right to a yes or no answer by stumping Player A. To stump, Player B may ask a question like, "Are you an American patriot?" If Player A has his wits about him, he will say, "No, I'm not Benjamin Franklin." If Player A cannot think of an American patriot whose surname begins with an F, Player B has stumped, and can ask a yes or no question like "Are you alive?", to narrow the field. All the stump questions must refer to famous people who have the key-initial. Great glory accrues to the player who, when It, out-guesses the stump questions, and has chosen a name, that, though famous, is hard to guess. It is considered cheating to change personalities in the middle of the game.

A 1935 study by F. Lundberg, et al., indicated that the average American spent 108 leisure minutes per day eating. By 1966, that figure had dropped to 71 leisure minutes per day, which does not include time spent preparing and cooking meals. There is every indication that even fewer leisure minutes are devoted to eating today. An informal survey conducted by the author reveals 5.5 minutes for lunch and 12.7 minutes for dinner. Breakfast was not included, consisting as it does of a cup of coffee; nor was time spent in unorganized munching counted. Haste is not good for the digestion. It is no surprise that the manufacturers of antacids advertise their wares at just that time of day when the family is wolfing down dinner, on its way somewhere else.

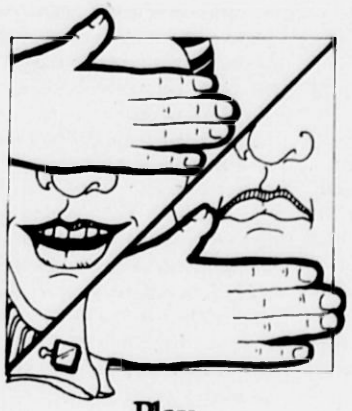

So, on Leisure Day, try a leisurely meal. Consider a picnic. It is easy to eat slowly and meditatively in the great outdoors, with scenery to look at, birds to listen to, ants to pick out of the peanut butter. A picnic doesn't have to be a big deal. In fact, like everything else on Labor Day, it shouldn't be. It is not restful if someone, usually Old Mom, rises at dawn to make two gallons of potato salad. Try cold cuts and ready boughts: a loaf of bread, a jug of wine, an instant picnic. Fill in around the edges with cheese, fruit, and sausages. Do not forget your pocket knife with the corkscrew attachment. You can stand up and stroll aimlessly between courses, or lie on the ground and watch the clouds. Where to picnic is anyone's guess, with thousands of acres of public land available. But this Labor Day/Leisure Day, stop by Walden Pond, in Concord. Reflect on the wisdom of Henry David Thoreau, who thought that the week should be reorganized, to allow for one day of work, and six for the restoration of the body and the spirit.

Got It!

The whole point of Charades is that a picture can replace a thousand words, but in case you've never played before, here are a few words of explanation. In Charades, a famous title, quote or phrase is pantomimed. Pick one and define the genre: book, movie, play, whatever. Give the number of words, the word you're going for, and the number of syllables in that word. Make your motions bold enough for everyone to see, and be sure to let people know when they've "Got it" for each part of the word or title. Get it?

Right around the corner from Boston's Symphony Hall lies North America's first and maybe only Burmese restaurant, Mandalay. It's inexpensive, unpretentious, and very, very good.

By Steve Raichlen

"All his meals were swift, passionate, and enormous; they were not meals so much as orgies, debauches of curry and rice." — Burmese Days, by George Orwell

You won't need to tread the road all the way to Mandalay to savor the exotic and fiery cuisine of Burma. Right around the corner from Boston's Symphony Hall lies North America's first and maybe only Burmese restaurant. Called Mandalay, it attracts Northeastern students, concert-goers, and devotees of spicy curries. It's inexpensive, unpretentious, and very, very good.

The restaurant's owners, the Chins, came from Rangoon three years ago. They also claim Chinese ancestry, so their menu offers specialties from both lands. Since there are dozens of Chinese restaurants in Boston but only one Burmese restaurant on the whole Atlantic seaboard, I stick to the Burmese fare.

Burma lies at the culinary crossroads of the Orient, surrounded by India, China, and Thailand. As in India, curries and spicy pickles are very popular in Burma, but they are stir-fried in the Oriental style, rather than stewed in traditional Indian fashion. From the lands to the south of Burma come such exotic ingredients as coconut milk, fish sauce, pungent shrimp paste, fiery chilis, and a host of redolent spices. These diverse influences fuse into a harmonious ensemble, helping to give Mandalay's fare its distinction.

Mandalay's Combination Platter provides an excellent introduction to Burmese appetizers. Highlighting the platter are sar mor sar — Burmese wontons — crispy, puffed dough tricorns filled with a pungent onion beef curry which release a fragrant steam when you bite into them. The platter also features deep-fried bean curd stuffed with beef, crispy beef and shrimp rolls, grilled shrimp, and sar tay — better known by the Indonesian name of the dish, sate — miniscule beef kebabs on bamboo splinters. Appetizers come with three condiments: an awesome hot pepper sauce; an intriguing, garlicky sweet sauce; and a passable, sweetish Chinese duck sauce.

No Burmese meal would be complete without soup and Mandalay offers several excellent selections. Their hot and sour soup evidences one of the happy transformations which takes place when the traditional dish of one land crosses the border to mingle with the cuisine of its neighbor. The Burmese version of hot and sour soup is clear, spicy, and considerably more delicate than the Chinese variety. Yet there's the same subtle interplay of flavors at work here: the nutty taste of the bean curd, the sourness of fermented bamboo skins, the sweetness of dried lily buds, and the rubbery chew of some mysterious mushrooms. Should you desire a more flavorful broth, and a bold dash of authenticity, ask the serving person for a cruet of fish sauce. Made from fermented fish, it smells like the Charles River on a sultry day, but a few drops will greatly enliven the dish. The Burmese use it like soy sauce.

For a main course we ordered the Special Burmese Dinner For Two, which offers chicken curry and hot and sour vegetables. Set in a sauce of coconut milk, the large pieces of chicken glows with the golden color and spicy fragrance of tumeric. The potatoes which adorn the dish are a nice touch, because they absorb the heady curry flavor so completely. The hot and sour vegetables include celery, carrot, cabbage, and mung bean sprouts, simmered in a pale, garlicky sauce.

With such entrees it's customary to order a couple of condiments, listed on the Mandalay menu under the heading of vegetables. We tried two. Balachaung — crumbled, stir-fried dried shrimp — adds a pungent, musty flavor to the curry, plus lots of little bits of crunch. Mango pickle is salty, tart, and irresistibly hot. Condiments are meant to be mixed with the rice and other dishes, not eaten straight. You're in for a real surprise if you do.

If, sometime, you arrive hungry as a wolf and parsimonious as a pauper, you can try one of Mandalay's copious noodle platters. Mohinga — rice noodles with bits of fish and tangy fried onions — floats in a toothsome, spicy broth. Coconut Khwasway — soft noodles with curried chicken — bathes in a rich coconut gravy. Contrary to popular belief, coconut milk is not the thin liquid inside the nut. Mandalay laboriously makes its coconut milk, that mainstay of the Burmese kitchen, from scratch, extracting the rich liquid from the pulp of the coconut.

For dessert Mandalay offers a selection of Chinese pastries made by Chinatown's famous Ho Yuen Bakery on Beech Street. We preferred to end our meal with bowls of refreshing ginger ice cream, one of the six flavors offered.

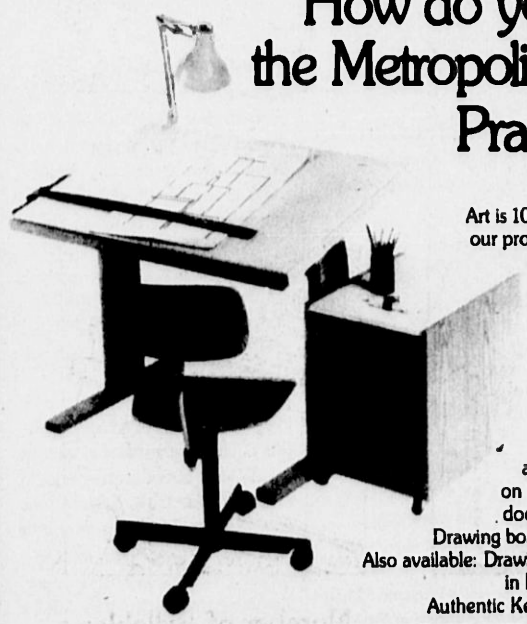

Mandalay occupies a vast basement room which formerly housed a Brigham's. The dining room is well-lit and tasteful, within the limits of formica. The neighborhood outside is rather rundown, but very convenient if you're trying to make an 8 pm curtain time at Symphony or Jordan Hall. Mandalay has no liquor license, but graciously provides wine glasses and bottle openers for patrons who bring their own.

Notes:

Located at 329 Huntington Avenue in Boston, Mandalay is open 11 am to 11 pm weekdays, noon to midnight on weekends. Appetizers begin at $2; noodle dishes, at $2; and main courses at $3.75. Two can dine regally for under $10. At these prices, no credit cards are the rule. You can make a reservation by calling 247-2111.

In the rain-forest room of the Wellesley greenhouses, you expect to see a rare, colorful bird, emitting strange sounds as it seeks the top of a mango, cocoa, banana or pineapple tree.

By H. Constance Hill

Lily M. Yamamoto

The Wellesley College greenhouses, built in 1922 and dedicated in 1946 to Wellesley student-turned-professor of Botany Margaret C. Ferguson, are an exuberance of color and scent, where you can spend the afternoon in the tropics, or in the desert, or in a swamp, just by walking from one room to another. The major biogeographic zones of the world are simulated with light, temperature, and humidity control: dry tropics and desert, warm and cold temperate zones, moist tropical, swamp, bog, and high moisture zones. All, a veritable trip around the world.

For many visitors the most memorable room is the moist tropical environment. In this rain-forest room, drips of moisture fall through the lush foliage of Elephant's Ear, Red Ginger, Rubber, and Hemp trees. The dense vegetation fosters the feeling that you are on a jungle jaunt; you expect to see a rare bird, appearing as a streak of brilliant color, emitting strange sounds as it seeks the top of one of the mango, cocoa, banana, or pineaple trees. Palm trees native to places with evocative names reach to the glass roof high above: Date Palm (North Africa and Arabia); Coconut Palm (Polynesia and Southeast Asia); and Butterfly Palm (Madagascar).

The cold temperate room is the site of special seasonal displays. This November, uncommon and common crysanthemums, wonderfully diverse in color and size, come to full bloom here. Azaleas appear in late January, and March boasts a profusion of bulbs, crocus, hyacinths, freesias and tulips to be enjoyed. Camellia, Greek myrtle, orange and lemon trees also call this place their home.

The desert room has representative plants from the United States, Central and South America, Mexico, and Africa. See jade plants, decades old, and dozens of varieties of cactus. A skyward climbing, night-blooming Cereus Pterauthus from Mexico has called this room home for over 55 years.

The hydrophyte, or water plant, house has a delicate oriental atmosphere. Water ferns and lilies, papyrus, rice, bamboo, and iris surround a pool edged by various mosses.

The greenhouses serve as living laboratories for the Botany students at Wellesley College. Several rooms are devoted to the study of plant behavior and structure, hybrids, and mutations. Several plants in the greenhouses have been at Wellesley College since its founding over 100 years ago.

Plants in each room are carefully labelled. The staff, headed by William Jennings, and assisted by Adelbert Nickerson and Andrew Bertone, is very knowledgeable and friendly should you want additional information.

Notes:

The Margaret C. Ferguson greenhouses are located on the Wellesley College campus, in Wellesley. The hours are 8 am to 4:30 pm daily, year-round. No admission is charged, and parking is free. For all details, the number to call is 235-0320, extension 637.

● Perhaps you already have several college credits, but your full-time job has prevented you from completing your degree. Or maybe you don't have a single credit, but you know that sooner or later — despite your job or other responsibilities — you'll want to get a college degree.

In either case, you would do well to find out how to get your degree through any one of over 50 part-time programs offered by Northeastern University.

Have you considered the advantages of Part-Time Programs at Northeastern University?

Wide Choice of Courses

Included in Northeastern's more than 50 part-time programs are some 1,400 undergraduate courses to meet your interests and objectives. Basic areas of study are as follows:

BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION
HEALTH PROFESSIONS
LAW ENFORCEMENT
LIBERAL ARTS
THERAPEUTIC RECREATION
ENGINEERING TECHNOLOGY
SCIENCE

Campuses Convenient to You

To make higher education easily accessible, Northeastern offers its main campus in Boston, the suburban campus in Burlington, and eight branch academic centers in Brockton, Framingham, Marshfield, Milford, Norwood, Reading, Revere and Weymouth.

Simplified Admission

Knowing the constraints on your time, Northeastern has made admission, registration and enrollment uncomplicated. We counsel you on career objectives, minimize red tape, and in many cases we allow full credit for courses taken previously at accredited institutions, and for life experience, by examination. You may be admitted to part-time degree programs in University College and Lincoln College without making formal application. You may matriculate as a degree candidate . . . or select individual courses to meet particular needs. You may register by mail or in person at any Northeastern location. Registration dates are September 5-14. Check schedule or call for specific dates at each location. Classes begin the week of September 25.

University College: 437-2400 (Business, Health, Law Enforcement, Liberal Arts, and Therapeutic Recreation)
Lincoln College: 437-2500 (Engineering, Science and Technology)
Burlington Campus: 272-5500

The Distinction of a Northeastern Degree

Since its founding in 1898, Northeastern has been committed to helping working men and women attain the benefits of higher education — by offering degree programs that can be tailored to the needs of people with full- or part-time jobs.

Your degree program at Northeastern can be spread out or accelerated to meet your specific circumstances. In University College you can earn an Associate's Degree in as little as two years . . . and a Bachelor's Degree in four. A Northeastern degree is nationally recognized as a symbol of excellence in higher education. Many executives, engineers, educators and other professional leaders got their start at Northeastern University.

If you're going to invest the time, effort and money in your continuing education, do it at Northeastern where your degree will really mean something.

Movies | Short Subjects

Feature Attraction
Bread and Chocolate

Nino Manfredi, in Bread and Chocolate.

Written and directed by Franco Brusati, Bread and Chocolate has played in Europe for several years before its release here, and played successfully, too, if one may judge from the self-congratulatory accolades which fill the screen before the opening credits. Nino Manfredi plays Nino Garafoli, introduced as a sort of vulgar klutz, a misfit in his purple shirt and perfectly awful tie. Nino is an Italian worker who, like so many of his compatriots, has left behind the land of sun and song to find his fortune in Switzerland. The dream of all these workers is to make enough money to import their wives and children, or to return home as heroes. Some live for their dream, some live on it, some lose track of reality altogether. The theme of nostalgia, the real ache for the homeland, is diluted with slapstick and satire. Mafredi has a few moments of quiet desperation: he can't seem to decide whether to be Mastroianni or Chaplin. He doesn't break our hearts, but he's a likeable guy in a likeable movie. Bread and Chocolate is sweet and filling and not, ultimately, very nourishing. With Anna Karina, John Dorelli, and Paolo Truco. Beacon Hill.

Animal House
Until recently, the folks at the National Lampoon have been content to satisfy their creative urges by liberating scatological prose and making dirty words safe to print. They have now broadened their horizons and expanded onto the big screen. Animal House, which tells the tale of a frat war, is nothing more than a springboard for the kind of jokes Johnny Carson sometimes likes to tell on national television: sex, sexist, and more sexist. Not even John Belushi and Donald Sutherland can make Animal House habitable. Braintree Cinema, Brockton Cinema, Chestnut Hill Cinema, Framingham Cinema, Hanover Mall, Lawrence Showcase, Woburn Showcase, Danvers, Leominster; Cheri, Pi Alley, Palace.

The Buddy Holly Story
Not just another nostalgia movie. Though the story line is thin and glossy, Gary Busey delivers a command performance as the Fifties' rock wizard. Not only does he look like Buddy Holly — he's got a voice and guitar work to match, and is backed by a rhythmic band of Crickets. Together, they do ample justice to Holly's classics, which are, all by themselves, worth a trip to the flick. Charles; Brockton, Dedham, Hanover, Peabody, Woburn.

The Eyes of Laura Mars
A modern, overdone murder-mystery, Eyes features Faye Dunaway as Laura Mars, a successful fashion photographer noted for her very chic and very macabre portraits. She is in telepathic communication with someone who is murdering her colleagues. To complicate matters still further, the intrepid cop in charge of the case (Tommy Lee Jones) becomes her lover. Oddly the two of them, as well as everyone else in the cast, don't seem particularly fearful — it's more as if they have stomach cramps throughout. Still, the culprit is not exposed until the very end, and the movie is never boring. Irvin Kershner directed, Jon Peters produced. Burlington Cinema, Chestnut Hill, Dedham, Lawrence, Peabody, Pembroke, Natick, Brockton; Paris.

Foul Play
Goldie Hawn and Chevy Chase star in this suspense comedy written and directed by Colin Higgins. Chase's famous pratfalls are limited to a tolerable few, and he and Hawn share an engaging kookieness. Hawn, who plays a librarian named Gloria Mundy (a Thurber steal), is the target of a pair of hitmen; Chase, as a police lieutenant under a cloud, assigns himself to protect her. Incidentally they find True Love. Dudley Moore, still happily beyond the fringe, and a bantam Burgess Meredith steal the show. With Billy Barty, Rachel Roberts, and members of the New York City Opera. Braintree Cinema, Brockton Cinema, Circle, Framingham Cinema, Woburn Showcase, Leominster, Danvers; Cheri, Palace, Eastfield.

Grease
Entertainment and that's all; or rather, television director Randal Kleiser's idea of entertainment, the kind we've been insulted by for years. This isn't to say that the musical numbers aren't energetic, that John Travolta isn't charming, that Stockard Channing isn't proficient as the high school bad girl. But where is the heart behind the monster? And what in heaven's name is this fascination with the Fifties? Brockton Cinema, Circle, Dedham Showcase, Peabody Cinema, Natick, Hanover, Leominster; Cinema 57.

Heaven Can Wait
Heaven Can Wait should have been good — but this is entirely Warren Beatty's film: he not only took the starring role (as a man who dies before his time, and comes back as someone else), but also wrote the script with Elaine May, directed the film with Buck Henry, and produced the project as well. He has overextended himself. Although Henry, James Mason, Julie Christie, and Dyan Cannon turn in fine supporting performances, the direction lacks the charm and sophistication to pull off a complex tale. Still, Heaven Can Wait has flashes of good comedy and fine action. It's close, but no heavenly encounter. Burlington Cinema, Circle, Dedham Showcase, Framingham Cinema, Hanover Mall, Danvers; Cheri.

The Sound of Music
People have strong feelings about Julie Andrews: you either love her or you hate her. The same can be said of her most famous vehicle, The Sound of Music, which has returned, now in a 70 mm print, in stereo, so it is bigger, if not better. The lively Rodgers and Hammerstein score hasn't changed, nor has the Alpine scenery. Charles.

A Woman at her Window
Romy Schneider stars as the woman, who falls in love with a Greek Communist. Trouble is, she's already married to an Italian diplomat — and the scene is Fascist Greece, just before the outbreak of World War II. Exeter.

"A GLORY HAS ARRIVED" —Penelope Gilliatt, The New Yorker

"What we do is smile with pleasure at a magnificent film." —Penelope Gilliatt, The New Yorker

"An unexpectid masterpiece ... a ravishingly beautiful surprise." —Janet Maslin, New York Times

"'A Slave of Love' is a luminous film with wit, passion, breathtaking beauty, and sun-struck images. No better foreign film has reached these shores this year." —David Ansen, Newsweek

"The movie is by turns funny, tender and lyrical and is well worth seeing." —Bob Lape, WABC-TV

"One of the most brilliant, haunting movies to come my way in years of moviegoing." —Leo Lerman, Vogue

"'A Slave of Love' has stunning scenes and sun-drenched afternoons but the most compelling is the knockout performance of star Elena Solovei." —People Magazine

"The most outrageously gorgeous and romantic movie since 'Elvira Madigan'." —Charles Sawyer, Our Town

"The director has a sure instinct for human relationships. I found 'A Slave of Love' an attractive and affecting movie. Cinema 5 is to be commended for arranging its American release." —Arthur Schlesinger Jr., Saturday Review

"An uncommonly good picture." —Archer Winsten, New York Post

"The work is a jewel — fresh, funny, haunting — and I urge you to see it." —Martine Laliour, Mademoiselle

"'A Slave of Love' is a visual delight which works well on several levels and is both entertaining and thought-provoking." —Norma McLain Stoop, After Dark Magazine

"'A Slave of Love' is well worth a visit. The director bathes the screen in soft golden colors. The dappled sunshine suggests a Manet painting." —Stewart Klein, WNEW-TV

"You must see this movie! Elena Solovei's performance is a masterpiece of the highest order." —Richard Grenier, Cosmopolitan

(A degree in two years—even two years of evenings.)

You can earn an Associate Degree in one of many, many areas here: Management, Marketing, Accounting, Hotel/Restaurant Management, the Secretarial Sciences. You can do it by attending classes as little as two nights a week, while you hold down a full time job. The reward: a better full-time career, probably; a richer, fuller life, certainly. You'll spend your time learning down-to-earth facts and practices, from highly qualified faculty. It won't cost you a fortune—if you're a veteran, or qualify for financial aid, it's even more affordable. Come in or call for full information today, and start two of the best years of your life.

Puzzle #43 Big Deal

By Don Rubin

This week's puzzle may be a real pip (technically, 110 pips), but we're not sure how hard it is to solve.

What we've done, you see, is simply cover up about half of the spades and clubs (no face cards) normally visible on an ordinary deck of playing cards, and placed them on a white background. Don't ask us why; poor diet or lack of sleep, perhaps. Anyway, what we'd like you do do is identify them.

Just fill in the correct numbers in the appropriate spaces.

Answers to Puzzle #41
Yu Said It

It is said that those who study Confucius often find themselves stupid an hour later, but that's neither here nor there. Those of you who attempted "Yu Said It" did rather well.

There were about three correct answers to every incorrect one, but it should be pointed out that many of you don't know your rats from your toads. Such inscrutability: Anyway, here are the answers:

20–bamboo
3–rat
10–dragon
14–horse
6–door or gate
17–man
1–woman
5–thicket
13–moon
19–field
18–feather
21–mountains
12–early
4–good or love
15–rain
7–day
11–wine
16–sun
8–bright
9–toad
2–tree or wood

The people who do know their rats from their toads are: Yolinda Wu, Newton; Wheaton Wilbar, Newton Centre; Liz Ahern, Newton Upper Falls; R. Cook, Chelmsford; Yoko Doyle, Lowell; Frances Steele, Newton; I.T. Lee, Belmont; Toshiko Ikemoto, Arlington; Martin Levene, Newton Centre; Jonathan and Dora Leung, Quincy.

Rules of the Game

From now on, the answers to and winners of any given puzzle will appear TWO WEEKS after the puzzle runs in METROGUIDE. Note that the deadline has also been extended.

1. Names of the first ten contestants with the correct answer will be published in METROGUIDE. All contestants submitting correct answers to any of the puzzles through August 31 will qualify for the Lottery, and a grand prize of dinner for two with all the trimmings. The METRODINNER winner will be announced in the September 14 issue of METROGUIDE.
2. All entries in The Puzzle Contest must be received at the METROGUIDE office, 227 Statler Office Building, Boston, MA 02116, by noon, the Thursday one week after publication.
3. All entries must be accompanied by the name and address of the contestant.
4. Employees of METROGUIDE and their immediate families are not eligible.
5. All entries must be accompanied by a tearsheet of the puzzle page. Whenever possible, the Puzzle answer should be entered on the form provided.
